Mrs. Willie Aldon Foley passed away at the Trinity Lutheran Hospital in Kansas City, Sunday morning, March 19, 1933, at 10:30 o'clock. Her illness developed about three weeks ago, and on March 8th she was taken to the hospital for special treatment. Besides her young husband, she leaves behind two children of tender ago—Thetta Marie, two years old, and Norma Jean, six weeks old.

Mrs. Foley was a daughter of Harry and Addie Smead. At the time of her birth, July 22, 1912, the family resided at Covington, Ky. To her was given the name of Ellalee. In 1929 they came to Missouri. March 2, 1930, in Independence, Mo., she was united in marriage to Willie Aldon Foley. The young couple immediately established their home in the Everett community, and here have since resided.

Besides the loved ones already mentioned, she is survived by two sisters—Mrs. Ezra Terry of Freeman and Miss Dorothy Smead of Kansas City; and one brother—Harry Wayne Smead, of Kansas City. A half-sister resides in Colorado. Other relatives are left to mourn her departure, and a large number of neighbors and friends.

Mrs. Foley was a member of the Presbyterian Church. In this faith she lived and died. She was a devoted companion, and mother. She will be remembered for her quiet deeds of love and sacrifice. To her sorrowing husband and children, and to all her loved ones the hearts of friends go out in a most sincere sympathy.

Funeral services were held at the family home near Everett, Tuesday afternoon, March 21, at 2 o'clock, and burial was made in the Freeman Cemetery. The writer was in charge of the services.

George C. Monroe,
Baptist Preacher.

JUANITA RAE TAYLOR

1943 - 2019

Juanita Rae Taylor, 75, of Independence, MO, entered the presence of her savior Jesus Christ peacefully on Saturday, January 5, 2019.

After an eight-year battle and faithful journey with cancer, her faith is now realized. Juanita was born on October 10, 1943 in Dayton, Ohio to Harry and Orleeta (Sellers) Smead. She married … on her birthday in 1992. Their union was a picture of Christ's love for the church. (Ephesians 5:22-32).

She spent long hours preparing to teach Sunday school over the years to both children and adults. Her greatest passion being that others could come to know her Jesus. She delighted in her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren; babysitting, planning family gatherings and attending athletic and fine arts events whenever possible. Each morning, she arose as early as 4am to pray specifically for each one of them. These prayers and her faith are the legacy she leaves, a gift that will remain long after her home-going. Juanita had a joyful sense of humor, often adding levity to the challenges of life. And, she knew how to play a good prank.

Juanita is preceded in death by both parents; and a brother, Harry Wayne Smead.

She will be remembered fondly by her loving husband, … her children … stepchildren … and all of their spouses. Her memory will also live on in a host of grandchildren, great grandchildren, and children she claimed as her own; all of whom will carry on her faith.

A visitation will be held on Friday, January 11, 2019 from 6-8 p.m. at Speaks Suburban Chapel. Services will be held on Saturday, January 12, 2019 at 10am, also at Speaks Suburban Chapel. Burial will follow at Buckner Hill Cemetery.

Patti Dowling the ideal grandma
Married 50 years, she was devoted to family

BY REBECCA GOODMAN | ENQUIRER STAFF WRITER

ELSMERE - Patti Afterkirk Dowling was the grandmother of a kid's dreams.

She bought season passes to Paramount's Kings Island and Coney Island for her grandchildren, and she regularly took them to the zoo and the Cinergy Children's Museum at Union Terminal.

Since she retired from her job as an administrative assistant for the law firm Taliaferro, Mehling, Shirooni, Carran and Keys two years ago, her days revolved around them.

One of the last things she did was to take her two youngest grandchildren and her great-grandson, Gaven, trick-or-treating on Halloween night.

Then, at 3 a.m. Wednesday, she suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and died later that day at St.

Elizabeth Medical Center in Edgewood. A resident of Elsmere, she was 68.

"She retired to be able to take care of her grandchildren and to help with everything - all the daily stuff with them," her daughter, Gay Stottman of Burlington, said. "She took her littlest grandchildren everywhere."

Such dedication was in character for Mrs. Dowling.

A native of Beaver Lick, Ky., she moved with her family to Elsmere when she was a girl.

She met lawyer Phil Taliaferro when they were both seventh-graders at Lloyd Memorial High School in Erlanger, where she was a majorette. She graduated in 1955 and married James F. Dowling the following year.

Although she was raising a family, when her old friend Taliaferro called her in 1966 to ask her to work in his law office a couple of days a week, she agreed.

For the next 38 years, she was so dedicated to his practice that not even labor pains could keep her from her job.

She worked all day on Good Friday 1968 before strolling into St. Elizabeth Medical Center North to deliver her third child.

"I could have left work, but I was typing a brief that had to be done by Monday," she told The Enquirer in 2002.

Mrs. Dowling played a key role in a number of Taliaferro's big cases, including a $6 million verdict for a woman hurt in a car wreck.

"She was the key link that held it all together," Taliaferro said.

In addition to her daughter, Gay, and her husband of 50 years, survivors include another daughter, Beth Wynn, of Cincinnati; a son, Scott Dowling, of Elsmere; a sister, Joyce Jump, of Elsmere; a brother, Gary Afterkirk, of Williamstown; six grandchildren; and a great-grandson.

Services have been held. Burial was at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Erlanger.

Memorials are suggested to Burlington Baptist Youth Mission Trip, 3031 Washington St., Burlington, Ky. 41005.

Obituary of Price James Hall, ID = 195327

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in The San Bernardino County Sun, San Bernardino, CA, Friday, 29 March 1991, page B4.)

Price Hall, county job developer, dies

The Sun

Price James Hall, a retired job developer with the San Bernardino County Office on Aging and a former manager of the Fontana Chamber of Commerce, died of a heart attack Monday at Loma Linda Community hospital. He was 78.

The Fontana resident helped countless men and women older than 55 find work to supplement their low incomes.

"He was articulate and outgoing," said Kathryn Pichette, director of the Office on Aging. "It was his ability to relate to all kinds of folks that made him able to succeed. . . . It's a loss to all of us."

Hall retired in December after working 10 years with the Office on Aging.

A native of Lincoln, Calif., Hall lived in San Bernardino County 20 years. He was named manager of the Fontana Chamber of Commerce in 1977. Before that, he was the manager of the Chino Valley Chamber of Commerce and the Desert Hot Springs Chamber ofCommerce.

He was a corporal in the Army Air Corps during World War II, a past member of Toastmasters, past president of the 49ers Diehard Club in San Francisco and a publicist for the California Democratic Party in the 1940s and 1950s.

"He was always close to people his whole life," said Price Jay Hall of San Rafael, his son. "He always had a good word for somebody and usually made somebody's day in one way or another."

In addition to his son, he is survived by a sister, Vivian Martin of Sacramento; and one granddaughter.

Hall will be cremated today at Green Acres Memorial Park and Mortuary in Bloomington. His ashes will be interred next to his wife, Valleau, at Eternal Hills Memorial Park in Oceanside.

Obituary of Doris Merlyn (McGee) Watson, ID = 1953531

(Copied from the Huntt Funeral Home website, probably published in The Washington Post on 13 May 2010.)

In Memory of Doris Merlyn Watson
Born: January 15, 1922
Died: May 11, 2010

Doris Merlyn McGee Watson, born January 15, 1922 on a ranch in Wilsall Park, MT. entered into the Kingdom of Light on May 11, 2010, at the age of 88, from the town of Webster, NY. Doris, the oldest child born to Vivian and Harry McGee, looked with constant affection on her younger siblings: Betty Mattson of North Potomac, MD., Bill McGee of Tiburon, CA., and the late Bob McGee of Helena, Mt. Raised by a mother who had excelled as a teacher in a one-room schoolhouse and a father who had specialized in taming wild horses, Doris always loved the written word and the fragrance of fresh air. Coming to faith at the age of 12, then training for two years at the Seattle Pacific College (1940-), Doris devoted her life to serving others in the name of Jesus. In support of her childhood pastor, U.S. Army Chaplain Rev. Leon Hawley, Doris and her mother helped lay the foundation stones for the Far Eastern Gospel Crusade-now known as SEND International and CADENCE International. For four years in Seattle and Minneapolis, Doris labored as the Corresponding Secretary in the mission headquarters, while her mom fulfilled an important role as the Prayer Steward Secretary. Arriving to Washington D.C. in the early 1950's, Doris filled clerical roles in the State and the Navy Departments. Over a ten-cent cup of coffee, Navy Veteran Ray Watson nudged Doris to meet his older brother, Norman, a baker's son who had returned to D.C. after earning the Purple Heart in Italy. The two were soon married at the First Brethren Church of Washington, D.C. (1952), followed by the blessing of three children: Rob Watson of Waldorf, MD., Jeff Watson of Bowie, MD., and Carol Satta of Webster, NY. Over the years Doris' life grew even richer through the blessing of 11 grandchildren, (Jason, Phillip, Jonathan, Hannah, Marianne, Ryan, Steven, Mark, Stephanie, John and Laura), eight great-grandchildren: (Cassidy, Owan, Paul, Jonathan, Natalie, Mikayla, Natalie and Benjamin), and one Great-great-grandchild (Hailey). In addition to her down-to-earth kindness toward anyone in need, Doris served for more than three decades as the Secretary for Brandywine Elementary School. Like a mom and grand mom to those teachers and students, Doris received County-wide honor as the Outstanding Classified Employee of 1980-81. Upon her retirement at the age of 73, her school family threw a wonderful party for her at the Waldorf Jaycees-spelling her name as an acronym on an enormous cake: "Dedicated, Organized, Reliable, Irreplaceable, Sincerely Missed!". In harmony with her work ethic, Doris was the model volunteer at Brandywine Bible, Grace Brethren and Webster Bible Churches. She is now fondly remembered by three generations of children who learned to sing of God's love and to tell of God's grace because of this amazing woman. Doris Watson's life expressed the sentiment of a veteran missionary to India: "We cannot do great things, only small things with great love." Family will receive friends at the Huntt Funeral Home, 3035 Old Washington Road, Waldorf, Maryland on Friday May 14, 2010 from 2-4 and 6-8 PM where services will be held on Saturday, May 15, 2010 at 10 AM. Interment Trinity Memorial Gardens.

The Last Roundup – Remembering Bill McGee

On October 30, 2019, William "Bill" L. McGee rode peacefully to the last roundup from his home in Napa, California.

From 1947-1949, Bill was the head dude wrangler on the Flying M.E. in Washoe Valley, the luxury dude ranch that catered to wealthy Easterners seeking a six-week divorce. Bill went on trail rides with a du Pont and an Astor. He went hunting and drinking with Clark Gable and Ava Gardner. Bill said those years were some of the best of his life. In 2004, Bill and his co-author/wife, Sandra, recaptured those years in "The Divorce Seekers: A Photo Memoir of a Nevada Dude Wrangler".

Negro Admits Slaying Wabash Special Agent

William Keller Shot With Own Gun After Desperate Struggle With Prisoner

Hazel Johnson, 23, Admits Firing Fatal Shot After Golly Morgan, Companion in Thievery, Had Broken Away from Officer.

Hazel Johnson, 23 years old negro, confessed early Saturday morning that he shot and killed William D. Keller, patrolman of the Wabash, Friday evening, while evading arrest. Golly Morgan, also colored, is held with Johnson. Morgan broke from the patrolman and ran before the shooting occurred.

Mr. Keller was shot at 6:30 o'clock Friday evening after he found the two negroes in the Wabash yards at the east end of Sangamon street. He died at 7:20 o'clock in the Wabash hospital after giving a description of the murderer which aided police in identifying Johnson.

Mr. Keller was shot with his own revolver, wrested from him by Johnson in a desperate struggle.

Wife Called

Mr. Keller was breathing when he was taken into the hospital... Mrs. Keller was called to the hospital and was admitted to the room in which her husbband lay. He died as his wife entered the room.

H. I. Doren, assistant yard master of the Wabash, heard the sound of the shots and came running. He could do nothing to aid Mr. Keller.

...

Mrs. Keller collapsed in the room where her husband lay and was carried out. A daughter, Miss Rebecca Keller, was present in the hospital when her father died.

...

William D. Keller was 38 years old. He was born on a farm six and one-half miles southeast of Macon, and was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Keller. He engaged in farming until about five years ago, when he came to Decatur. He worked a few months in the Mueller Co.'s plant and then entered the employ of the Wabash as a patrolman under Benjamin G. Volentine, special agent of the railroad.

Capable Employe

Mr. Keller was known as a capable, conscientious employe. He was a man of unusually large physical, being about six feet tall and broad-shouldered. His duties were patrolling the yards of the Wabash in plain clothes and riding on freight trains to guard them from thieves.

Mr. Keller had ridden one train into Ohio Thursday, and had returned to Decatur Friday morning. He made a trip to Oakley during the day and arrested two men for stealing coal. After the arrests, Mr. Keller returned home and passed most of Friday afternoon resting. He started to work again at 5:20 o'clock, having received a tip from a man named Williams regarding the identity of negroes stealing brass from Wabash engines.

Leaves Wife, Two Children

Mr. Keller started a search for the negroes and came upon them in the yards in the act of stealing.

Mr. Keller was widely known in Decatur, the county and elsewhere.
He was married in Decatur in 1914 to Miss Gladys McGee. He sought to enlist in the army during the World war, but was persuaded to remain on the farm near Macon and support his wife and their first child.

Donald King, 73, Managed Tisbury Harbor

Donald J. King, the gregarious, salty former longtime Vineyard Haven harbor master and shellfish constable, died on Wednesday, Nov. 10, at his home in Tisbury after a period of failing health.

He was born in Vineyard Haven on March 5, 1931, the son of Manuel and Mary (DeCosta) King.

He began working for the local Steamship Authority in 1947. His career was briefly interrupted by a two-year tour of duty in the U.S. Army during the Korean War. He returned to the Steamship Authority and retired in 1971 as purser.

Donald loved the Island. He felt the best way to demonstrate this was through public service. Following in the footsteps of his brothers, William "Billy" King, former chief of police of Vineyard Haven and Manuel Canha, former head of the highway department, he realized his dream when he was able to fill the the vacant shellfish constable position in Vineyard Haven. That same year he became assistant Vineyard Haven harbor master under Tom Hale. When Tom retired in the late 1970s, Donald became both full-time harbor master and shellfish constable.

Donald possessed an affinity for the sea and was able to chart his course whether through calm or stormy seas. He was known by the transient boating public as the ambassador of good will to those who used his harbor.

In an interview with the Vineyard Gazette in 1987 he remarked that unlike other harbor masters in the region, he never felt the need to carry a gun, because his best line of defense was kindness.

"You hit them hard with kindness and it knocks them off guard. They don't know how to handle it," he said.

He had a fondness for calling sailors who landed at his port Cappy, short for captain.

"He has a pleasant word for everyone. It doesn't matter what size boat you have, the short, jovial harbor master with the bulging waistline is everyone's pal," wrote a columnist in a Connecticut newspaper.

Mr. King is survived by his wife of 50 years, … and his four children, … of Rockland; … of Jacksonville, Fla.; … of Vineyard Haven; … of Vineyard Haven and four grandchildren. He was the brother of … of Vineyard Haven, … of Rhode Island and … of Berryville, Ariz., and had numerous nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by four sisters, Elizabeth (Betty) Furtado, Hilda Duarte, Katherine Barry and Patricia Mills-Fulsom; two half-brothers and his adopted brother, David Munn.

A graveside service was held on Thursday, Nov. 18, in Oak Grove Cemetery in Vineyard Haven, officiated by the Rev. Michael Nagle. Military honors were provided by the veterans of Martha's Vineyard. Donations may be made in his memory to Hospice of Martha's Vineyard, P.O. Box 2549, Oak Bluffs, MA 02557. Arrangements are under the care of the Chapman, Cole and Gleason Funeral Home. Obituary of Dorothy (Kupper) Martin, ID = 1954222

Dorothy Kupper Martin

LOUISVILLE - Dorothy Kupper Martin, 91, passed away peacefully on February 3, 2020 at Norton Brownsboro Hospital surrounded by the love of her family.

Born in Louisville, Kentucky on May 16, 1928 to Edward Kupper and Matilda Kamer Kupper, she was a graduate of Holy Rosary Academy and attended Nazareth College.

She was a lifelong Catholic and her great comfort throughout life was her relationship with and deep devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary, whom she would often say was her best friend.

Her faith was grounded in daily prayer and each day began with her candles beautifully glowing before the Blessed Mother as she prayed her rosary.

Her values were reflected in the way she lived. If you knew Dottie, you also knew her kind and extraordinarily generous spirit. Her door and her heart were always open, helping others in small and large ways whenever she could. She was a steadfast champion for the underdog and a cheerleader for all, knowing just when and how to lift spirits. She was wholeheartedly dedicated as a volunteer for over 25 years at local nursing homes, administering the Eucharist, bringing food and flowers and offering her companionship and compassion. She was the founder of the Bereavement Committee at Epiphany Catholic Church where she also served many years as Eucharistic Minister.

She made friends everywhere she went. She truly valued her old and treasured friendships, as well as cherishing her new and dear friends at Miralea. She loved sharing laughter, fun and good times with all her friends over a glass of her favorite wine. As an avid bridge player she was always up for a good game. Her many close friends in the religious community were a constant source of inspiration and strength to her, and she couldn’t wait each year to host her special Christmas party for the Sisters. She enjoyed a true passion for travel and held dear each and every moment of special trips with her husband, Glenn, reminiscing often about these and many memorable vacations taken together with her family.

More than anything, she especially loved being Nandy to her grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She was their biggest supporter, truest friend and confidant, and filled their world with a special and enduring love. She exemplified the best of humanity and beauty in this world, and her legacy of love and faith will live forever in the lives of all those she touched.

In addition to her parents she is also preceded in death by her devoted and loving husband of 58 years, Glenn E. Martin; daughter-in-law Jenny Madden-Martin; siblings Ed Kupper and Irvin Kupper, Rita Fisher, Patsy Shaw and sister-in-law, Doris Kupper.

Her world revolved around her family and she is survived by her children, … her grandchildren … her great-grandchildren, … and sisters-in-law …

Visitation will be on Monday, February 10, 2020, from 10 a.m. until 12 noon in the gathering space of Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church, 508 Breckenridge Lane, Louisville, Kentucky. A Mass of Christian Burial will follow at 12:00 noon in the Church. A celebration will be held immediately following Mass at Miralea in the Masonic Home Community, 320 Joe Conway Circle. Burial will take place in Calvary Cemetery at 3 p.m.

Obituary of Byron Donald 'B.D.' Martin, ID = 1954223

(Copied from the KY Post, 9 July 1997, online.)

Byron D. Martin, served Grant as sheriff, judge-executive

Byron D. "B.D." Martin, a former Grant County judge-executive and sheriff, died Tuesday at Columbia Hospital in Lexington.

Mr. Martin, 72, of Dry Ridge, was sheriff from the late 1960s to the early 1970s. He then began a string of election victories as judge-executive that kept him in office through the late 1980s.

And when Mr. Martin won, he often won big.

"I'm confident," Mr. Martin said in a 1981 Kentucky Post interview. "I'll get the silent vote, which is the majority, while they'll get the anti-vote, which always makes 10 times the noise of the silent vote."

In 1988, Mr. Martin was honored by the Senior Community Services Employment Project of Northern Kentucky for his efforts to hire older workers.

The judge-executive was hard-working and innovative.

He once helped workers manage a junk-car cleanup program where the county hauled away junk cars for free and then sold the scrap metal to raise money for the fire department.

And, in 1977, he helped county workers clear snow from the back roads to enable residents to get to work and home.

The judge said he simply wanted "to help wherever possible."

Mr. Martin was proud of his fiscal court's work to improve roads, public transportation and ambulance services.

The judge-executive also obtained federal grants to build a new health building and issued revenue bonds to attract new companies to the county.

Mr. Martin was once criticized by a political opponent for not attracting more businesses to Grant County. But he brushed aside the criticism by saying he didn't want any companies that could harm the environment.

"We want good, clean manufacturing firms," Mr. Martin said years ago.

Mr. Martin also served as a deputy sheriff. He was a member and elder emeritus of Dry Ridge Christian Church and Dry Ridge Lodge No. 849. He was also a member of Shriners, Indra Consistory of Covington, the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, and was a Noble of the Mystic Shrine on Oleika Temple of Lexington.

Survivors include his wife, Helen H. Martin; sons, Dennis Martin of Lexington and Don Martin of Dry Ridge; a brother, Glenn E. Martin of Louisville; and five grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at Eckler-Hudson Funeral Home, Dry Ridge. Visitation will be from 4 to 9 p.m. today at the funeral home. Burial will be in Hill Crest Cemetery, Dry Ridge. Memorials are suggested to the charity of the donor's choice.

Obituary of Melvin Edgar Baker, ID = 1954262

BAKER, MELVIN E., 75, of Minneola, Florida, passed away Saturday, December 3, 2011, at Kindred Hospital in Tampa, after a long and difficult illness following lung surgery.

He was born on July 12, 1936, in York, PA, to the late Guy and Erma (Murphy) Baker. A graduate of the University of Miami (FL), Class of 1959, he received his Bachelor in Music Education and was the Drum Major in the Band of the Hour Marching Band. Mr. Baker went on to Masters level courses and professional certifications to grow and maintain his mastery with music education.

His distinguished career with the Dade County School System includes Band Director roles at Cutler Ridge Junior High School, Miami Southwest Senior High School, and Miami Southridge Senior High School. Mr. Baker transitioned to the role of Activities Director later in his education career, offering him a new outlet for his energy, creativity, and gifted planning abilities.

His passion for his art offered Mr. Baker the opportunity to participate fully and completely in the field of music education, including school band performances at such prestigious venues as the Junior Orange Bowl Parade, King Orange Bowl Parade, Miami Dolphins Half-times, Washington D.C. parade festivals, Marching Bands of America competitions, and distinguished community focused events. Whether leading Music Education or Student Activities programs, Mr. Baker engaged and energized all who interacted with him and his passion for education. He is well known for attracting large numbers of music students to his band programs. During his time as an award winning band director, he developed three of the largest band programs in the Southeast. By the time he left Cutler Ridge Junior, there were over 450 students in the program. When he left Miami Southwest, there were over 375 students in the program. When he left the music field at Miami Southridge, there were over 300 students in a very productive band program. In the 17 years as High School Band Director, his Marching Bands were awarded Superior ratings for the last 16 years. In the same 17 years, his Symphonic Bands were awarded District Superior ratings for the last 16 years. Further, Symphonic Bands from Southwest and Southridge went on to State Festival and earned Superior ratings. Mr. Baker was a sought-after band clinician and was often called to serve as guest band conductor at various District and County Festivals.

In his 37 year career, Mr. Baker was very active in his professional community. He was the President of the Dade County Music Educators Association for two years and was a member of the Florida Bandmasters Association, where he served as District Chairman, State President, and Marching, Concert, Solo and Ensemble Adjudicator. Additionally, he was an active member or the Florida Music Educators Association where he was the President-elect (1981-1982). He was a member of the Music Educators National Conference and Dade County Activities Directors Association, where he served as Secretary and President. Mr. Baker was also an active member of Phi Beta Mu, the Band Directors Fraternity, and the American School Band Directors Association.

Mr. Baker was recognized by his peers, including Teacher of the Year Award at Miami Southridge, Sallie Mae Teacher Tribute Award, and student awards and scholarships named in his honor. He was honored in 2004 with his introduction into the University of Miami Band of the Hour Hall of Fame. In 2011, he was recognized with a Lifetime Achievement Award, presented by the Miami Wind Symphony, for his “37 years of dedicated service as an award-winning band director and administrator in the Miami-Dade County School System.”

A loving husband, father, provider, teacher, mentor, leader, friend and faithful servant; he was a member of the First United Methodist Church in Clermont. He is predeceased by his parents and one brother, Donald. Survivors include his loving and devoted wife of fifty-one years… two sons… and four grandchildren.

Obituary of Beverly Jene (Garrick) Bobbitt, ID = 1955227

(Partially copied from the website of the McDougal Funeral Home, Salt Lake City, UT.)

Beverly Jean Garrick Bobbitt
March 16, 1933 - April 12, 2021

Beverly J. Bobbitt returned to the loving arms of her Heavenly Father on April 12, 2021 at the age of 88. She passed peacefully at home, with her mind and feistiness intact. She was surrounded by her loving family and her beloved dog, Billy by her side.

Beverly was born March 16, 1933 in Ridgeway, Colorado. Daughter of Robert James Garrick and Florence Elmina (Long) Garrick.

Beverly started working at a young age to help provide for her family. She later started a career and retired from OC Tanner. Beverly married Larry Bobbitt on May 6, 1955. They enjoyed many years of traveling, camping, fishing with family and friends, and loving their fur-babies.

She was a social butterfly and could talk to anybody. She was never afraid to ask anyone a question, and most importantly was always able to make someone laugh or smile. She made long lasting friendships with her bowling leaguers, fellow Bingo players, Wendover goers, co-workers from OC Tanner, as well as the Harman Senior Recreation Center where she sang with the Notable Angels choir. They performed at functions for seniors and had a Christmas special every year, much to her family's enjoyment. Aunt Bev was always up for an adventure. She spent some of the best times of her life being very active. She never missed supporting her family and friends in their endeavors and never passed up an opportunity to go to a family birthday party, BBQ, wedding, graduation, baby shower, concert, or her nephew's hockey games. If she was not on the go, she liked to watch movies, old and new, sitcoms and gameshows, and she would sing to anyone who was listening and was always able to cheer someone up.

Beverly was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and made many friends in her ward and always looked forward to their visits.

She was preceded in death by her parents; siblings; and husband. She is survived by nieces and nephews… as well as many great-nieces and nephews; and even a few great-great nieces and nephews. Beverly and Larry didn't have children of their own, so they spent a lot of time with their nieces and nephews and Aunt Bev became a second mother and grandmother to her family.

We would like to extend our deepest thanks to Aspire Homecare, especially… caregivers… the friends that surrounded Beverly from her neighborhood, as well as the many other friends and family that helped care for our loving aunt.

She was loved by so many.

Don't grieve for me, for now I'm free.
I'm following the path God laid for me.
I took his hand when I heard him call.
I turned my back and left it all.
I could not stay another day,
To laugh, to love, to work, or play.
Tasks left undone must stay that way,
I found that peace at the start of day.
If my parting has left a void,
then fill it with remembered joy.
A friendship shared, a laugh, a kiss,
As yes, these things I too will miss.
Be not burdened with times of sorrow.
My life's been full, I savored much.
Good friends, good times, my loved one's touch.
Perhaps my time seemed all too brief.
Don't lengthen it now with undue grief.
Lift up your hearts and share with me.
God wanted me now, He set me free.

"Love is all there is" was one of Beverly's favorite quotes and she wanted everyone to know she loved them very much.

You will be greatly missed, Aunt Bevy. We love you forever and always.

A viewing will be held at McDougal Funeral Home, 4330 South Redwood Road, Salt Lake City, UT 84123 on Monday, April 19th from 10:00am-11:45am. Followed by graveside services at Valley View Memorial Park at 12:00pm.

Obituary

Nannie Elizabeth Ford was born in Owenton county, Kentucky August 28, 1857.

She died at Lawrence, Kansas, January 15, 1918, of heart failure. Age 60 years, 4 months, 18 days. She came to Kansas with her parents when but a small child, residing near Melvern, Kansas.

Fourteen years ago she moved to Kansas City to be near her children.

She united with the Baptist church at Melvern when sixteen years of age.

She was married to J. M. Connely September 26, 1875. To this union four children were born, three sons and one daughter, one son dying in infancy.

She was a woman of sterling character and won the respect and good will of all who knew her.

She leaves to mour her loss the husband, J. M. Connely and two sons, Allie Connely and Bert Connely, all of Kansas City, and one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Howard of Lawrence, Kansas. Besides these relatives, she leaves four grandchildren, four brothers and three sisters.

The funeral services were held January 17 at 10 o'clock at the home of her sister, Mrs. Joe Williamson, 1125 New Jersey street, Lawrence, Kansas.

The services were conducted by Rev. Young of the Evangelical church.
Burial was in Oak Hill cemetery.

We miss thee from our home, dear mother,
Thy fond and earnest care;
We miss the sunshine of thy face,
We miss thee everywhere.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
Thy soul is safe in heaven.

(Note by RRC: I suspect "mour" should be mourn.

I don't know who Nannie's parents were. I have been unable to find a record for a Ford born on 28 Aug. 1857 in Owen Co., KY. There was an N. Ford, born on 7 Aug. 1857 in Owen Co., KY, daughter of H. H. Ford & E. Sandford. Based on other sources, H. H. Ford was probably Harbin H. Ford & his wife was probably Evaline Sandford (or Sanford). If you have information on Nannie's birth date and/or her parents' names, please share that with me.

I have been unable to find a Ford/Connely marriage on 26 September 1875. A John M. Connely, age 28, did marry on 16 September 1874, at H. Beauchamp's in Osage Co., KS, to Nannie Beauchamp, age 17.)

Obituary of Norma Marion (Lynch) Babbitt, ID = 1956212

(Partially copied from an obit found online at obituaries.ljworld.com; obit was published by the Lawrence Journal-World on Dec. 15, 2020.)

Norma Babbitt

Norma Marion Lynch Babbitt, 98, died Friday, December 11, 2020 at her home. She was born on November 4, 1922 in rural Douglas County, KS, the second child and only daughter to Albert and Helen Lynch (nee Howard). Norma lived in Douglas County her entire life. As a child she attended Oakridge school, Pleasant Valley school and Fairview Methodist Church. She loved playing baseball and all things competitive with her older brother Howard and their friends. In 1937, her mother was expecting a third baby and went into labor in the middle of a snowstorm. The doctor's car got stuck in a snow drift. While Norma's father went off to retrieve the doctor, Norma, age 14, delivered her baby brother, Clarence "Tod", herself. After the doctor and her father arrived, Norma made breakfast for everyone.

Norma graduated from Lawrence's Liberty Memorial High School in 1941. A year later, she married her high school sweetheart, Dale Babbitt, on January 15, 1942. They built a family and a life of farming. Norma and Dale had a daughter, … in 1943, and a second daughter, … in 1945. The budding family lived in a small house on their first farm, situated along the Wakarusa River, Northwest of Clinton. What it lacked in running water, it made up for in character and good soil. In 1957, Norma and Dale had their third and final child, a son named …

Norma worked with Dale plowing, planting, harvesting, fixing equipment, cooking too much food, and keeping detailed records of everything that happened on their farm. She was a devoted member of Clinton Presbyterian Church, and played softball nearly as religiously. The Clinton Girl's Class B softball team went to the State tournament multiple times with Norma playing first base and second base. The team often placed in the top three and won the State tournament twice. Norma served as church treasurer for many years, organized the annual Turkey Supper for 25 years, attended the Ladies Circle group, and served as an elder.

Norma was the first woman to serve on the Douglas County Farm Service Agency Board. She was also an active 4-H leader during her children's youth. While Norma was known for her in-charge, all-work, no-nonsense attitude, she harbored a soft spot for 4-H, being outside, custard pie, Royals baseball, blue jeans, and her family.

When the Flood Control Act of 1962 authorized the damming of the Wakarusa River and subsequent construction of Clinton Lake, Norma and Dale had to sell their little house in the bottom and all of their surrounding farmland. They moved up the hill to a two-story white farmhouse west of Clinton. It had a large porch and the luxury of indoor plumbing. However, seeing the boats and trailers drive by on their way to the new lake was like salt on a wound to Norma and Dale, so they relocated to a farm in Southwest Douglas county, where they lived out the rest of their lives.

After 56 years of marriage, Dale died in 1999. Norma farmed as long as her body would let her, and then a bit after that. In her later years, Norma was still quick to speak her mind, but equally quick to squeeze the oxygen out of you in a bear hug. She enjoyed watching The Price is Right, Jeopardy, anything with John Wayne, reading the newspaper, driving around in her gator, mowing and spoiling her grandchildren with cookies and cream ice cream.

Norma died at home with her family. She told her descendants to behave when she was gone. At peace with the life she had lived and knowing her time on Earth was up, Norma was eager to join her Lord, Dale, her parents, and brothers Howard and Tod, as well as many other family and friends.

Norma is survived by her children, … of Perry, … of Lawrence, and … of Overbrook, grandchildren … nineteen great grandchildren, and four great-great grandchildren. She is also survived by farming partners who became family, the children and grandchildren of the late Marvin and Barbie Cox in Wallace County, KS. Obituaries of Harold Richland Connley, ID = 195a11

(Copied from the Kentucky Post, Cincinnati, OH, Friday, 13 July 2007, online.)

HAROLD R. CONNLEY, BIBLICAL SCHOLAR

Harold R. Connley was a self-taught Bible scholar who passed his knowledge on as a Sunday school teacher for more than 70 years. When it came to the New Testament, he knew it from A to Z.

And it showed.

At a lecture at Williamstown Baptist Church, a theology professor asked the audience a Bible trivia question that he didn't expect an answer for.

"Who built the temple in Jerusalem that stood during the time of Christ?" the professor said.

Dr. William Kendall Rich, who attended the lecture along with Mr. Connley, said that everybody in the church was stumped - except Mr. Connley. He correctly answered: "Zerubbabel."

"He really put the professor in his place," said Rich. "He was at a loss for words. It was one of the most impressive things I ever saw."

Rich said faith was the cornerstone of life for Mr. Connley, who died Thursday at the age of 91.

Over the course of his life, he attended Williamstown Christian, Dry Ridge Christian and Williamstown Baptist Churches.

Mr. Connley's knowledge wasn't limited to the Bible. He graduated as valedictorian of Williamstown High School at the age of 16.

He lived on the same Williamstown farm his entire life, which made him the town's unofficial historian.

"He had a mind that was incredible," said Rich. "If you needed to know something historical, he could tell you. You could question him on it, but if you looked it up, he was always right."

Rich's aunt, Betty Rich, married Mr. Connley in the 1970s. Though the couple was divorced after 20 years of marriage, William Rich remained friends with Mr. Connley, bringing him books to read until very recently.

"I couldn't bring them fast enough," said Rich. "His eyesight never failed him in his older age. He could read faster than I could."

In 1988, Mr. Connley was named the Outstanding Farmer of the Year by the Grant County Farm Bureau.

He served stints as the organization's president and treasurer while operating his dairy farm.

Mr. Connley also worked as an official National Weather Service observer for more than 35 years.

Outside his home, he had a weather station complete with wind, rain, humidity and temperature gauges. He recorded his findings daily and reported them to the National Weather Service.

Mr. Connley was diagnosed with prostate cancer in 2005. Doctors told him that he only had a few months to live.

"That just made him mad," Rich recalled. "He went home and got involved with holistic medicine and took that on as his next challenge.

"When the first year was up, he wanted me to make sure to tell that doctor that he was wrong. He was pretty cool."

There are no immediate survivors.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday at Elliston-Stanley Funeral Home, Williamstown. Visitation will begin there at noon Monday. Burial will be in Hill Crest Cemetery, Dry Ridge.

Memorials are suggested to Williamstown Baptist Church, 214 N. Main St., Williamstown, Ky. 41097.

KENNETH CONNELY, GRANT COUNTY HISTORIAN

Kenneth Harold Connely, Grant County historian and a leader in tobacco farming, died at 4:44 a.m. Thursday at the Grant County Hospital. He was 77.

Mr. Connely raised tobacco on a farm that had been in his family for more than 100 years. His interest in Grant County history was nurtured growing up in the Civil War-era farmhouse, said his wife, Leona Connely.

"He was always interested in the preservation of history, the preservation of our heritage," she said.

He traced his family's roots and helped others trace their ancestry. He was a member of the Kentucky Genealogical Society and the Grant County and Gallatin County Historical Societies and the Grant County Preservation Board.

"He could sit down and rattle off people's ancestors," said his daughter, Jacqueline "Jackie Jo" Courts of Elliston.

"He had a wonderful memory. He lived history."

One of his ongoing projects was a move to clean up the county's Civil War-era cemeteries.

He was a member of the Grant County Kentucky Bicentennial Committee and was active in plans to restore an historic building in Crittenden into a community building.

He was a member of Ten Mile Baptist Church and a former Sunday School teacher. He was a deacon in the Baptist church for 50 years.

Mr. Connely became a leader in the local tobacco industry. He was a retired tobacco grader for the government and for 15 years had traveled to Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and Tennessee grading tobacco crops.

He was a director with the Grant County Farm Bureau, where he was past president. He was a director with the Kentucky Burley Tobacco Pool Association, a member of the Grant County Cattleman's Association, and a supervisor for the Grant County Soil Conservation District.

He was a member and past president of Captain William Arnold Sons of American Revolution Society, and a former member of the Grant County 4-H Council.

He also was an avid supporter of the Grant County Fair.

He developed heart trouble several years ago.

Besides his wife and daughter, survivors include a sister, Bernice Waller of Bruce, Miss.; and three grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday at Hamilton-Stanley Funeral Home, Verona. Visitation will be from 4 to 9 p.m. Sunday at the funeral home. Burial will be in Napoleon Cemetery, Gallatin County. Memorials are suggested to Elliston Baptist Church or Grant County Preservation Board.

Ernest Dance, 75, farmer

Managed Ky. tobacco warehouses as well as family business

Ernest Dance, a Walton farmer and businessman who catered to Northern Kentucky farmers for more than 50 years, died Wednesday afternoon in Booth Memorial Hospital, Florence.

He was 75.

A native of Grant County, Ky., Mr. Dance moved in 1946 to Walton, where he and his brother, Joe, had been operating Dance Brothers Custom Farming and Trucking Co. The business provided harvesting, fertilizing and hauling services for local farmers.

"He stayed in touch with the small farmer" in Boone, Kenton and Pendleton counties, said his son, Edward L. Dance, of Frankfort. "He stayed active in the business until his heart attack about five years ago."

The company was dissolved about two years ago, after Joe Dance's death.

While running the family business, Ernest Dance operated his own small farm at Walton and was general manager for the former Erlanger Tobacco Warehouse.

At the time of his death, he was vice president for the Kenton-Boone Tobacco Warehouse, at Florence.

"We had a lot of machinery, and did a lot of custom work for other people," said Edward Dance, who had worked with his father and his uncle. "Plowing, baling, cutting hay. Hauling hay from Michigan to dairy and horse farms in Kentucky . . . We didn't do large-scale farming ourselves."

On his own farm, Mr. Dance raised tobacco and cattle.

In later years, "his major interest was his grandkids," said his son.

In addition to his son, Mr. Dance leaves his wife, Dartha L. Dance; a brother, Ira William Dance, Indianapolis; and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Chambers and Grubbs Funeral Home, Walton. Burial will be in Hillcrest Cemetery, Dry Ridge.

Visitation will be held from 5 to 9 p.m. today at the funeral home.

Death notice for John C. Riley, ID =196

It becomes our painful task this week to record the death of Mr. John C. Riley, which occurred at his residence near Union on the afternoon of the 24th inst. Mr. Riley had out lived the time allotted to man some year or two, and had at all times during life been a remarkably healthy man. He was and had been for many years a member of the Big Bone Baptist church, of which |society he was a leading member, and the community in which he lived and was best known regarded him in the light of a most worthy gentleman in whose integrity all had unbounded confidence. In the death of Mr. Riley the county loses an honorable and upright citizen; the church, a faithful and useful member; the family a kind and indulgent father.

Death notice & burial notice for Roger T. Clements, ID = 1961

R. T. Clements, one of Unions pioneer citizens and merchants, died at his home, Sunday morning at 10:15 o'clock. Mr. Clements health had been in precarious condition for sometime and still the sudden and unexpected ending of his life, Sunday, was a shock that cast gloom over the entire village. Mr. Clements was a man of strong convictions, loyal to his friends and not withstanding, he was badly crippled, his energy and industry enabled him to overcome difficulties that most men would have been bowed down by. He has sold goods here for about 40 years, and was well known by every one in this part of the county. Twenty-two years of acquaintance and friendship with Mr. Clements leads us to say that Union never had a more public spirited citizen than he, or a citizen that would help a poor man quicker and longer. After brief service of song and prayer at the residence at two p.m., Monday, the remains were followed by a large concourse to their last resting place in the cemetery east of town. The funeral was in charge of McAlpin & Blanton, funeral directors, of Erlanger.

Mr. R. T. Clements, for many years a merchant in Union, committed suicide in his store at an early hour, last Sunday morning by placing the muzzle of a shot gun against his breast and then discharging the gun. He lived an hour or more after the shot was fired. The suicide is attributed to despondency resulting from ill health.

After a brief heroic struggle... Charles L. Bannister surrendered his life... last Wednesday... the remains... in the cemetery east of Union... his devoted wife... and also R. T. Clements and family, whose home was his home,...

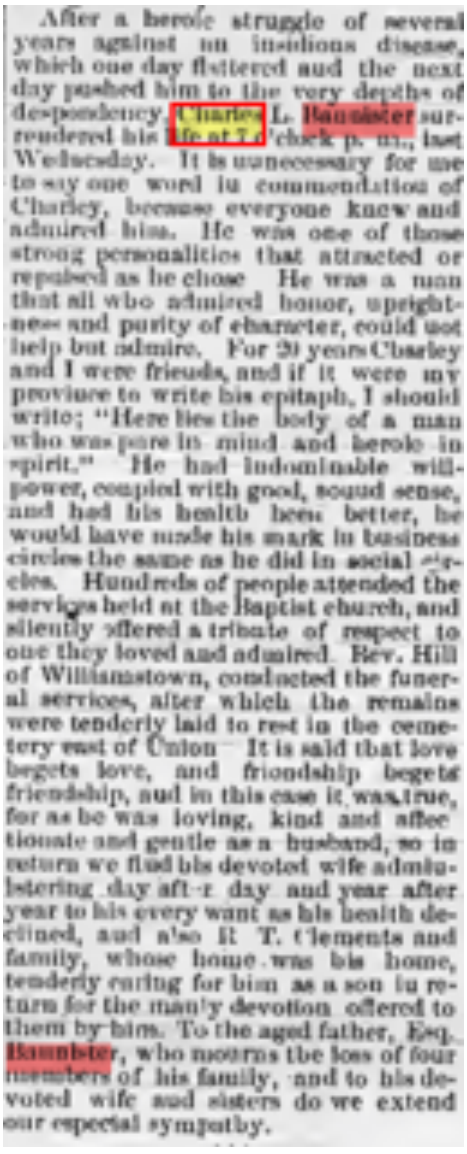
(Copy of a photocopy of the original article in The Boone County Recorder, Burlington, KY, 1895; obit is online at Fultonhistory.com.)



After a heroic struggle of several years against an insidious disease, which one day flattered and the next day pushed him to the very depths of despondency, Charles L. Bannister surrendered his life at 7 o'clock p. m., last Wednesday. It is unnecessary for me to say one word in commendation of Charley, because everyone knew and admired him. He was one of those strong personalities that attracted or repulsed as he chose. He was a man that all who admired honor, uprightness and purity of character, could not help but admire. For 20 years Charley and I were friends, and if it were my province to write his epitaph, I should write; "Here lies the body of a man who was pure in mind and heroic in spirit." He had indomitable willpower, coupled with good, sound sense, and had his health been better, he would have made his mark in business circles the same as he did in social circles. Hundreds of people attended the services held at the Baptist church, and silently offered a tribute of respect to one they loved and admired. Rev. Hill of Williamstown, conducted the funeral services, after which the remains were tenderly laid to rest in the cemetery east of Union. It is said that love begets love, and friendship begets friendship, and in this case it was true, for as he was loving, kind and affectionate and gentle as a husband, so in return we find his devoted wife administering day after day and year after year to his every want as his health declined, and also R. T. Clements and family, whose home was his home, tenderly caring for him as a son in return for the manly devotion offered to them by him. To the aged father, Esq. Bannister, who mourns the loss of four members of his family, and to his devoted wife and sisters do we extend our especial sympathy.

Lives remembered

Raymond
Feuss

Specialty plants
many yards here

By Jay Pope
Enquirer staff writer

As gardens across the area awake to spring, many bloom with perennials Raymond C. Feuss cultivated and sold yearsa go.

Among the day lilies, vegetables and other plants Mr. Feuss grew at Twin Pine Gardens, a business based out of his Taylor Mill home, the hostas earned him the most renown. The hosta, also known as the plantain lily, is a leafy, often colorful shade plant known for its endurance. “They were his specialty.” said Janet Samuel Feuss, his wife and partner in the business.

The Feuss' garden covered their 3/4-acre property and surrounded their home. Visitors dubbed it “the Garden of Eden."

Mr. Feuss died April 7 at St. Elizabeth Hospice, Covington, at age 74.

Born in Latonia, Mr. Feuss graduated from Holmes High School in 1950.

In 1952, he started with Cincinnati Bell Telephone Co. and continued working as an installer for 30 years, until his retirement.

Though he enjoyed his work, gardening was his passion.

“He always had a small garden and grew vegetables, but after he retired the garden just got bigger and bigger,“ said Mrs. Feuss. “He had a green thumb - it was in his genes."

Mr. Feuss was adept at taking apart and dividing plants, said his wife. With this skill came humility - “he never wanted people to make a big fuss.”

Twin Pine Gardens was successful for a number of years and the Feusses would often spot their plants in yards they drove past.

Mr. Feuss was diagnosed with lung cancer and was resolute in beating it. But when it began to subside, doctors found a brain tumor - then the lung cancer returned.

“He was determined to live.” said Mrs. Feuss about her husband's 10-year battle with cancer.

As his health began to fail, so did the upkeep of his garden.

'It’s hard work.” said Mrs Feuss. “It takes a man to do that kind of work.”

Mr. Feuss wasn‘t able to work in his garden over the last four years. Little has bloomed this year, noted Mrs. Feuss, except for the hostas.

Besides his wife, survivors include son, Paul S. Feuss of Union; daughters, Linda Stahl of Erlanger, Laurie Baker of Taylor Mill and Suzanne Bowling of Taylor Mill; sisters, Ruby Robertson of Erlanger and Noriss Kelley of Lutz, Fla.; six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Services have been held.

Burial was in Floral Hills Memorial Gardens, Taylor Mill.

Obituary of Edward 'Eddie' Ryle, ID = 19623

EDDIE RYLE

Edie Ryle, born October 20, 1858, in Boone county, was the last or a family or 23 children, 17 full brothers and sisters and six half brothers and sisters.

Hhis father's name was David Ryle, whose first wife Betty Stephens of East Bend, Boone county, Ky., and whose second wife was Minerva Nelson, of Erlanger, Kenton county, Ky.

The deceased was next to the youngest son of this large family, only two of the first group of children lived to be grown and married, and to quite an old age. Twelve of the last group lived to be grown and ten of them married, lived to a good old age and left families. Many of their descendants are here today.

The Ryle family was one of the pioneer families of Boone county, Ky., having emigrated five brothers and one sister from N. C., in the days of Daniel Boone in 1770 and settled first near Petersburg, Ky., in Boone county and then from the North Bend of the Ohio river to East Bend opposite Rising Sun, Indiana.

One brother, the eldest, brought his wife with him from North Carolina. The others married after moving to Kentucky. They were a highly respected Scotch Irish family were devoted to their own families and relatives. They owned large farms and many contented slaves. The family was very hostiably as was the custom among the early Kentucky settelers. They leave descendants, some or the most respected citizens of Kentucky.

Eddie Ryle married Annie E. Clements, daughter of Richard Clements and Margaret Riley Clements, Aug. 11, 1882. To this union were born three children, two girls and one boy, Edna Eugenia, who died May 5th, 1905, in Latonia, Ky. and buried in Highland cemetery. An infant who died at East Bend and Courtney Cowen, born April 28, 1888, who with his wife Helen Manwaring Ryle, and three girls and one boy, are here today. The names of the children are Thelma, Thomas, Virginia Lee, Edna Elizabeth and Robert Clements. Eddie Ryle joined Big Bone Baptist church in Boone county, was baptized in 1883 under the pastorate of Rev. James A. Kirtley. Transferred membership to First Baptist church of Erlanger, pastorate of O. M. Huey, 1894, then to the First Baptist church of Latonia, Ky., about 1902, under the pastorate of the Rev. C. A. Earl, and was a member of the church at death.

The deceased began working for the L. & N. Road in 1897, and was a faithful and loyal employee for 37 years. He moved to Latonia in 1899 and has lived at the present residence since 1908. Respected and loved by family and friend. He was of a retiring disposition. He was stricken with the paralytic stroke Feb. 26, 1934 and passed into a blessed peaceful rest March 9th, 1934, at the age of 75 years, 4 months and 17 days. The community has lost a good citizen and the family a loving, kindly, helpful father. Eddie Ryle and his wife Annie E. Clements Ryle, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary August 11, 1932, having at the time of his death lived together 51 years, 6 months and 29 days. The elder members of the family were Revolutionary and Confederate soldiers -strong in political Democratic faith and Universalists in religious belief.

Annie E. Clements, Ryle.

Ex-UC dean Harold R. Rice
Art professor was a longtime devotee of amateur magic

Harold R. Rice, dean emeritus of the University of Cincinnati College of Design, Architecture and Art, who developed a magic hobby stemming from a comic book coupon, died Friday at Bethesda Scarlet Oaks Retirement Center, Clifton. He was 75.

After 10 years as dean at UC, Dr. Rice retired in 1973 to resume teaching there. A professor of design, art and education, he was coordinator of art education graduate studies from 1973 to 1978, when he became dean emeritus. He resided in Clifton.

As an amateur magician, he specialized in silk scarf tricks. Dr. Rice told an interviewer in 1964 that when he was about 12, he sent in a coupon from the back of a comic book to become a magician.

"Then, I tended toward the silk handkerchief side of magic because l could paint on the silk and work up good endings to acts that way," he said.

The magic came in handy when he worked his way through UC undergraduate studies by giving shows. After World War II, under the auspices of the American Red Cross, he taught magic to wounded men of the armed services in Alabama hospitals as a form of therapy for their hands.

He wrote numerous texts on silk tricks. They were hand-lettered and hand-illustrated, "the point being that magic knows no language - that a Chinese magician can pick up this book and without knowing English can simply look at the pictures and know how to do the tricks," Dr. Rice told a reporter.

He also had completed three volumes of an encyclopedia, Rice's Encyclopedia of Silk Magic. He and his wife, Thelma (Ryle) Rice, owned Silk King Studios, Cincinnati, the world's largest distributor of silk magic tricks, said his daughter, Ruth Crone, Washington, D.C.

"He never mixed his magic in with his art classes," said Ruth Crone, "but he used his art on the silk. He had a marvelous sense of humor and was wise, witty and cheerful." Dr. Rice, a native of Salineville, Ohio, received his master of education degree at UC in 1942 and doctor of education degree at Columbia University in 1944.

He had acted as critic teacher of art for UC in the Wyoming. Ohio, public schools from 1934-42, adjunct instructor at UC from 1940-42, a teaching fellow at Columbia from 1942-44, and head of the University of Alabama department of art, 1944-46.

He was president and dean of Moore College of Art, Philadelphia, for 12 years. The college was founded in 1844 by Sara Peters, who later founded the Cincinnati Art Academy.

For many years he was chairman of the National Scholarship Jurors, Scholastic Arts Awards. For 13 years he was advisory art editor of the Book of Knowledge. He was a director of the Philadelphia Art Alliance, Wynnewood Civic Association and Harcum Junior College.

Dr. Rice was a charter member, founder and past president of the Magic Dealers Association; president, fellow and life member, National Association of Schools of Art; member of the board of the Contemporary Arts Center; honorary member, Cincinnati Art Club; past secretary of the International Brotherhood of Magicians; and member of the University Club and the MacDowell Society, Cincinnati.

In addition to his wife and daughter, he leaves two sisters, Sara Koenkee of Minnesota and Byrnice Emerick of Dayton, Ohio; and two grandchildren.

Memorial service will be at 10:30 a.m. Monday at Knox Presbyterian Church, Michigan and Observatory avenues, Hyde Park. Burial, at convenience of the family. Elden A. Good Funeral Home, Hyde Park, in charge of arrangements.

Memorials may be made to the American Cancer Society.

Richard Clements ran in Boston Marathon

Loveland man was assistant VP at Fifth Third Bank

BY JUDY ASHTON
The Cincinnati Enquirer

Richard Clements rose at 4 a.m. each day to run before work; in a week, he averaged 50 to 60 miles.

"It was nothing for him to get up on a Saturday and run 20 miles along with two good friends," said Kay Knechtly Clements, his wife of 18 years. "He loved it. You could always find him running in all kinds of weather."

But Mr. Clements had to quit running because cancer made it impossible, his wife said. He died Saturday from renal cell carcinoma, a malignant tumor in the kidney, at his home in Loveland. He was 46.

Mr. Clements ran in 22 marathons, and fulfilled a dream in 1988 when he competed in the Boston Marathon, finishing in just under three hours. It took him 10years to get there, his wife said.

"You have to qualify for the Boston Marathon," she said. "You have to run in a sanctioned marathon, and it depends upon your age and what time you finish. Not just anyone can run in (the Boston Marathon)."

Mr. Clements worked for Fifth Third Bank for 17 years as an assistant vice president. He was a branch manager of the Sharonville banking center.

Charlie Horning, a friend from Walton, Ky., said, "The intense loyalty to his friends, his personal integrity and character, and his zest for life will provide a lasting impression for all that knew him."

Mr. Clements was a member of the Sharonville Kiwanis and Mount Washington Baptist Church. He served in the Air Force for four years, with a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Mr. Clements was a participant in the National Cancer Institutes' testing of interleukin I and II, an experimental cancer treatment, at the James Cancer Clinic at Ohio State University.

He was born in Walton and graduated from Walton-Verona High School. He attended Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

Also surviving are his parents, Lloyd and Rosemary Clements of Walton.

Visitation will be 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday at Chambers & Grubbs Funeral Home, 45 N. Main St., Walton. A service will follow at 1 p.m. at the funeral home. Burial will be in Belleview Cemetery.

Memorials can be made to the American Cancer Society, 3372 Central Parkway, Cincinnati 45225.

Obituary of Malcolm W. Neal, ID = 1968

MALCOLM W. NEAL

Killed By a Train at Corinth, Grant Countv.

The killing of Malcolm W. Neal, by a train at Corinth, Grant county, early Christmas morning, was a great shock to his many friends in this county.
About two years ago Mr. Neal moved from the Union neighborhood, where he was born and raised, to Erlanger, where he engaged in the coal and livery business, until about two mouths ago, when he moved to Corinth and engaged in the hotel. livery and coal business.

On the morning of his death he had just taken a bucket of coal into his office, when the north bound train which passes Corinth at a very high rate of speed, whistled. He at once left his office and started towards the depot, it is supposed, to see a railroad man he expected to be on the train, and with whom he had a business engagement.

The approaching train was the second section of the fast train which does not stop at Corinth, and of this Mr. Neal was not aware. Just before he reached the track, a lady who saw him and realized his danger, called to him, but he did not appear to hear her and a few more steps carried him to the center of the track, where he was struck by the engine and hurled 100 feet, nearly every bone in his body being broken and death resulting instantly.

The remains were brought back to his old home, and the funeral service was conducted at Big Bone church last Friday afternoon by Rev. W. S. Taylor, in the presence of a large assemblage of his old friends and relatives, all of whom were bowed with grief unspeakable.

Macolm W. Neal was 57 years old, and a son of the late William Neal. He was born and raised in the Big Bone church neighborhood, where he spent all his life except the last two years. About fifteen years ago he united with Big Bone Baptist church, and for ten years last past he served the congregation in the capacity of deacon. Mr. Neal's everyday life was an exemplification of the christianity he professed, and no person can truthfully say that he every intentionally did his fellowman a wrong. He was a good neighbor and citizen — a man whose life will ever be looked upon as worthy of emulation in every particular

He leaves a widow, a grown daughter, one brother and two sisters who are almost prostrated with grief over his sudden taking off, and who have the sympathy of many friends. The beautiful tribute paid the departed by Rev. Taylor in the funeral discourse was never more deserved.

OWNER OF THE RACE IN COUNTY

The Southern section of the county was aroused last Thursday afternoon when the news was circulated that Rube Riley, well and favorably known colored man, had committed suicide at his home near Big Bone.Riley has been in Burlington on business Thursday morning and had returned to his home about noon, apparently in fairly good spirits, according to his family. His wife noticed him whittling on a forked stick and when she inquired his purpose received no answer.However, she thought nothing of the matter until a few minutes later when she heard the report of a shot gun on the porch where she had seen him whittling on the stick. Rube had carefully placed the muzzle of the shot gun against his heart and, using the stick as a device, pushed the trigger.Rube Riley, through his industry and careful management, had accumulated fairly large farm holdings. He easily was the foremost colored man in this section and had gained the respect of every white man whom he came in contact.General depression and decrease in the price of farm products were assumed to be the causes that led to Riley's act. Some other financial difficulties also were mentioned, although this is not authentic.

(Note by RRC: I have no genetic connection to Reuben as far as I know. He is included in this genealogy because he was raised by John C. & Eliza (Connely) Riley, ID =196, and I do share Connely ancestors with Eliza.

Based on an entry in a Boone County Guardian Book (compiled in "Chronicles of Boone County" and found online), John C. Riley was appointed guardian of Reuben Hamilton in 1867:

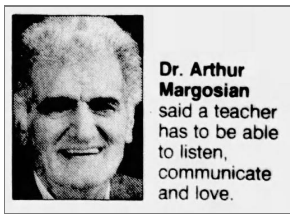
Educator, church leader
Arthur Margosian dies

He taught journalism students at Fresno State and Fresno City College the art of communication



Dr. Arthur Margosian said a teacher has to be able to listen, communicate and love.

By Pablo Lopez
The Fresno Bee

Dr. Arthur Margosian, a community and church leader who devoted three decades to California State University, Fresno, and Fresno City College as a professor and administrator, died Saturday night at age 64.

Dr. Margosian had been battling cancer for the last four months He died at home.

Born Sept. 24, 1930, in New Britain, Conn., Dr. Margosian had lived in Fresno since 1946.

Dr. Margosian was best known for his love of teaching. He said in a 1986 interview that he was “fascinated by the way students improved so darn much during their college years”.

His greatest asset, he said, was his ability to listen and understand people — and to love.

“You can’t communicate without listening.” he said in the interview. “I mean it when I say I love my students.”

Dr. Margosian often spoke out against the 1915 massacre of more than 1 million Armenians, noting that many of his relatives were killed by the Ottoman Turks.

“[I] watched a mother carrying deep wounds in her soul for her entire life in this country,” he said in 1984.

In the 1986 interview, a philosophical Dr. Margosian questioned why God teaches peace, yet "men and women have never achieved peace. Are my grand-kids going to see a world?”

After graduating from Fresno Technical High School, he served in the U. S. Air Force from 1950 to 1954 as a radar technician.

He married Mabel G. Lancaster of Fresno in February 1951. They had two children, Marsha and Michael.

“He was a very loving and caring person. He had compassion for all,” said Dr. Otto J Tocchio, a colleague and friend who knew Dr. Margosian for 35 years.

“He was one of those kinds of people who could never say no. He kept himself very busy. You could walk into his office, and he would be surrounded by his students. They loved him, and he loved them. I will miss him dearly.”

Dr. Margosian received a bachelor’s degree in journalism and social science from Fresno State College in 1956. That same year he joined the Fresno State faculty as a journalism instructor and publicity coordinator and was a news writer for United Press International.

After receiving a master’s degree in education, he resigned from Fresno State to teach at Fresno City College. He returned to Fresno State two years later as director of public relations and assistant professor of journalism.

In 1965, he was named outstanding young man of the year by the Fresno Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Honored by publishers’ group

In 1966, his love of teaching prompted him to resign his public relations post to devote full time to his students. He then climbed the academic ladder from associate professor of journalism to being named dean of the School of Professional Studies in 1970.

After receiving a doctorate degree in education from the University of Southern California in 1970, he resigned as dean five years later to return to teaching journalism, where he was chairman of that department from 1976 to 1979.

In 1985, he was honored as the outstanding journalism teacher at a four-year college by the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

He retired from Fresno State in 1986.

His worst habit, which he said may have led to open heart surgery in 1980 and a stroke five years later, was eating chocolate and not being able to say no to assignments. projects and work.

Civic activities

His civic duties included being a member of the board of governors for California Community Colleges, a bell ringer for the Salvation Army and chairman of the Fresno-Yerevan sister cities committee.

He also was a trustee and Sunday school teacher for the Holy Trinity Armenian Apostolic Church.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday at Holy Trinity Armenian Church.

Obituary

Mary Davenport was born July 29, 1854, near Jacksonville, Ill. When only a small child she moved with her parents to Missouri where in her early teens she became a member of the Baptist church.

On Dec. 2, 1869, she was married to John Clemens Conely near Pleasant Hill, Mo., who has preceded her in death only a year and four months.

Soon after marriage they moved to Kansas and settled on a farm near Geuda Springs. She has made her home near Geuda Springs for over forty-six years, or until God called her home.

To this union ten children were born, five preceding the father and mother. Five children survive: Allen of Geuda Springs; Willis of Uplands, Cal; Gilbert of Wellington; Milton of Santa Ana, Cal., and Mrs. Edith Godfrey of Arkansas City. She was a kind and loving mother.

She passed away at her home, May 16, 1922, age 67 years, 10 months and 15 days. A great sufferer, she bore her sufferings with patience and never was heard to complain, although her suffering was intense. We have lost our dear mother but we know our loss is her gain.

The funeral was held in the Methodist church at Geuda Springs, Wednesday, May 17th, at 2:30 p.m., in charge of Miss White, pastor of the Christian church.

(Note by RRC: I also have her husband's middle name spelled Clement.)

Later, Benson went to work for an agricultural chemical company that was a subsidiary of the Chevron Company. His career rise had them living in various parts of the country from the south to the northeast and in the west. At his final position, he was at the company headquarters in Richmond, California, as manager of field research and services. After 26 years, at the age of 58, he made the decision to retire.

Benson and... retired and moved from Walnut Creek to Seiad Valley, to a house and land fronting on the Klamath River. There, they enjoyed 12 years of returning to their rural roots. He became an accomplished gardener, growing a great variety of fruits and vegetables they shared with family and friends. He was proud that he grew things that others said couldn't be grown in the area. In 1990, they decided to move into Yreka, where he was able to remain physically active by walking a route that took him from one end of Yreka to the other, well into his 80s.

Benson is survived by... his wife of 71 years; his brother... sons... grandchildren... and great-grandchildren... He will be missed.

Obituary of John Marion Conely, ID = 19735

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in the Arkansas City Daily Traveler, Arkansas City, KS, Tues., 7 Jan. 1919, page 8.)

Obituary.

John Marion Conely was born near Geuda Springs, Kans., Sept. 16, 1879, and died Dec. 29, 1918, aged 39 years 3 months and 18 days.

He was married to Ina Ault of Gueda Springs Oct. 15, 1906. To that union were born three children, Edith, age 14; Hazel, age 11; Doyle, 7. All of whom survive. Also a father, mother, four brothers and one sister survive. Mrs. Vern Godfrey, northwest of Arkansas City, Allen, Willie and Milton live in Wellington, Kans.

SHOWALTER

Nancy Joan Showalter, 77, passed away in the early morning hours on September 12, 2016 after losing her 21 yearlong battle with cancer. Nancy was born in Highmore, South Dakota on Oct 9,1938 to Amos and Reina Bouzek. She graduated from Highmore High school in 1956 and then attended Mount Marty College in Yankton, SD for 2 years to obtain her teaching certifcate. She then made the big move to California and attended Cal State LA and UCLA for the next 2 years. She stopped just short of her degree to start her family. After the birth of Bryan and Chris she moved to Tri-Cities WA to be close to her sister, Sharon. She had 2 more children Susan Amy and Ben while living in Pasco. She always worked with children throughout her life whether it was running an in-home daycare or preschool, teaching religious education classes at the Catholic church, or teaching her children to cook, bake, can, fish, camp, laugh, and love life. Nancy later went back to school and obtained her BA in Education from Eastern WA University in 1984. In 1989 she opened an in-home preschool where it was one of the happiest places on earth. Whether it was the time she'd purchase them all matching raincoats and went on adventures or having baby pigs in the house for them to bottle-feed or early childhood education they received, they all knew they were loved and felt like they belonged.

In 1995 she moved back to Highmore, South Dakota to care for her father after the death of her mother. She enjoyed her farm life while raising Cashmere goats.
After her father passed she moved to Huntington Beach, California to be closer to her son, Chris. She lived there for a number of years before returning to Pasco, Washington.

She was devoted to her family, always putting them first and making sure they were happy. She loved to talk and tell a good story. She could and would spark up a conversation with people wherever she went. She was prone to fits of laughter when telling of her adventures. She always helped those in need whether friend or stranger. If she could help, she would. She was quick to forgive and never held a grudge. She loved with all her heart and wanted nothing more than to see everyone around her happy and well fed.

She is survived by her husband … of 40 years; her sisters … and … of South Dakota; Sons; … of Little Rock, Arkansas, … of Huntington Beach, CA, … of Pasco, WA and Daughter … of Maple Valley, WA; as well as her grandchildren … and great-grandchildren …

Nancy lived an amazing life, had a kind soul and will be sorely missed by many. Her children will host a gathering on September 24th at 2pm at the Pasco Best Western on 2811 N 20th Ave in remembrance of Nancy. We would be honored if her friends and family attended.

Court petition of Jean Maude 'Jennie' (Connely) Bischoff Hawkins McConnell, ID = 19751

SAYS HUBBY IS GONE

MRS. J. M. HAWKINS ASKS CONTROL OF PROPERTY

She is Married Fourth Time and is Second for Husband

Family trouble of Mrs. Jennie M. Hawkins, married for the fourth time and Samuel M. Hawkins, who took her as his second wife, have reached the circuit court in the form of a petition for authorization to manage, control, sell and encumber real estate and which promises to lave some very interesting developments as the issue are made up. Hawkins was formerly a member the County Board of Supervisors, a representative from Woodriver township.

Mrs. Hawkins was formerly Mrs. Jennie M. Bischoff and was the widow of John Bischoff, former resident of Edwardsville. Hawkins became her fourth husband on July 26, 1919. They were married at Belleville.

Hawkins and his former wife figured in a divorce suit in the same court, his former wife making him defendant at the proceedings.

It has been hinted that another suit is also to be filed by Mrs. Hawkins for the January term of court but facts about it will be unobtainable for a few days.

Previous to her marriage Mrs. Hawkins owned property in Industrial Addition at Granite City. She a had placed a mortgage upon it for $2,400, the Clover Leaf Loan of Edwardsville advancing the money.

At the time of the marriage Hawkins transferred some property at East Alton to his wife. She says that upon his request she placed a mortgage upon it with the East Alton Loan Investment Association, she charges that he collected the money and departed with it from Illinois on November 6, 1919. She says he went to Enid, Okla., and later to Los Angeles, California.

Mrs. Hawkins claims that at the time of her husband's departure he owed Louis H. Ortgier $1,695 and that she was forced to sell personal property and has paid all but $405 of the amount. She states in her petition that she has been in poor health, required to contract debts for medical attention and is threatened with mortgage foreclosures.

Obituary of James Wayne Hamburg, ID = 1981231
(Partially copied from an obit found online at dignitymemorial.com)

Mr. JAMES W. HAMBURG

July 26, 1921 – June 3, 2014

James Wayne Hamburg, age 92, died June 3, 2014 in the Mission Hills home he treasured. He spent his last days listening to swing jazz, talking to his friends and family, telling stories, and looking out the living room window toward the airport and the bay. He had been quite infirm from arthritis but in his own fashion preferred to say he was just slow. Jim was born in Eustis Nebraska, raised in Marysville, Kansas and was a product of the Volga Deutch migration of the late19th century. He attended Kansas State in Manhattan (not NYC), learned to fly, worked on the railroad, and earned an appointment to the Naval Academy in 1941. Jim felt the expanded horizons of moving from rural Kansas and forced interaction with all classes of society at Annapolis one of the blessings of his life and he never wavered from considering new ideas or people (except home computers, surely a passing fad). He had great affection and respect for his upbringing in Maryville and continued to attend high school reunions there well into his eighties – even bicycling to Marysville from San Diego on several occasions (perhaps his own version of the pilgrimage of St. James – ironic because he was a determined secular humanist). His father had owned a general store in Marysville, Hamburg's Golden Rule, a reference I believe to tailoring or good value but also to ethics. His sister Patricia attended the University of Nebraska and later developed social programs in San Francisco. He was predeceased by several years by his wife, Sarah Louise Hamburg (nee Kennedy), whom he met on a train on New Year's Eve somewhere in the Midwest, each journeying to designations of great personal concern (Chicago, Philadelphia) during the build up to the war. The story is that he caught her glance in the club car, made a spinning motion with his fingers, a hand signal for "do you want to dance." And so they did, married over 60 years. After resigning from the Navy (the constant relocation and substandard housing being a deal breaker for him, but not his wife), he received an MBA from Stanford University and began a career in aeronautical engineering in California which included Ryan Aeronautical and Aerojet General. They raised a son and a daughter in the local school system, participating in the extracurricular activities of sports and drama respectively. Having seen San Diego during Navy relocations during wars (including the Korean War) and noticing the significant climatic advantages over the Midwest they decided to stay. Somewhat contrary to this love of San Diego, Jim took numerous bicycle trips across the country and across the world: Tecate to Cabo San Lucas several times, Seattle Washington to Portland Maine, John o'Grouts to Lands End (England), southeast coast of Australia, and both islands of New Zealand. Slide shows of these trips were well attended but the future of these slide shows are threatened by the declining availability of projector bulbs. Jim and Sal became politically engaged in the creation of open space park land in the canyons that separate the fingers of streets that crest the Mission Hills, dealing with the legal motions, board meetings, petitions and lobbying necessary and they were successful. The politics settled, Jim spent a substantial portion of his remaining life rebuilding stone walls without mortar (known as dry set masonry), cactus gardening, and general outdoor things (to the benign neglect of the house). He was surprised to learn he had been awarded a Preservation Award for his efforts by Mission Hills Heritage – he had just been doing what was natural – but appreciated the opportunity to lobby for the canyon. He told everyone he was a vegetarian but you could hide bacon in the recipe somewhere and he would wonder why it tasted so good. Jim was involved in and with the Sierra Club (the Mavericks, of course), Navy veterans (the Army Navy game at the Admiral Kidd club), Knickerbikers, Skeptics, PFLAG, the Dixieland Jazz Society (he attended all four days of the Dixieland Jazz extravaganza during Thankgiving to the chagrin of family members who might have wanted his attendance at a more traditional family thanksgiving). He was member number 4 of the San Diego Memorial Society (aka the Hemlock Society) which now numbers many thousands. Jim developed close friends from many walks of life: daily interactions, house improvements, long distance bicycle trips, but most importantly a love and appreciation of the basic acts of life. Immediate family survivors include… The Kennedy families, co-joined with the Hamburgs by holiday traditions and lives together include… Lessons learned from my father include: 1. Work hard (study, be prepared) 2. Play hard (at whatever suits you and be sure to enjoy it, be gracious in defeat and proud in victory) 3. Be careful (don't take stupid risks) 4. Do what you want, risks be damned, (but wear a helmet) … June 10, 2014.

Horse Trainer Kills Wife, Then Slashes Own Throat; Mrs. Bertha Lillard Victim

Arthur Lillard, 45 years old, Glencoe, Ky., horse trainer and former salesman, last night slashed the throat of his wife, Mrs. Bertha Lillard, 37 years old, with a razor, killing her almost instantly, and then cut his own throat and wrists in an attempt to end his life.

The tragedy occurred when Lillard visited his wife, from whom he had been separated, at the home of her sister, Miss Bessie Connolly, and of her aunt, Mrs. Julia Blackburn, 203 west Thirty-fourth street, Covington. Kentucky.

The couple separated several month ago because of domestic difficulties, relatives said, and gave up their home in Glencoe, Ky. Two children, Susie, five years old, and Margaret, three years old, were taken to the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Kate Connolly, Elliston Station, Grant County, near Willlamstown, Ky., while Mrs. Lillard went to the home of relatives in Latonia, and Lillard moved to a small hotel in Cincinnati, the name of which Mrs. Lillard's relatives did not know. They had been married seven years. Mrs. Lillard, before her marriage, was a nurse at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Covington, Ky.

From Lillard's calm demeanor they had no means of suspecting that in his pocket he carried an old-fashioned razor with the blade nicked saw-like.

For a half hour, relatives said, Lillard and bis wife engaged in what they believed to be ordinary conversation, as they heard no voices raised above the normal in argument. Then they heard a terrified shriek. This was repeated several times and it aroused the neighborhood.

The sound of a scuffle was overheard and several articles of furniture were overturned. Then Miss Connolly and Mrs. Blackburn hurried into the room. There they found Mrs. Lillard lifeless on the floor and Lillard unconscious beside her, the razor slipping from his hand.

(Note by RRC: By my calculation, Arthur was 49, not 45; based on other sources, "Bertha" should be Byrde, "Connolly" should be Conley; by my calculation, they had been married five years, not seven.

Horse Trainer Kills Wife, Then Slashes Own Throat; Mrs. Bertha Lillard Victim

Arthur Lillard, 45 years old, Glencoe, Ky., horse trainer and former salesman, last night slashed the throat of his wife, Mrs. Bertha Lillard, 27 years old, with a razor, killing her almost instantly, and then cut his own throat and wrists in an attempt to end his life.

The tragedy occurred when Lillard visited his wife, from whom he had been separated, at the home of her sister, Miss Bessie Connolly, and of her aunt, Mrs. Julia Blackburn, 210 west Thirty-fourth street, Covington, Kentucky.

The couple separated several months ago because of domestic difficulties, relatives said, and gave up their home in Glencoe, Ky. Two children, Ruth, five years old, and Margaret, three years old, were taken to the home of their grandmother, Mrs. Kate Connolly, Elliston Station, Grant County, near Williamstown, Ky., while Mrs. Lillard went to the home of relatives in Latonia, and Lillard moved to a small hotel in Cincinnati, the name of which Mrs. Lillard's relatives did not know. They had been married seven years. Mrs. Lillard, before her marriage, was a nurse at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Covington, Ky.

Lillard had not communicated with his wife since she went to live with her relatives in Latonia. When he arrived at the residence about 9:30 o'clock last night he addressed Mrs. Blackburn and Miss Connolly politely and inquired for Mrs. Lillard. He shook hands with them and inquired about the health of his wife and of his children. He said he wished to talk with his wife, and when Mrs. Lillard entered the room her sister and aunt went to another part of the house.

From Lillard's calm demeanor they had no means of suspecting that in his pocket he carried an old-fashioned razor with the blade nicked saw-like.

For a half hour, relatives said, Lillard and his wife engaged in what they believed to be ordinary conversation, as they heard no voices raised above the normal in argument. Then they heard a terrified shriek. This was repeated several times and it aroused the neighborhood.

The sound of a scuffle was overheard and several articles of furniture were overturned. Then Miss Connolly and Mrs. Blackburn hurried into the room. There they found Mrs. Lillard lifeless on the floor and Lillard unconscious beside her, the razor slipping from his hand.

Mrs. Lillard's head almost was severed from her body. Coroner D. W. Stephens and Dr. E. Lee Hieg said they believe Lillard had seized Mrs. Lillard by her hair, and, throwing back her head, had attempted to decapitate her. Lillard had slashed his own throat, severing the windpipe and had gashed his wrists. Lillard was still alive at St. Elizabeth's Hospital early this morning, though physicians said they did not believe could survive.

No money was found in Lillard's pockets, but in his possession were 15 pawn tickets, showing he had obtained various amounts of money on jewelry, clothing and even his fountain pen. Several of the articles were pawned in Louisville, Ky. One pawn ticket showed that he had pawned a watch and chain in Cincinnati Tuesday.

Covington police advance a theory that Lillard had been playing the races in Louisville and Latonia and had gone broke. Desperately in need of money, they believe, he sought his wife for the purpose of obtaining a loan, with death as the alternative. In his pocket was found a horse trainer's license, issued to him by the Kentucky Racing Association. Lillard formerly was a salesman employed by a washing machine company.

(Note by RRC: By my calculation, Arthur was 49, not 45; based on other sources, "Bertha" should be Byrde, ”Connolly" should be Conley; by my calculation, they had been married five years, not seven.

WIFE TRIED TO SAVE HIM,

So He Cut Her Throat, Says Slayer - Lost Fortune at Races.

"I tried to end my life because I was desperately in need of money, but my wife tried to prevent me, so I cut her throat and then drew the razor across my own throat and wrist."

This statement was made to Coroner David W. Stephens at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, yesterday morning by Arthur S. Lillard, 41 years old, former salesman and a trainer of race horses, who killed his wife, Mrs. Bertha Lillard, 30 years old, when at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Julia Blackburn, 203 Thirty-fourth street, Latonia, Wednesday night. Lillard said he had visited his wife seeking reconciliation.

Lillard, according to this friends, had lost $10,000 at race tracks during the last two years. Several years ago he speculated in Indian lands in Oklahoma and realized a small fortune on his investment. He then purchased several race horses and took them to Saratoga and Havana. Here, according to his friends, he "went broke."

The body of Mrs. Lillard will be forwarded to her former home at Elliston Station, Grant County, Kentucky, this morning for burial. Two children, Margaret, 3 years old, and Susie, 5 years old, are with their grandmother, Mrs. Katherine Connelly, at Elliston Station.

The condition of Lillard last night was reported to be favorable for his recovery.

A charge of murder was filed against him last night and Lieutenant William Picket stationed Patrolman Herman Fauz at his bedside.

Mrs. Lillard recently had been employed as a trained nurse at St. Elizabeth Hospital and worked there at various times since her separation from her husband more than a year ago.

Tracy's Division of Kenton Circuit Court at Covington. The regular panel was exhausted, and altogether more than 80 jurors were examined yesterday before 12 men were agreed upon to try the case.

Orie S. Ware, Commonwealth Attorney, is conducting the prosecution, and John B. O'Neal is Lillard's attorney.

A plea of insanity was entered by Attorney O'Neal for Lillard, and in his statement to the jury the attorney declared that Lillard loved his wife, and desired that they enter eternity together, and at the time of the murder was not responsible for his actions.

Boater accused in death of sailor

By Susan Vela

FORT WRIGHT - Michael Thomas Martin II died June 9 while snorkeling off a Greek Island.

Now relatives of the 22-year-old Navy petty officer are starting to hear disturbing news about Greek boater Costas Aggeletakis - who is accused of hitting Petty Officer Martin.

Former U.S. Sen. Wendell Ford of Owensboro, along with other Kentucky politicians, has been helping the family cut through red tape to get more information about Petty Officer Martin's death. Mr. Ford told relatives Thursday that Mr. Aggeletakis is facing homicide charges in his homeland.

Officials at the Greek embassy in Washington, D.C., could not verify that Friday afternoon, which brought some comfort to the Martin family, they said.

They want to believe that Petty Officer Martin s death was an accident.

The U.S. Navy Quarter Master and 3rd class petty officer was hit by a boat while snorkeling off the resort island of Mykonos, He had been enjoying a day's leave off the U.S.S. Trenton.

Mr. Aggeletakis, 46, of Mykonos, was arrested Sunday.

"We don't know the whole story yet, (but) I was really hoping that it was an accident," said Petty Officer Martin's mother, … "If (Mr. Aggeletakis) was a militant and the death was deliberate, I definitely want him prosecuted.”

She wants to believe that her son was snorkeling in warm Aegean waters, looking at coral and fish, when he spotted Mr. Aggeletakis' boat and dove down - just not quickly enough. Mrs. Martin doesn't want to consider the possibility that Mr. Aggeletakis spotted her son and ran over the snorkeler anyway.

She said her son loved sports and the outdoors and began swimming when he was only a few months old.

U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, U.S. Rep. Ken Lucas and Covington attorney Phil Taliaferro have been trying to help the Martin family get more information from Greek authorities.

Mr. Taliaferro said the Martin family has a potentially good lawsuit against Mr. Aggeletakis.

"This is a real tragedy," he said. ". . . There can't be anything worse than losing one of your children."

Covington resident Glenna Wilson was like a second mother to Petty Officer Martin. She remembers when she met him as a boy.

"Mike always put up a pretense of being such a tough guy, but he had the sweetest heart," she said. "He always did want everything to be good."

Surviving Petty Officer Martin are his wife, … of Erlanger; mother, … of Fort Wright; father and stepmother, … of Taylor Mill; sister, … of Fort Wright; brother, … of Fort Wright; stepsister, … of Fairfield; and maternal grandmother, … of Florence, Ind. He was preceded in death by his brother, Michael Thomas Martin I, in 1976.

Visitation will be 5 to 8 p.m. Monday and a service 10 a.m. Tuesday at Connley Brothers Funeral Home, Covington. A military honor guard service will take place afterward at Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Erlanger.

Memorials can be made to Michael Thomas Martin II Memorial Fund; c/o City of Fort Wright, 409 Kyles Lane, Fort Wright, KY 41011; or the American Diabetes Association, 1941 Bishop Lane, Suite 110, Louisville, KY 40218.

(Partially copied from an obit found online at dignitymemorial.com)

Anita "NeeNee" Gullion Ryle

Anita “Nee Nee” Gullion Ryle

Embraced in the loving arms of Christ August 1, 2020.

An artist of every medium, whether with raised paintbrush or sweet soprano, Anita found inspiration in her greatest loves: Her/Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, beloved husband Robert C. Ryle, and all of her cherished family and friends.

Amidst the Great Depression, Anita Davis Gullion was born into a family flourishing with a spirit of generosity. This spirit of generosity was never lost on her though she was soon to become the middle child of nine. Oh, how she loved her brothers and sisters! Her elder sister Helen and brother Emery among her most beloved. The farm girl quickly blossomed into “the prettiest girl in Gallatin County” and was married to the besotted Robert C. “Papaw” Ryle, WWII Army Air Corpsman. The couple was blessed with two devoted daughters, … and … Meanwhile, Mr. Ryle’s love of Christ and entrepreneurial spirit took hold and Mrs. Ryle kept busy tending the children and mending the hands’ of the husband who faithfully built churches and businesses.

Among those mourning the loss of her earthly presence are her daughters … her son-in-law … six grandchildren … a sister, … fifteen great grandchildren and many loving nieces and nephews.

While together we mourn our matriarch, our Nee Nee, we also rejoice in her heavenly arrival and reunification with her beloved husband, Robert C. Ryle. A father, grandfather, and great-grandfather who is still sorely missed.

A visitation will be held Wednesday August 05, 2020 from 5-7pm at Riverside Memorial Park & Funeral Home located 7242 Normandy Boulevard, Jacksonville FL 32205. Anita's Graveside service will be held Thursday August 06, 2020 at 11am at Riverside Memorial Park on the North side of Normandy Boulevard.

Harry I. Gulllon, 21, Idlewild, Boone County, was killed instantly when he was thrown from his automobile to the concrete of U. S. 42 near Union, Sheriff Rouse reported. Gullion's companion, Miss Dorothy Setters, 16, of R. R. 1, Union, suffered minor cuts and bruises, Sheriff Rouse said, and was taken to St. Elisabeth Hospital, Covington.

The accident was unusual, Sheriff Rouse said. Apparently one wheel of the car had run off the road, and when Gullion cut the wheels back on the highway the vehicle crossed to the other side of the road and ran up a steep bank, the Sheriff continued.

In this maneuver, Sheriff Rouse said, Gullion was thrown clear of the car and alighted on his head in the highway. He suffered a crushed skull and died at once.

BUS DRIVER STOPS.

The Sheriff said he was told a driver for a Greyhound bus stopped his huge vehicle, removed the body to the side of the road and lighted flares to show its position. Ralph Stith, of the Stith funeral home, was called. He removed the body to his funeral establishment and took Miss Setters to the hospital.

Gullion was employed as a plater at the Fox Emblem Co., 3400 Beekman St., Cincinnati. He was a veteran of World War II, having served as a Corporal in the Air Corps Signal Service in the Pacific Theater. He was in the armed forces from November, 1944, to April, 1947.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Gullion, Idlewild; three brothers, Clarence Shaw Gullion, Elsmere, Emery S. Gullion, Owenton, Ky., and John Gullion, Burlington, and four sisters, Mrs. Anita Ryle, Elsmere, Mrs. Helen Maxwell, Warsaw, and Miss Hazel and Miss Margie Gullion, both of Idlewood.

Friends may call until 1 p. m. today at the residence of Mrs. Ryle, 51 Eastern Ave., Elsmere. Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. in Warsaw Methodist Church. The Stith funeral home is in charge of arrangements. Burial will be in Warsaw Cemetery.

Donald R. Mangold

As a youth, he was local Soap Box Derby champion
BY JUDY ASHTON ,
The Cincinnati Enquirer

Donald R. Mangold, a retired IBM consulting-systems engineer, died Sunday at University Hospital. The Kenwood resident was 67.

Mr. Mangold began his 26-year career with IBM in 1962. He was one of five consulting-systems engineers. He lived in Cincinnati and often traveled to Chicago, Detroit, New York and Boca Raton, Fla.

"He would consult with businesses on their computer needs and could design a system that would interface with existing IBM systems or design a tailor-made system for the customer needs," said his daughter, Mary Mangold Smithers of Mount Lookout.

Before working for IBM, he designed engines at General Electric in Evendale from 1950 until 1962.

At age 13, Mr. Mangold won the local Soap Box Derby, defeating 252 boys. He then represented Cincinnati in the national competition in Akron, Ohio.

"He was given a set of tools the previous Christmas and went to work on his race car," his daughter said. (His car) was called the Green Devil, named for the athletic teams at Dayton, Ky., High School, which he attended.

"Thirty years later in 1968, "he worked with another man in helping underprivileged kids design Soap Box Derby cars and enter races," his daughter said.

"He was a quiet and humble man. He never complained about anything or anyone."

Mr. Mangold served in the Army during World War II and received two Bronze Stars and other decorations.

He was a 1950 graduate of Purdue University with a degree in electrical engineering. He was a member of the choir at All Saints Church in Kenwood.

He also is survived by his wife, Thelma; two sons, Donald R. Jr. of Kenwood, and David R. of Memphis, Tenn., and three grandchildren.

Visitation will be 5-7 p.m. today at the Thomas Memorial Funeral Home, 7500 Montgomery Road in Kenwood. Mass of Christian burial will follow at 7:30 p.m. at All Saints Church, 8939 Montgomery Road in Kenwood. Burial will be in Gate of Heaven Cemetery in Montgomery.

Memorials can be made to the Donald R. Mangold Memorial Fund, in care of the Mayfield Neurological Institute, 506 Oak St., Cincinnati 45219 (Attn: Randi Gillinson) or the Biofeedback Laboratory, University of Miami Medical School, Box 016960, Miami, Fla. 33101 (Attn: Ellen Roberts).

Obituary of Billie Dean Watts, ID = 19a4241

Billie Dean Watts PhD
passed away on February 18, 2022 at the age of 91. He was predeceased by his parents, Orville & Vera Watts.

Bill is survived by his wife of 56 years, … daughters … and … grandchildren … sibling … niece and nephew … and … and many dear friends and colleagues.

Bill was a Professor and Department Chair for 30 years at Angelo State University, San Angelo, TX. He received his undergraduate and master's degrees at Emporia State University, and his doctorate from the University of Oregon in Eugene.

Theatre was a huge passion for Bill and he loved every aspect of production. He worked long hours with students and was always proud when they continued into theatre careers. Some of his students have become professional actors on Broadway and in national tours, movies and television commercials. His students also teach in dozens of secondary schools and universities, or work in scene shops and design studios across the country.

Bill was most proud of his own daughters and often laughingly asked how two artists ever produced kids in fields of technology and medicine. As his daughters moved into the fields of Cognitive Engineering and Occupational Therapy, Bill retired from teaching and enjoyed hobbies like stained glass, woodworking, pottery and weaving. He spent 15 years weaving at the Rochester Fiber Arts Studio, making elaborately patterned table runners, placemats, scarves and shawls for family, colleagues and former students.

Bill was a loving husband and father and will be fondly remembered for his kind heart and amazing sense of humor.

Family and friends are invited to call on Thursday, February 24 from 4:00-7:00 at Miller Funeral and Cremation Services, Inc., 3325 Winton Road South.

Bill's funeral service will be held in Creation Chapel of White Haven Memorial Park, 210 Marsh Road, Pittsford, NY on Friday, February 25th at 2 PM.

If you wish to honor Bill with a donation, a gift to the Weaver's Guild of Rochester would be appreciated.

Obituary of Betty Jean (Gracey) Heger, ID = 19a4521

(Partially copied from the website of the Love Funeral Homes, Limon, CO, online.)

Betty Jean Heger

June 26, 1926 - October 18, 2011

Betty Jean Gracey Heger, mother, wife, grandmother, and friend, passed away Wednesday, October 18, 2011 at the Lincoln Community Hospital.

Betty was born in Winfield, Kansas on June 26, 1926, the oldest of Fern Mae Crane and Orville Roscoe Gracey's three children. Betty grew up in Hugoton, Kansas with her younger brother and sister, Alvin Lyle Gracey and... She started playing the piano at age 5, and loved to sing just as much as she loved playing music for her friends and family. Betty attended Hugoton High School where she played flute in the marching band, played on the volleyball team and loved playing piano for school plays and musicals as well as performing in them. During her high school years, Betty met and dated Max Farrel Heger, a local good looking farm boy who proposed to her not once, but twice.

Betty graduated high school in 1944, and after getting her teaching certificate, she started teaching school in a one-room school house. After proposing to Betty nearly a year earlier, Max proposed to Betty again on her birthday. On September 1, 1945 Betty and Max were married. To this union were born three children. Betty and Max continued to work and live on the farm in Hugoton until the summer of 1959 when they moved their family to Flagler, CO. They purchased a farm and started farming their own land, and in January 1960 the family moved into Betty's dream home.

The years flew by, and with her love of being a mother, supportive wife, and active community member there was never a dull moment at the Heger's. Betty and Max both flew airplanes, rode motorcycles, went on hunting and fishing trips, hosted foreign exchange students, and traveled to Hawaii. Second only to her love for her family was her home and yard. She took pride in its appearance and upkeep, to the chagrin of her family and some well meaning teenage yard workers. Betty had a love of nature and had no fear of the hard work that went into making her yard bloom in all its wonder.

Betty was very independent and had high expectations for all those around her. This bode well for her when she became a decorating consultant for Home Interiors. She won several state and national sales awards due to her keen eye, friendliness, and entrepreneurial skills. Betty loved to cook and entertain, including turning her hand at creating wedding cakes. She took pride in the intricate details that she customized for each person. Betty was a 33-year member of her local Rebecca's Lodge, where she often played the piano. Betty and many of her friends from the lodge were members of the Sew and Such club. When grandchildren came along, Betty became active in their lives as much as she did in her lives of her children. She served in the Girl Scout program and was the Brownie leader to one of her granddaughters. Betty drove the school bus for many years and carried her love of crafts and fun to the school bus by decorating it for every holiday, which brought smiles to even the grumpiest of morning riders. At one point, Betty and Max won an award for the most grandchildren – eight -- attending Flagler School at one time, a fact of which she was very proud of.

Betty belonged to the First Congregational church where she actively participated with piano playing and accompanying her grandchildren in many Easter and Christmas programs. Betty loved to can and bake and just spoil those around her with their favorite foods; it was one of the many ways she showed her love to those around her.

Betty was a generous and loyal friend who always put others before herself. She was firm yet loving, quick witted and stubborn, and very charitable with her time and talents. But most of all she loved deeply all those around her. She always looked for the good in others and wanted to forgive and forget. The joy of her life was her family and home. The joy of our lives is having been a part of hers.

Betty was preceded in death by her parents, her brother Alvin, and her husband of 61 years, Max. She is survived by her three children, eight grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Her zest for life and love of the beauty all around her will remain in our hearts and minds. She will be sorely missed and never forgotten.

Obituary of Max Farrell Heger, ID = 19a4521

(Partially copied from the website of the Love Funeral Homes, Limon, CO, online.)

Max Farrell Heger, 81, of Flagler, CO passed away November 21, 2006 at the Lincoln Community Hospital in Hugo, CO.

Max was born on April 29, 1925 on the family farm near Hugoton, Kansas to Rudolph and Wavie Mills (Heger). Max had one brother and two sisters. As a young boy he attended country school where he and a classmate over stoked the stove, causing the school house to burn down. The highlight of this tragedy was that there was no school for the next several months. He graduated from Hugoton High School in 1943.

After graduation, Max continued to work on the family farm with his father and brother. At age seventeen, Max bought his first tractor a W9 International. His father was so impressed with the tractor that he himself bought two more w9's the next day.

Max and... were married on September 1, 1945 in Hugoton, Kansas. To this union, three children were born. Max and... bought their first quarter of land for five dollars an acre. Along with starting his own farm, he continued to farm with his father and brother until 1960 when he moved his family to Flagler, Colorado to start the next adventure in his life.

Max started off with very little in Colorado, moving machinery back and forth from Kansas in order to make his dreams come true and start his own family farm. He never had aspirations to farm half of Eastern Colorado, he just wanted to take care of his family and pass on his childhood memories of the family farm to the next generation. In 1975 Max and several local farmers went to Washington, D.C. where they joined with farmers from across the nation to rally for better prices for their farm commodities.

Along with his joy of farming, he also was a member of the Oddfellows Lodge for thirty-three years. Throughout his life, Max had several interests which included flying airplanes, riding motorcycles, hunting, and fishing with his family. In November of 2004, Max faced his greatest challenge when diagnosed with cancer.

He is survived by his wife of sixty-one years, three children, eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Max was a devoted husband, father, grandfather, great-grandfather, friend and most of all, a hero to his family. His memory will live on in our hearts and he will be greatly missed. A funeral service for Max will be held Saturday, November 25, 2006 at 10:00 a.m. at the Love Funeral Home Chapel in Limon, CO with a Graveside service to be held at the Flagler Cemetery at 11:30 a.m. Memorials may be made to the Lincoln Community Hospital P. O. Box 248, Hugo, CO 80821.

Obituary of James Richard Hutchinson, ID = 19a7712

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in The Cincinnati Enquirer, Cincinnati, OH, Friday, 3 June 1949, page ?.)

Boy Drowns;
First Fatality
Of Heat Wave

The first hot-weather drowning of the season in Boone County was reported yesterday after five-year-old James Richard Hutchinson stepped beyond his depth in Gunpowder Creek near Burlington.

Robert Brugh, Boone County Coroner, returned a verdict of accidental drowning. The child, he said, had been wading in a part of the creek that crossed the farm owned by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hutchinson, when apparently he reached a "stepping-off place" in which the water was over his head.

He was missed by his family, and a search was made. An uncle, James Brockman, who was visiting the boy's family on a furlough from the Army, remembered that the child had been playing on the bank of the creek. Then the body was found.

Artificial respiration was attempted. Dr, Harry Daugherty of Florence pronounced the child dead on the scene of the tragedy.

The boy's father is a stationary engineer at the Hotel Metropole.

He is survived by his parents; a sister, June Ann Hutchinson; his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Thera Brockman of Covington.

Arrangements for the funeral are being completed by the Ralph Stith funeral home, Florence.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, James' paternal grandparents were Harvey & Wyllie Hutchinson; Mr. & Mrs. Thera Brockman were his maternal grandparents.)

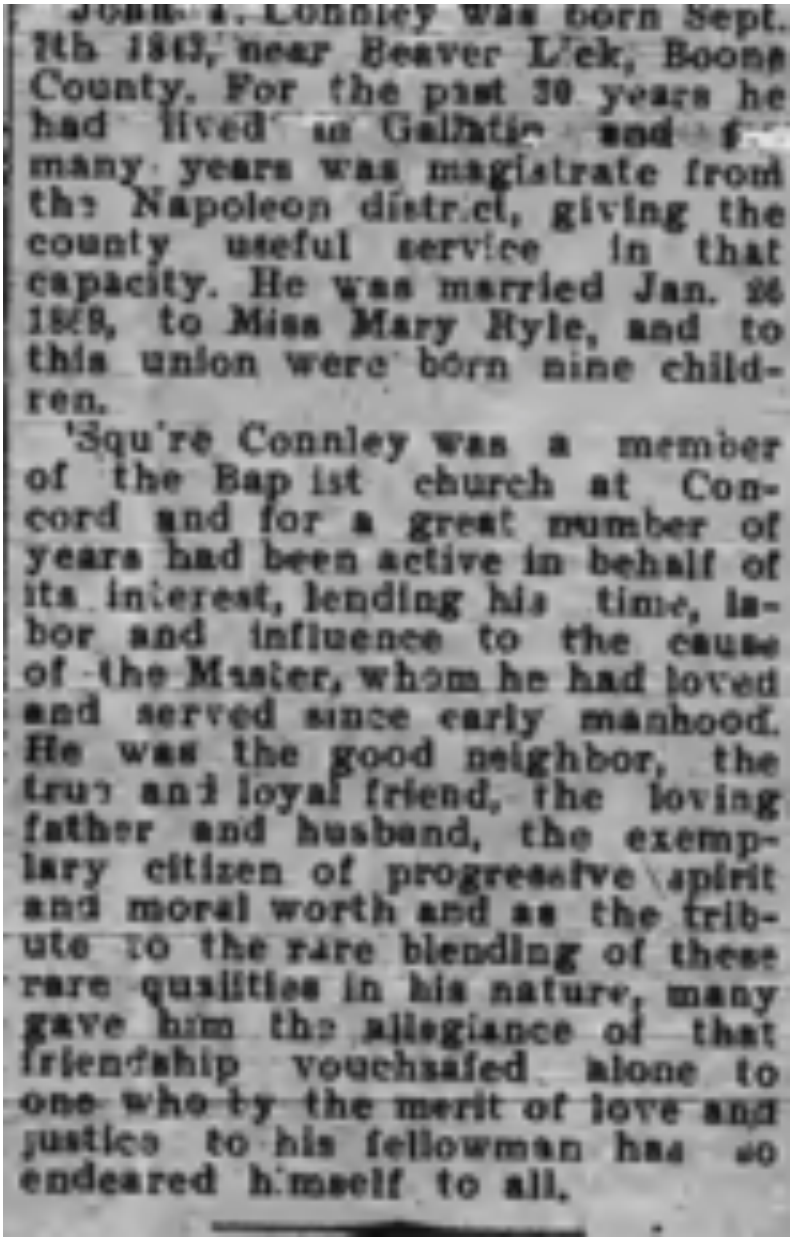
John T Conneley Dead.

Tuesday morning, Nov. 1st at about five o'clock, Squire John T. Connley died at his home near Napoleon, after a one day's illness. The cause of Squire Connley's death was valvular lockage of the heart, from which he had suffered since last spring. His health ever since that had been in a precarious condition, but it was thought that by careful husbanding of his strength and the refraining from over-exertion that his life could be prolonged for several years.

Early Monday morning he went to the barn to feed his stock, and soon returned to the house in an exhausted condition. It was seen that he was critically ill. Mr. Connley's condition showed some improvement during the day, responding to treatment in a satisfactory manner. During the night, however, he became much worse and passed peacefully away without pain or struggle, early the next morning. Up to the moment of death he was perfectly conscious and recognized all those about him.



John A. Connley was born Sept. 11th 1843, near Beaver Lick, Boone County. Obituary of William Ray 'Will' Rogers, ID = 19b1131

(Partially copied from dignitymemorial.com)

FEBRUARY 5, 1934 – JULY 3, 2021

William Ray Rogers passed while surrounded by his family at Riverside Methodist Hospital on July 3, 2021 at 3:30pm. Wil was 87 years young! He was born on Feb. 5, 1934 in Cincinnati, Ohio, to Howard and Marie Rogers from Glencoe Kentucky. He grew up in a loving home in Sharonville, Ohio, with a younger brother Samuel C. Rogers. His mother Marie constantly filled their home with extended family, especially during and after the Great Depression. Family was always the most important thing to Wil.

His first job, at 9 years of age, was as a caddy at Sharon Woods golf course. It awakened in him a lifelong love of golf. Ironically, that same Hamilton County Park would become the setting for the introduction and courtship of the young lady who would become his partner for the next 68 years. He married his teenage sweetheart the lovely … prom queen and head cheerleader at a rival school, at the young age of 19. Soon to be a parent, Wil enlisted in the Air Force and was initially stationed at Otis Air Force Base in the western part of Cape Cod, Massachusetts. It was here their first child … was born. After pursuing an Associates degree at the University of Cincinnati he left school and became a district manager for Chrysler Corporation in order to provide for his new family. From there he discovered the excitement and challenges of the restaurant business. Over the next several decades Wil established a name for himself at some of Cincinnaties finest eateries including: The Maisonette, La Normandie, Chesters Road House and The Sovereign to name a few. Known for his cowboy boots and hat he greeted many celebrities and dinner guests with a warm smile, firm handshake and impeccable hospitality. Outside of work Wil was a tough competitor on the golf course having a low handicap, monster drive, and sweet southpaw fade. Wil also, especially in later years, pursued woodworking and carving with a passion, creating many beautiful heirlooms for the family he loved.

Wil was preceded in death by his parents and younger brother Sam. He is survived by his wife, … three children, his daughter … of Upper Arlington, son … also of UA, and son … of Cincinnati. Also grandchildren … Plus the great grandchildren; …

Wil's love and legacy is his wonderful family.

Family and friends can visit from 5-6pm on Friday July 9, 2021 at Schoedinger Funeral home in Upper Arlington, at 1740 Zollinger Rd. 43221. Memorial Service following the visitation at 6 PM. Graveside Service will be held at 11 AM on Tuesday, July 13, 2021 at Oak Hill Cemetery in Cincinnati, Ohio. Donations in lieu of flowers can be made to: Disabled American Veterans at DAV.org

Obituary of Barbara Jane (Horman) Rogers, ID = 19b1132

ROGERS, BARBARA JANE, born 4/3/1938, passed away peacefully at her home at age 72.

She was very loyal to her church, Central Presbyterian, and will be missed by many.

She is survived by her daughter … and son … who both believe her to be the best mother anyone could have ever asked for. She is also survived by her six grandchildren, … and one great-grandchild … and her brother …

She was the closest thing humanly possible to an angel and always had a smile for everyone. Anyone who ever met her felt how compassion and grace flowed from her, and she refused to harbor ill feelings towards anyone. She was a RN for 20 years where she worked in the nursery. She planted many seeds of kindness in people during her time here and her family will always feel her presence.

WE LOVE YOU MOM!

A visitation will be held at the Funeral Home on Sunday, August 22, 2010 from 4:00pm to 7:00pm. Followed by a funeral service at 7:00pm.

Obituary of J(ames) Harold Connley, ID = 19b152

(Copied from The Kentucky Post, 19 July 1999, online.)

Funeral director J. Harold Connley, felt privileged to serve others

In Sanfordtown, undertaker J. Harold Connley Sr. and another man waded through chest-high water, carrying a body on their shoulders to move it from a flooded home.

In Mount Vernon, Mr. Connley led a funeral procession through a railroad tunnel to get to an isolated cemetery.

"We were hoping a train wouldn't come along," said Mr. Connley at the time.

One of the oldest funeral directors in the state, Harold Connley, 88, had a lifetime of stories tied to his chosen profession.

He died at 6:40 p.m. Friday at St. Elizabeth Hospice Unit, Covington.

When he entered the business during the Depression years, he was looking for a job with steady prospects and had a friend who was a funeral director.

After learning his craft, he decided to strike out on his own. He remodeled the first floor of his father's house on Southern Avenue in Latonia and opened Connley's Funeral Home in 1939.

Younger brother Jack was interested in the business, too, but first he headed off to fight in World War II a week after the funeral home's grand opening.

"He (Jack) was supposed to be there for one year, but that turned into four," said Harold Connley's wife, Lorena. "We thought Harold might have to go, so I took the exam so I could help run the business."

But Mr. Connley never went to war. When Jack Connley returned, the name of the home changed to Connley Brothers Funeral Home. Harold Connely and his wife lived above it.
In those days, funeral directors doubled as ambulance drivers, and Mr. Connley delivered injured and ill people to the hospital free of charge until the mid-'50s. Mr. Connley also often conducted funerals in the deceased's home.

His life away from the funeral home revolved around Summit Hills Country Club and St. Mark United Church of Christ. The brothers and their wives were devout churchgoers, said Helen Connley, Jack Connley's wife.

They were also golfers and known for comical skits at Summit Hills, she said.
The brothers once danced around dressed as women, balloons stuffed beneath their shirts, she said.

"They used to practice over at Harold's with the blinds pulled down over the windows," she said. "They didn't want anyone to see them and think they were crazy."

Summit Hills member Paul Humpert saw those acts. He remembers the Connleys mostly, though, for the great service and sympathetic handling of funerals.
"He'd greet you right at the door," Humpert said. "Always friendly, always cordial, always smiling."

"He thought it was a privilege to serve people in times of need," said Tony Motley, current funeral director of Connley Brothers Funeral Home.

In addition to his wife and sister-in-law, Mr. Connley leaves his son, Jim Connley of Crestview Hills; three grandchildren and one great-granddaughter. A daughter, Nancy Connley Deering, died in 1996.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Connley Brothers Funeral Home. Visitation will be from 4 to 8 p.m. today at the funeral home. Burial will be in Highland Cemetery, Fort Mitchell.
Memorials are suggested to St. Mark United Church of Christ, 38th and Park Ave., Covington, Ky. 41015; or St. Elizabeth Hospice Unit, 401 E. 20th St., Covington, Ky. 41014.

SOLVING A DEATH MYSTERY.

A Man Bequeaths Thirty Thousand Dollars and Passes Away.

[Special to The Indianapolis News.]

EVANSVILLE, Ind., September 3.—The police to-day are attempting to solve the mystery surrounding the death of Frank Ambrose. A week ago Ambrose came here and said he was a bookkeeper from St Louis, in search of work. He fell in with several gamblers, and on Thursday morning last was picked up by a policeman in outer Main street. He was unconscious and seemed to be suffering internally. As he was being carried to the hospital he said, in a semi-conscious way: "They threw me from the hospital." When he recovered consciousness Ambrose refused to say anything about his trouble, but called in a lawyer, who wrote his will. He gave most of his estate, which is valued at $30,000, to one Bigsby, at Springfield, Mo. Ambrose owned stock in the Bank of Springfield, and at one time, it is said, was president of a banking institution. Why he should seek to hide his identity is a mystery to the police. A telegram from Springfield asked that the body of Ambrose be shipped to that place. That the man was murdered is believed by some of the officers, but they have as yet no clew. Ambrose was thirty years old.

Memories of a tenacious life
Former mayor Ryle moves on

By Elizabeth Bailey

Whether he is described as a fun-loving practical jokester, a dedicated outdoorsman, or a tenacious work-aholic, former mayor Jim Ryle's family knows he made an impression wherever he went with his wholehearted approach to everything he did.

Ryle passed away Saturday, but his legacy, either directly or indirectly linked to him, will likely live forever, his family says.

In the Decatur County Community, he was involved in countless organizations, from two terms of service as the at-large city councilman through his time as mayor to his participation with St. Mary's Catholic Church; the Home Builders Association; Knights of Columbus; Conservation Club; REMC Board; St. Mary's Parish Council; President of the Board of Directors for September Place; developing Ryle Addition; coaching CYO Basketball, and spearheading the funding and building of Skybird Manor, September Place, and the Senior Center.

His family said he took on one project and organization after another through the years without ever losing sight of his family or a good time. Every night during dinner, his daughters remember, they were not to rise from the table to answer the phone, regardless how much it pained them. Every Sunday, his family recalls, they would go to church and spend the day together.

Although he was prolifically involved in the community and tirelessly dedicated to any job he undertook, he placed boundaries on his public and professional life to ensure time for his family and his other passions.

He loved to go fishing at Reel Foot Lake in Tennesee or spend time in his cabin at Wolf Creek Camp near North Vernon. He listened to all kinds of music and passed his listening versatility on to his children, they said. He also loved to create things from wood and reach at least one goal each day.

Many, his wife said, might have called him "Decatur County's oldest teenager." His children remember him being the coolest dad when they were young and being so much fun to be around that their friends would come over as much to visit him as their same-aged friends.

His family noted he was never one to follow the beaten path of what was expected of a mayor or a leader. He wasn't wrapped up in pleasing everyone. He simply saw what needed to be done and tackled any challenge to achieve his goals.

In the early 1960's, he and his father discussed developing land and constructing houses on it. They purchased the land and undertook the project that became a 90-house addition and a Greensburg landmark. As mayor, he began to see a need in the aging population of the county and saught to create an affordable home for the elderly. Named after the Neil Diamond song September Morn, September Place was a crusade that became an oasis. Ryle traveled all the way to Washington, D.C. to talk with the Postmaster General to ensure the residents would have mail service to their doorsteps, regardless the existing Federal regulations. He worked with the creation of a Housing Authority to enable subsidized housing and rental assistance for area residents and developed several programs for the Agency on Aging.

He respected the Kennedy family's dedication to needy families and embodied those pricipals in his dealings with Decatur County, his family remembers. He did not want to simply sit behind a desk as mayor. He wanted to travel the city and county to refer people to the services that could improve their lives.

When Bobby Kennedy traveled to Greensburg, it was Ryle, who was then serving on the City Council, who took up the task of being his driver. A few years ago, Ryle was interviewed by Thurston Clarke for his book "The Last Campaign," which chronicled the 83-day journey Kennedy undertook.

During the Blizzard of '78, he ensured his family was safe and then worked tirelessly until the National Guard arrived to ensure the people of Greensburg would be taken care of.

With as much as he built in the community, he also made memories with his family by taking time to decorate for the holidays and travel for vacations. His family said he never met a stranger and built relationships in every job he took on.

With as much fun as his family has to cherish in their memories, they also cherish the work ethic he instilled in his children by refusing to hand them money and making them earn it instead. This lesson was also taught through example, as he would never sign off on a house when he served as a home inspector unless it was truly sound.

Although his passing will leave behind the echoes of his lessons and his laughter, it will also leave a legacy to live up to, his family believes. The memories and the strong family - who both blessed him and felt the blessing of having him - will carry each member through.

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho (AP)—John C. Smith, 50, of Clarkston, Wash., was believed to have drowned Sunday when his auto plunged into Clearwater river a few miles above Greer, Idaho.

Obituaries of Mary Stewart (Kelso) Clegg Littell Treanor, ID = 1a6211

(Copied from the Press-Democrat, Petaluma, CA, 18 Dec. 2008, online.)

Mary Stewart Treanor

Mary Stewart Treanor, born September 5, 1909 in Xenia, Ohio, died in Santa Rosa, California on December 17, 2008. Mary Stewart Kelso grew up in Dayton, Ohio and was the adored only child of Charles Kelso and Belle Stewart Kelso. She was a proud member of the 1926 graduating class of Sweet Briar College. At Sweet Briar, she kindled her love of literature, philosophy, honed her appreciation of haute couture and awakened her life-long attention to elegance and style. Mary Stewart came to Santa Rosa in 1950 when her beloved husband, Dr. Joseph Jerome Littell, opened his office to practice ear, nose and throat medicine. In the 1950's and 1960's she was very involved in a myriad of organizations, including the Sonoma Medical Auxiliary and the Santa Rosa Symphony. She was particularly proud of her role as a founder of the Santa Rosa Symphony League Auxiliary, being a PEO sorority sister, and of her efforts to open a chapter of the Junior League in Sonoma County. Mary Stewart was an excellent chef and took great pleasure in entertaining her friends and family. She learned to ice skate late in life and loved ice dancing on the rink at Snoopy's. Following Dr. Littell's death, she moved to Belvedere and married, Dr. Walter (Wally) Treanor, a renowned physical medicine rehabilitation specialist. Their life together was filled with happiness, love and adventure. While they traveled the world, her favorite vacation was to The Little River Inn, in Mendocino. In this place of natural beauty, Mary Stewart's creativity would awaken as she worked the colors, whether watercolors or oils, on her canvas, bringing to life Scottish landscapes or their cottage at the Little River Inn. In the mid 1980s she returned to Santa Rosa when Dr. Treanor decided to semi-retire and join Dr. Carl Anderson's practice. Before the boxes were unpacked, Mary Stewart reconnected with old friends and re-joined her Junior League Sustainers, as well as the Santa Rosa Symphony Auxiliary. She was also very involved in the early years of fundraising for the Green Music Center. Her only child, Carolyn, "Lynn" predeceased her, as did her grandson, Todd Peterson, and a step-daughter, Dona Treanor Tunnell. She is survived by her granddaughter, Gail Sebile and two great-grandsons, Jason and Cameron. Mary Treanor

Mary Stewart Treanor was proud she had helped found the Santa Rosa Symphony League 50 years ago.

Treanor lived to the age of 99 and saw the striking growth of Santa Rosa over the past half century. In that time, she also helped create a local branch of the Junior League and was involved in helping raise funds for the Green Music Center at Sonoma State University.

She died Wednesday at a Santa Rosa retirement community.

"She was very committed to culture in the sense of art and music," said her stepdaughter, Wanden Treanor of Greenbrae.

Treanor was born Mary Stewart Kelso on Sept. 5, 1909, in Xenia, Ohio. She graduated in 1926 from Sweet Briar College in Virginia.

She married and outlived two husbands, both physicians.

Together with her first husband of about 30 years, Dr. Joseph Jerome Littell, she came to Santa Rosa in 1950. Eight years later, she joined the efforts to form the Symphony League. She also became active in the Sonoma County Medical Auxiliary.

In the early 1970s, following Littell's death, she moved to Belvedere and later married Dr. Walter Treanor.

She returned with her husband to Santa Rosa in the mid-1980s, where Walter Treanor helped to open the North Coast Rehabilitation Center. In those years, she rejoined the Symphony League and entered Sustainer Emeritus status with the Junior League.

She also will be remembered for her support to both her husbands and her family.

"She gave my dad some of the happiest years of his life," Wanden Treanor said.

Though a world traveler, her favorite vacation spot was the Little River Inn on the Mendocino County coast. There she enjoyed painting oil or watercolor scenes on canvas.

She was about 60 years old when she took up ice skating and ice dancing at the Redwood Empire Ice Arena.

Survivors include two more stepchildren, Jamie Treanor of New York City and June Whited of Petaluma; a granddaughter, Gail Sebile of Cameron, N.C.; and two great-grandchildren.

A memorial gathering will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Spring Lake Village Chapel.

Biography of James C. Black, ID = 11112

Among the substantial farmers of Muscatine county should be named James C. Black, who has passed his entire life in the county and from his earliest recollection has been identified with the interests of this section. Born in Goshen township, May 11, 1855, he is a son of Arthur and Adaline (Anderson) Black, the former of whom was born in Lexington. Kentucky, and the latter in Virginia. They were married in this state and soon afterward settled on a farm in Goshen township, upon which they continued during the remainder of their lives. The father died March 22, 1891, at the age of eighty-four years, while his wife passed away January 24, 1893. He was a thoroughly competent farmer and acquired three hundred and twenty acres of land, which he cultivated to excellent advantage. Four children were born to him and his wife, namely; Marcellus, who died at the age of nine years; James C., the subject of this review; George W., of Muscatine county: and Margaret J., now the wife of L. R. Moore, who is living retired at Muscatine.

James C. Black acquired his education in the district schools and was reared amidst environment which may be truly regarded as the most favorable that could be desired for an aspiring young man. He remained with his parents until their deaths and then took charge of a part of the homestead, which he cultivated for thirteen years, when he came into possession of one-half of the place. He remained upon his farm until 1907 and then purchased a handsome residence in West Liberty, where he is now living in the enjoyment of a well earned and honorable retirement. By good management in the beginning of his business career and also by making a wise use of opportunities, he, years ago, became recognized as one of the substantial men of the county, and by his honorable business career he has set an example that is well worthy of imitation by young men who desire to gain the respect of those with whom they are associated.

On January 31, 1894, Mr. Black was united in marriage to Miss Isabel Moore, born in Jefferson county, Ohio, November 22, 1863, a daughter of Alexander and Roseanna (Calhoun) Moore, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Pennsylvania. They were married in the Keystone state and subsequently lived a short time in Ohio, then coming to Cedar county, Iowa, and later to Muscatine county. After a short experience in the mercantile business, Mr. Moore removed to a farm in Goshen township, which he rented for eight years. By his industry and perseverance he acquired the capital necessary to purchase eighty acres, which he cultivated until his retirement and removal to Atalissa in 1888. He died in 1895, his wife having been called away eight years previously, in 1887. To Mr. and Mrs. Moore seven children were born, namely: Mary Alice, now of West Liberty; Amanda and Ellen, twins, the former now the wife of William Bilby of Oklahoma, and the latter now Mrs. James Henderson of Wayne county, Iowa; Lydia Ann, the wife of Charles C. Croxen of Atalissa; Isabel, now Mrs. James C. Black; Adaline, who died at the age of twenty-four years; and George A., of West Liberty. One child, Arthur A., has come to bless the home of Mr. and Mrs. Black. He was born November 30, 1895, and is now a student in the West Liberty high school.

Politically Mr. Black is identified with the democratic party and fraternally he is a valued member of the Knights of Pythias Lodge of West Liberty. He and his family attend the Presbyterian church. He has been successful from the beginning of his business career, not having been obliged to pass through the fluctuations of fortune that fall to the lot of the majority of men. He possesses sound judgment, a genial disposition, and many other qualities that attract friends and is greatly esteemed by young and old in a section where his life has been as an open book for over half a century.

Biography of George W. Black, ID = 11113

The owner of three productive farms and thoroughly qualified by experience and ability to conduct successfully several lines of business, George W. Black, of Goshen township, has shown unusual capacity as a man of affairs. He succeeds in anything he undertakes because he devotes to it the energy and judgment necessary for success.

Born in Muscatine county, January 30, 1859, he is a son of Arthur and Adaline M. (Anderson) Black, the former of whom was a native of Kentucky and the latter of Loudoun county, Virginia. They were married in Iowa City, January 18, 1853, and immediately afterward the father entered one hundred and sixty acres of land in Muscatine county, upon which he took up his residence, continuing there until his death, which occurred. March 22, 1891. He was a resourceful man of laudable ambition and marked ability, and became the owner of three hundred and twenty acres in this county. The mother was called away January 24, 1893. There were four children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Black: Marcella. who died at the age of nine years; James C., now living retired at West Liberty; George W., the subject of this review; and Margaret J., now the wife of L. R. Moore, of Muscatine. Iowa.

George W. Black received his early education in the district schools and under the direction of his father became thoroughly familiar with the various details of agriculture and stock-raising. After arriving at manhood he continued as manager upon the home farm and engaged quite extensively in feeding and shipping stock. He continued to live upon the family homestead after his marriage, owning a half interest in the farm until 1897, when he took charge of a grain elevator at Atalissa, operating it with a high degree of success for ten years. However, he continued even more extensively in the occupation to which he had been reared, and about l907 he purchased one hundred and twenty-four acres of land where he now lives. He is the owner of four hundred and sixteen acres in Muscatine and Cedar Counties, a large part of which has been brought to a high degree of cultivation, so that he is enabled to secure the best results from his work. He is also identified with other interests and has been president of the Atalissa Savings Bank ever since its organization.

On the 20th of September, 1899, Mr. Black was united in marriage to Miss Margaret T. Moylan, who was born in Muscatine county, February 7, 1878, a. daughter of Edward and Anna (Fitzpatrick) Moylan. The father was a native of Ireland and the mother of Cedar county, Iowa. They were married in Iowa City and are now living upon a farm of one hundred and fifty acres near that place. Mr. Moylan is a veteran of the Civil war, having served most creditably in the Thirty-fifth Iowa Volunteers. In his family were ten children: William Joseph, now engaged in the mercantile business at Muscatine; Minnie Helen, who is the wife of Thomas McCarthy, a hotel keeper of Cedar Rapids, Iowa; James, a resident of West Liberty; Margaret T., now Mrs. George W. Black; Frank J., also of West Liberty; Bessie, who died at the age of nineteen years and six months; and Henry A., Alice, Ralph P. and Gertrude, all of whom are living at home. Mr. and Mrs. Black have become the parents of two children: Helen A., born July 10, 1900; and Anna Elizabeth, born November 22, 1908.

Mr. Black is not identified with any religious denomination, but his wife is a valued member of the Catholic church. Politically he gives his earnest support to the democratic party and the esteem in which he is held by his neighbors is indicated by the fact that he served as mayor of Atalissa for six years. Socially he is a strong factor in the community and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic lodge at Atalissa. A man of clear perception, great energy and of sound judgment, he has gained leadership through his own innate business talents, and his example has been a powerful incentive to younger men. Few residents of Muscatine county understand the possibilities of this part of the state any better than he and in the estimation of his friends the future holds for him greater rewards than any he has yet gained.

Biography of William L. Black, ID = 111412

Among the native sons of Muscatine county who have here attained an honorable name is W. L. Black, of Atalissa. He was born on a farm about two miles from Atalissa, July 27, 1866, and is a son of James and Margaret (Woods) Black. The father was born near Boone Lake, Kentucky, and, like many other ambitious citizens of that state, emigrated to Iowa, locating in 1854 in Muscatine county, where he engaged in farming for thirty-three years. In 1887 he removed to Audubon county, Iowa, where he lived until called to his final rest at the age of sixty-four years. In politics he was a democrat and assisted to the extent of his ability in advancing the interest of the party. He was a man of good character and devoted his entire life to agriculture and stock-raising. The mother of our subject was a native of Indiana, but was married in Muscatine county and is now living with a daughter at Kingfisher, Oklahoma.

W. L. Black was educated in the district schools of Pike township, Muscatine county, and grew up on the home farm, where he became thoroughly familiar with all the details of farm work. At twenty-two years of age he began to farm on his own account near Nichols, Iowa, removing in 1905 to a location south of Atalissa, where he remained for two years. Being attracted to mercantile pursuits, he took up his residence in Atalissa in 1907, and since that time has been engaged in the grain and coal business. He is the owner of the building in which the business is conducted and also of a handsome residence in Atalissa.

In February, 1888, Mr. Black was united in marriage to Miss Ruby Nicola, a resident of Nichols, Iowa. Three children have blessed this union, Homer, Elsie and Isabel, all of whom are living at home. Mr. Black has been successful both as a farmer and as a business man. Being quiet and unassuming, he has never sought notoriety nor courted public favor. He has won his way by the exercise of good judgment and sound discrimination and, possessing high character and laudable ambition, he has not made any serious mistakes. As a public-spirited citizen he willingly lends his aid to every worthy cause. He is a stanch adherent of the principles and candidates of the democratic party and fraternally is identified with the Masonic lodge of Nichols, the chapter of West Liberty, Iowa, and the Modern Woodmen of America

Biography of Benjamin James Black, ID = 111413

Few farmers living in Audubon county are better known than Benjamin J. Black, who is at present serving as county supervisor of this county. Mr. Black for years has been prominent in the educational, political and civic life of Audubon county and few of the younger farmers of this county have accomplished more in the same length of time than he and few are more deserving of the confidence and esteem of the people of this county. Mr. Black owns eighty acres of land in Melville township and three hundred and twenty acres in North Dakota, and is farming a total of two hundred and thirty-two acres in Melville township.

Benjamin J. Black was born in Muscatine county, Iowa, on October 8, 1874, the son of James and Mary (Woods) Black, the former of whom was a native of Indiana, and the latter of whom came from Kentucky. When James Black was fourteen years of age he came with his parents from Indiana to Iowa, locating in Muscatine county, where he grew to manhood, remaining there until 1888, when he came to Audubon county, and located on the farm where Benjamin]., his son, is now living. He purchased eighty acres of land and farmed that until his death in 1908. His widow is still living. Their four children were William, Mary, Emma and Benjamin J.

Benjamin J. Black received his education largely in the public schools of Audubon county. After completing the course in the common schools he took a business course at the Capital City Commercial College at Des Moines. Thus admirably equipped for his life's vocation, he returned to his home in Audubon county, and took up farming with his father, and was thus engaged until his marriage in 1903, at which time he rented a farm and farmed rented land for three years. Upon the death of his father, he purchased the home place, and has since been living there. Since buying the farm in 1908, he has invested approximately thirty-five hundred dollars in various kinds of improvements. Mr. Black annually raises eighty acres of corn and feeds at least one hundred head of hogs. He also raises forty acres of hay.

On November 26, 1903, when Benjamin J. Black was twenty-nine years old, he was married to Martha J. Simmons, daughter of Joseph and Mary (Goff) Simmons, to which happy union six children, Howard W., Everett A., Lucile, William, Robert and Martha E. have been born. All of these children are living at home with their parents, and they make a very happy group, in fact one of the most popular families in Melville township.

Mr. Black is popular in fraternal circles of his county and is a member of the Masonic lodge at Audubon and of the Modern Woodmen of America. A Democrat, he is the present county supervisor of Audubon county, and has served as school director and township clerk and as road supervisor.

Few men can be said to have a wider interest in matters which concern the public generally than Mr. Black. Interested in education, in good roads, in politics, and in the improvement of community spirit, he is a worthy citizen of Audubon county and one of the leading farmers and citizens of Melville township.

Biography of Robert Connely Black, ID = 11143

For almost six decades Robert C. Black has been a resident of Muscatine county, and in the years that have come and gone he has witnessed remarkable changes in the development, progress and improvement that has been carried on here. He is now living retired in Nichols and is justly accorded a place among the prominent and representative citizens, for he belongs to that class of men whose enterprising spirit has been used not alone for his own benefit, but has also advanced the general good and prompted public prosperity by his ably managed individual interests, thus placing this section of the country on a par with the older east.

Robert C. Black was born in Boone county, Kentucky, on the 20th of April, 1841, a son of Benjamin and Frances (Moore) Black. The father was also a native of Kentucky, while the mother claimed Virginia as the state of her nativity. In 1852 the family made the journey from Kentucky to Muscatine county, Iowa, with team and covered wagon, and here the father entered land from the government, continuing to cultivate the same until his death, which occurred in 1888. His wife had preceded him to the home beyond, her death occurring in 1886. Unto them were born ten children, but only three of the number are now living, these being: Robert C., of this review; John, also a resident of Muscatine county; and Arthur L., who makes his home in Alabama.

Robert C. Black was reared in his native state to the age of eleven years, and his education, which was begun there in the common schools, was continued in the schools of Muscatine county. He remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, having in the meantime become thoroughly familiar with all of the hardships and experiences incident to life in a new country. At that time he started out to make his own way in the world, working first as a common laborer in Wisconsin. After a brief period spent in that state he returned to Muscatine county and operated rented land for a number of years. He was energetic and persevering, and, carefully saving his money, be was at length enabled to purchase land in Pike township. At first he bad but a small tract, but as the years passed he kept adding to his holdings until his possessions now embrace thirteen hundred acres of valuable land in Muscatine county. He continued to engage in general agricultural pursuits throughout a long period and in connection with his farming made a specialty of feeding hogs and cattle, which added materially to his annual profits. In 1897 he put aside his business cares and removed to Nichols, where he built a fine modern residence. He now merely gives supervision to his invested interests, still retaining possession of his farm lands, and he likewise owns a half block of ground in the village. In his business affairs he has ever displayed sound judgment and an ability to overcome all obstacles and difficulties that beset his path, and in this lies the secret of his success.

In 1873 occurred the marriage of Mr. Black and Miss Mary M. Johns, who was born in Muscatine county, September 8, 1849, a daughter of Hosea and Elizabeth (Nichols) Johns. Her father was born in Maryland, while her mother was a native of Ohio, but their marriage occurred in Muscatine county. Mrs. Black was the only child born of that union and by her marriage she has become the mother of three children, one son and two daughters; B. H., the only son, is a resident of Muscatine county. Nannie E., who was born May I, 1879, became the wife of B. A. Kirchner, a merchant of Nichols, but departed this life on the 26th of March, 1901, when twenty-two years of age. Clara Bell, who was born in 1883, died in 1900, when but seventeen years old. Both were laid to rest in the cemetery at Nichols.

In his political views Mr. Black is a democrat but aside from serving as school director and as treasurer of the board he has filled no public office. He and his wife are Presbyterians in religious faith, but they now attend the Methodist church. In former years he led an extremely busy and active life, and the rest which he is now enjoying is richly merited, for it has come to him as the direct result of earnest and persistent toil.

He lived in Kentucky until he was eleven years old, and his education was continued in the schools of Muscatine county after he made the trip with his family from Kentucky in a covered wagon. When he became of age, he started to work as a laborer in Wisconsin, floating logs down the river to a saw mill in Muscatine. Later they moved north of Nichols, and still later they built a large home on the farm two miles north of town. Their children attended Shiloh school. In their later years they moved to a new house in town.

Robert C. Black died 30 May 1927, and Mary Melissa Black made her home with her granddaughter, Frances Kirchner Elder, until her death 30 January 1941.

Benjamin Hozea Black was born 23 July 1874 and died 16 December 1937 in Des Moines, Iowa. He was married 16 December 1896 to Mame Welch. This marriage ended in divorce. Ben Black lived in the Nichols community his entire life until 1931, when he moved to Des Moines to accept a position at the state house. He had been elected to the state legislature for two terms, representing Muscatine county. He was a member of the Methodist church.

Clara Bell Black was born 13 May 1883 and died 28 August 1900. Clara fell in the barn on the farm and became an invalid.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, Robert & Mary were married on the 9th, not the 25th; Mary died on the 31st, not the 30th; their son Benjamin's middle name was usually spelled Hozaih, not Hozea.)

She had been complaining some the previous evening of a pain in her head but retired about 9 o’clock thinking sleep would bring relief. About midnight her husband was awakened by her moaning. He awakened Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black, her parents, and called Dr. Nolan and Dr. Carl but all help proved fruitless. She did not regain consciousness and died about an hour later. She leaves, beside her husband, two small children, the youngest only 17 days old.

“As the news of the sudden death spread over the village in the early morning, sadness prevailed everywhere. Many tears have fallen in sympathy with the father, mother and husband so suddenly bereft. Biography of Cyrus Edgar Adams, ID = 114361

(Found online at F-A-G, created by Suz Lew; bio contributed by Linda Wallis, Cyrus' granddaughter.)

Son of Owen Spencer Adams and Emma Elizabeth Beck. Husband of Sarah Jane McClusky. Father of Sylvia Edna Adams and Cyrus Edgar "Ed" Adams, Junior.

Cyrus Edgar Adams was born the 1st of November 1887 in Pawnee, Sangamon County, Illinois. He was the eldest of nine children of Owen Spencer Adams and Emma Elizabeth Beck. His family moved to Arkansas in about 1910, purchasing a farm next to the McClusky farm. He and Sarah Jane McClusky were married on the 18th of November 1918. They became the parents of two children, Sylvia Adams Wallis and Cyrus Edgar Adams Jr.

He must have left home at an early age, because he was in San Francisco during the 1901 earthquake when he was only fourteen. This was an experience he never forgot and rarely would talk about. Cyrus traveled to several cities before settling down in Los Angeles. In 1917, he was living in Santa Barbara, California when he registered for the draft.

During World War I, Cyrus volunteered for the Los Angeles Police Department as they were short of police officers at that time. Cyrus was unable to go to war due to an old back injury.

During the Great Depression he held several different jobs, including working for Llewellyn Iron Works, and running a real estate office on Hoover Street. He also worked for Standard Oil, until at the age of 40 when he was fired for refusing to lie about his age.

He then purchased one-half interest in Bell's Transfer Service for $5.00. However, after he had a disagreement with his partner, Cyrus bought him out for $10.00 - which included the truck. The name was changed to Adams Independent Transfer. He sold the business in 1946.

Later Cyrus worked as an armed guard for CBS radio until he fell and broke his hip. He had difficulty due to an allergic reaction to the silver pin put in his hip and had to go on Social Security.

Cyrus's passion was raising flowers. He especially loved lilies and camellias. His favorite plant, a black lily, was given to his daughter and moved to several different houses before it was "no more." He grafted and created his own camellias and gave them away as gifts.

Mr. Adams died on the 4th of November 1953 in Los Angeles, California.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, he died on the 14th, not the 4th.)

Biography of Sarah Jane (McClusky) Adams, ID = 114361

(Found online at F-A-G, created by Suz Lew; bio contributed by Linda Wallis, Sarah's granddaughter.)

Daughter of John Larkin McClusky and Ellen Adaline Cranshaw. Wife of Cyrus Edgar Adams. Mother of Sylvia Edna Adams and Cyrus Edgar "Ed" Adams, Junior.

Sarah Jane McClusky was born the 25th of September 1899 in Lawrence City, Arkansas. Her parents were John Larkin McClusky (1872-1929) and Ellen Adelade Crawshaw (1876-1903). At the age of three her mother passed away after a period of illness. Sarah's father remarried and she was raised by her stepmother with a group of younger half siblings.

When she was about ten years old, the Adams family moved to the farm next door. At the age of nineteen she moved to Los Angeles, California to marry Cyrus, the eldest Adams son. It is not clear if she had actually met him prior to the marriage, as he was considerably older and not living in Arkansas at that time.

Sarah had a difficult time adjusting to life in a "big" city. She lost her carefully made wedding dress when arriving at the train station in Los Angeles. After her marriage, she almost burned down their home because she had never used a gas stove. She had never lived in an unsegregated environment and didn't realize she was allowed to ride the same busses as minorities. Refrigerators were unheard of, and the ice man made rounds, delivering ice to customers who placed signs in their windows.

Sarah and Cyrus became the parents of two children born a year apart. Sylvia Edna was born in 1919 and Cyrus Edgar Jr. was born in 1920. Sarah became involved in their school's PTA's. The family was also very involved in church activities.

Life was not always easy. At one point the family had to be quarantined due to Rheumatic Fever. Her father was not allowed in the home, and Sarah and the children were not allowed to leave. They survived the Great Depression by working hard and making every penny count.

In the late 1960's Sarah moved to Riverside and joined the Salvation Army, an organization with which she was involved for the rest of her life. She attended the Salvation Army Church and at Christmas time could be found ringing one of the donation bell stands.

In about 1970 Sarah decided to make one last trip to Arkansas to see her brothers and sisters. She drove all the way there and back by herself. She died at the age of seventy-seven on the 27th of December 1976 in Anaheim, California.

Biography of Sylvia Edna (Adams) Wallis, ID = 1143611

(Found online at F-A-G, originally created by Barbara LeClaire, maintained by Linda Wallis; bio probably written by Linda Wallis.)

Sylvia Edna Adams, the eldest of two children, was born to Cyrus Edgar Adams and Sarah Jane McClusky on the 12th of September 1919 in Los Angeles, California. Her brother was born a year later.

She grew up in Los Angeles, attending 66th Street Elementary School, John Muir Jr. High, and Fremont High School. Sylvia's high school graduation was celebrated with a trip to Catalina. She later attended McKay's Business College and the College of the Pacific before becoming a student nurse at San Joaquin General Hospital near San Francisco.

However, Sylvia wasn't able to complete her nursing training as she was required to stop when she got married. She and Robert Hall Wallis were married on Valentine's Day in 1946. They had grown up together as Bob was the younger brother of her best friend, Mary Wallis Parker. Their first home was in Elsinore near Bob's Aunt Virginia and Uncle Frank. They then briefly lived in Palm Springs, Blythe, and West Riverside before settling in Sunnymead in 1954.

When her children were little Sylvia was a homemaker, but that didn't stop her from volunteering at Well Baby Clinics, as an election official, and as a block parent. However much of her energy was spent working with the schools through the PTA. She sewed drill team uniforms, typed and ran off school newsletters and helped chaperone many school activities including field trips and skating parties. An excellent seamstress, she made all of clothes for her children and crocheted dresses for all the new baby girls in her extended family and for friends.

When her daughters were older she worked as a secretary at Magnolia Baptist Church in Riverside, a position she held for almost twenty-five years through several senior pastors.

In 1980 she and her husband were able to move out to the old town of Moreno, next door to her daughter, Sue. This permitted Sylvia to become very involved in the upbringing of her granddaughters whom she was even able to take to work with her as their kindergarten was in the school next door to the church.

Sylvia's life wasn't easy as she major surgery every two years and had to face the death of her third child in 1954. Her last six years were spent living at Integrated Care Communities in Moreno Valley. Even though her memory was fading, she never forgot her Savior and she often carried her Bible around with her. Sylvia died on the 29th of September 2009 just two weeks after turning 90 years old. She is buried at the Riverside National Cemetery with her husband of forty-six years.

ROBERT A. CONNELLY, Tippecanoe Township

Thomas Connelly, the father of this gentleman, was born in Charlottesville, Va., in the year 1787, and his mother, Elizabeth H. Connelly, was born near the same place, in 1791. In 1805, they moved from Virginia to Kentucky, remaining citizens of that State for a period of thirty years. In 1835, they came to Indiana, and located in Tippecanoe County. They were energetic farmers, and were among the earliest settlers of the township in which they resided. Both were exemplary members of the Christian Church, and were highly esteemed by all their neighbors. Thomas Connelly died in the year 1859. His wife survived him fourteen years, when, in 1873, she, too, was called away by death.

Their son Robert was born in Montgomery County, Ky., September 29, 1819. During his boyhood he was deprived of educational privileges, and those enjoyed in later years were of a very limited nature. For his education he has been dependent, mainly, upon his studious disposition and his aptness in acquiring knowledge. He learned the trade of carpenter and joiner, and has followed that occupation successfully for thirty years.

On the 15th day of January, 1843, he married Miss Kate Leslie. The marriage ceremony was performed in the city of La Fayette, by Elder John O'Kane, of the Christian Church. The parents of this lady, Peter and Susan Leslie, were natives of Lehigh County, Penn. They subsequently removed from that county, locating in Eaton, Preble Co., Ohio, where their daughter Kate was born, July 18, 1825. Both parents are now deceased, the father having died in 1855, and the mother in 1869.

For many years, Robert Connelly and his wife have been active members of the Christian Church, and their Christian principles are shown forth in their daily life. Generous and charitable, they have not failed to secure the esteem and confidence of all by whom they are surrounded; and the many charitable acts of their lives will ever be held in grateful remembrance by needy recipients whose wants have been supplied by them.

(Note by Roger R. Connelly: I have been able to confirm all the names, dates, and places of events mentioned in this biography of my great-great-grandfather except for Charlottesville (in Albemarle County, VA) as the birth place of Thomas. All evidence points to Augusta County, not Albemarle County, as the residence of his parents in 1787.

The surname on the gravestones for both Thomas and his wife Elizabeth is spelled Conley and that is how I have spelled it in my history.)

ROBERT A. CONNELLY, one of the highly esteemed citizens of Tippecanoe Township, and a representative of one of the pioneer families of Tippecanoe County, was born in Montgomery County, Kentucky, September 29, 1819, a son of Thomas and Elizabeth H. Connelly, who immigrated to this county in the year 1835. During his boyhood our subject was deprived of educational privileges, and later in life they were of a very limited nature. Thus his education is due to his own studious disposition, and his aptness in acquiring knowledge. He learned the trade of carpenter and joiner, an occupation he followed successfully for many years. January 15, 1843, he was married in La Fayette, by Elder John 0'Kane, of the Christian Church, to Miss Kate Leslie, a daughter of Peter and Susan Leslie, who were natives of Lehigh County, Pennsylvania. Her parents subsequently removed to Eaton, Preble County, Ohio, where Mrs. Connelly was born July 18, 1825. Her father died in the year 1855, her mother surviving the death of her husband until 1869. For many years Mr. and Mrs. Connelly have been active members of the Christian church, and their Christian principles are shown forth in their daily life. Generous and charitable they have not failed to secure the esteem and confidence of all by whom they are surrounded, and their many charitable acts will ever be held in grateful remembrance by all who have been benefitted (sic) by them. Nine children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Connelly, three of whom are deceased - Susan E., Robert E. and Nancy M. Those living are named: Thomas W., Peter L., Frances Emily, Sally E., Kate E. and Joe Ella. Thomas W. married Miss Frank Cain, January 14, 1868; Peter L. was married to Linnie Dunlap, June 9, 1870, by Elder Graham; Amos Morehouse to Miss Sallie E. Connelly March 22, 1877, by Brother John Kolb; Clark Pearson to Kate E. Connelly, April 12, 1885, by Brother Aaron Walker, of Kokomo, and Miss. Joe Ella to Hervey P. Rothrock, April 10, 1887, by Brother John Kolb. Besides their own children they have taken to their home and cared for as their own, a number of orphan and indigent children. Mrs. Connelly, or Aunt Kate as she is familiarly called, is well known for her motherly nature and kindness of heart, and her many acts of kindness will long be remembered. Mr. Connelly has disposed of considerable of his land, yet still owns his pleasant home farm where he has fifty acres of choice land. His father, Thomas Connelly, was born in Charlottesville, Virginia, in the year 1787, his mother being born near the same place in 1791. In 1805 they moved from Virginia to Kentucky, remaining citizens of that State a period of thirty years. In 1835 they came to Indiana, and located in Tippecanoe County. They were energetic farmers, and among the first settlers of the township in which they resided. Both were exemplary members of the Christian church, and were highly esteemed by all their neighbors. Thomas Connelly died in the year 1859. His widow survived him fourteen years, when, in 1873, she too was called away by death.

Biographical Sketch of Ralph Robert Connelly, ID = 1325252

written by his son Barr Connelly

About Ralph: He was honest, trustworthy and loyal and a great DAD and husband. Dad's handshake was worth a signed contract today. He had a loyal following of 60-70 regular customers. He always said: I run the business – your mother runs the house. He gave Evelyn a $50.00 allowance each month. He would always say "if only she could stay within that" – then he would laugh! He knew; antiquing, golfing, bowling, bridge club and the Methodist Church cost dearly. Ralph liked his athletics. He was a football, basketball, softball player while growing up. He played softball with the brickyard teams. He sponsored a men's bowling team for him and his buddies and a women's bowling team for Evelyn's friends. Connelly's Standard Service!

A fond memory I have is – Dad coming home from the station, eating and he and I walking over to Roosevelt Stadium to watch a semi-pro baseball game. We lived only 2 blocks from the diamond.

My second fondest memory is – he and Mother never missed one of my football or basketball games during my entire high school career.

Ralph also enjoyed his monthly poker group, each month they would play at someone's home. When it was played at our house – they played in both the living room and dining room area and Mother was the hostess.

My father's best friend and great bowling buddy was Vern Herzog. Herzie was known to drive into Dad's station and the two of them would leave to practice bowling for 1 ½ to 2 hours at Dicks Lanes.

I remember too, Dick Hubbard, who not only played poker and bowled with Dad, but was a faithful employee of Father's for years. I worked along side of Dick from 1956 to 1972. He was Father's right hand man.

Dad enlisted in the Army in 1944 as a 38 yr. old guy. He and his business partner, Harry Arnold, had agreed to close up the station and join the service for WWII. Well, Dad passed his physical and went to basic training and on into Italy, north of Rome was where he was when the war ended. Harry went down to enlist after Father; he did not pass his physical exam and so he stayed home and kept the gas station running.

My father, I know would not have retired from the station at age 65 as he did. He retired only because of an onset of diabetes. He loved his work, his customers and got so much joy and satisfaction from helping his regular customers.

His regular customers would charge all their expenses on a credit slip and settle up with father every month or whatever was best for them.

I love to tell the story of - how Dad and Johnny Neibergal, a grocer, did their business together. Mother would call on the phone and put in her grocery order which Johnny would fill and then deliver the groceries to our house. Johnny then drove to the station, filled up his delivery truck and settled the bill with Dad. There was never an exchange of money, just acknowledgment of there was a "credit" or "debit"! At some time they would settle up, I 'm sure, but otherwise their records just continued on as a + or -.

Another of Dad's regular customers who charged every item was a Milwaukee Railroad man who did not own a car or even have a driver's license. Whenever he was out with his lady friends, he would have them come into the station for gas, oil, grease, tires, etc. He put all the charges on his account with Dad. He always paid his account as Dad would cash his Milwaukee Railroad check each month.

Dad paid Roger .75 an hour when Roger worked for him. When I began working for him in 1956, he paid me $1.25/hour.

He loved his favorite car – a 1952 Packard. He did buy a new car in 1962 – a Chevy Biscayne. He always had a "junker" car for his use at the station.

I recall using used drain oil to burn out 2 tree stumps in our yard on 15ht Street.

Dad also used drain oil to oil down a dusty South Carolina road near our house on 15th Street.

Their monthly house payment on 15th Street was $25.00. They bought the home on Clover Lane for cash (used his Government E-Bonds).

My high school basketball team pushed Mom and Dad's car free from being buried in a snowdrift at Highway 18 and Highway 69 – we were all coming home in a terrible snowstorm from Webster City.

Biography of Mark Paul Pirkl, ID = 1325253

MARK PAUL PIRKL

Chain Reaction of European Politics Brought Pirkls to U. S.

This is one of a series of articles on Northwestern States Portland Cement oldtimers sponsored by that company. It appeared in "Run of the Mill," employe publication.

When the angry French revolted against their king, Louis Philippe, in 1848 and established, for a second time, a republican government of sorts, a whole series of violent chain reactions started erupting all over middle Europe, particularly in the Germanic states and Austria, which had taken the old kingdom of Bohemia under its double-eagled standards.

Before that fateful year was over, the happenings in France had released a spirit of revolt all over the European continent. There were bloody uprisings in Berlin and Vienna and an attempt was made by the Bohemians to re-establish their ancient independence and throw off the chains of Austrian rule. There was a violent conflict between the forces of the crown and the revolting Czechs.

Prague, the capitol of Bohemia in her old days of glory, was bombarded. Eventually the insurrection was suppressed but from that day until the Republic of Czechoslovakia was formed after World War I, there was a constant and bitter struggle for ascendancy between the Slavonic Czechs and the Austrian Germans.

Rough on Europe

All those unhappy and bloody events were tough on Europe but they were to prove a godsend and a boon to America. A great movement of peace and liberty loving Europeans toward the western world began to gather momentum.

Among them were thousands and thousands of good Bohemians who, sickened by the internal strife and monarchial abuses, sacrificed their possessions and their homes, broke the ties of centuries in old Bohemia and sailed for the new world and a freer and happier life in the United States.

There are no better Americans than the sons and grandsons of those Czech families who have now become such an integral part of our citizenry. Their love of freedom, their staunch religious and industrious characteristics and their respect for the rights of others have made tremendous contributions to hundreds of American communities.

It is fortunate for all of us that they came and for "Northwestern States" because we have shared in America's good fortune. While the Czechs are clannish and migrated more often than not into their own chosen communities, none of which happen to be in this immediate neighborhood, there have been many and we'll hope that there'll be many more Americans of good Bohemian background in our organization. Without exception, they have been splendid folks.

Named After Emperor

All this prelude brings us to the Franz Josef Pirkl family which has furnished us with two of our most valuable and worthwhile associates, Frank, of our downtown office, and Mark, Personnel and Office Manager, at our plant, the subject of this sketch.

Franz Josef, named we suspect after the old Austria-Hungarian emperor, at the age of 8, came with his parents directly from old Bohemian Prague, first to the Dells of Wisconsin country, and not long thereafter to a farm near Summit in Steele County, Minnesota. There he grew up, married Mary Frances Wandra, born in that community but also of Bohemian ancestry.

In 1907, they moved to Blooming Prairie where practically all the neighbors were of similar descent. The very next year, on Sept. 11, Mark Paul arrived as the second son, preceded by Frank who is Mark's senior by a couple of years, and two older sisters. One of them, Mary, was to marry our old friend and associate, Pat Leonard, and their son, Howard, is part of the plant office staff. The second sister, Elsie, married W. C. Thompson, one of the Milwaukee's long time foremen, and lives in Mason City, where the whole Pirkl family moved from Blooming Prairie in 1909.

The father went to work for the old Denison Brick and Tile Yards and stayed with them until his death in 1944, with only one break when he was with us in the mill nights between the middle of 1923 and the end of 1924. Mrs. Leonard died in 1942 and the mother of the family lived until last December.

In Several Schools

Mark tried Grant for his first school years, then Lincoln for seventh and eighth grades, St. Joseph's for three years and, by then a man about town, finished up and graduated from Mason City high school in June, 1926.

There had been jobs during vacations at the Brick and Tile works, but his first full-time employment was in helping to tear down the old five story Central Trust Building, Mason City's first skyscraper, then located where the Penney Company now holds forth.

He hadn't been at it long when Frank Pirkl brought him word that Fred Smith was looking for a lad to act as his persona1 clerk and help out in the Timekeepers' Department. Mark reported July 8, 1926 to start his 27 years of splendid service which eventually brought him the top job in the plant personnel office when his immediate superior, Bill Birch, retired a year or so ago.

On July 3, 1930, he was married by the well beloved Father O'Connor at St. Joseph's Parsonage, to Dorothy Connelly of Mason City, a native of Tiffin, down near Iowa City. There are two children, Paul, just graduated from St. Joseph's high school, and Patricia Ann, a leap year arrival, who has only had xxx official birthdays since her arrival in xxxx but manages to see that there's an annual observance as well. The Pirkls are members of the St. Joseph's Parish and live at 712 South Jersey in a home Mark bought in 1940. He is a long time member of the Elks and the Holy Name Society.

Likes to Fish

Mark likes to fish and hunt when opportunity allows but his first and continuing interest outside his family and the job is athletics, baseball in particular, in which he managed to do a lot of playing with one outfit or another, including our plant team, for some 15 active years. He is still a great baseball fan and no year or vacation goes by without some big league game attendance. Now that TV has taken over the Pirkl homestead, he's planning to see a lot more of them from his favorite home rocker.

For 20 years he has been an enthusiastic and hard hitting member of our bowling team which, when it is not the city's top team, is always close to it.

Mark’s job at the plant goes by the calm sounding title of Personnel Manager, but actually it's a half dozen jobs all rolled into one. Interviewing applicants for employment, supervising all our complicated plant accounting, directing and distributing our payrolls, doctoring all minor injuries, advising on almost everything that concerns our personnel, he has a busy and important place in the lives of all of us.

We couldn't have a better man on an all important job and we're glad that the chain reaction of European politics inaugurated a hundred years ago eventually brought the Pirkls to America, and Mark to “Northwestern States." We could use a lot of good men just like him.

(Note by RRC: From another source, I have Mary Frances Wandra‘s maiden name as Wondre; Franz Josef Pirkl was also known as Frank Joseph Pirkl. Thanks to Paul & Shirley Pirkl, Mason City, IA, for sending me the above photo of Mark; Mark was my uncle, Paul’s father & Shirley’s father-in-law. I think this photo is the same one that accompanied the newspaper article above.)

Biography of Hervey Pierce Rothrock, ID = 13259

HERVEY PIERCE ROTHROCK, born 13 February 1850, White County, Indiana; died 11 November 1944, Kendallville, Indiana. He married 10 April 887, in West Lafayette, Indiana, JOELLA CONNELLY, born 22 August 1865, Tippecanoe County, Indiana; died 17 November 1937, Kendallville, Indiana. Joella was the daughter or Robert and Catherine Leslie Connelly whose families were pioneer settlers of Tippecanoe County. The Connelly's came from Virginia to Kentucky and then to Tippecanoe County and the Leslie's migrated from Lehigh County, Pennsylvania to Ohio and then to Lafayette, Indiana. Peter Leslie was the first cabinet maker in Lafayette and Robert Connelly, his son-in-law, learned the trade under his guidance. Hervey and Joella are both buried in the Grandview Cemetery in West Lafayette, Indiana. After their marriage they settled on a farm on the edge of West Lafayette and continued to reside there until about 1917. Hervey grew to manhood in White County, Indiana where he helped his father on the family farm. He attended the local schools and his first schoolmaster was a cousin, William Hanawalt, a son of Henry and Mary Rothrock Hanawalt who had come to Indiana from Mifflin County, Pennsylvania. He was a quiet and thoughtful person, highly regarded in the community. He was active in local affairs before his marriage in White County, Indiana and served as an Elder of the Christian Church. Being a conservative person he acquired the financial independence to enable him to purchase the necessary furniture and household goods before he asked for the hand of Joella. They moved from West Lafayette to a small community near Kendallville, called Brimfield, Indiana, This farm enabled him to do more general farming. After a few years they purchased a larger farm about five miles west of Kendallville where they remained until their deaths. In April of 1937 Hervey and Joella celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary with all of their children and their families and many close relatives and friends attending. Biography of Jesse B. Alexander, ID = 13291

J. B. Alexander, deputy county recorder, is a native of Tippecanoe County, Indiana, born May 21, 1848, a son of James A. and Mary E. (Benton) Alexander, who were both natives of Lexington, Kentucky, and of Scotch descent. The paternal great-grandfather of our subject was born in Scotland, immigrating to America and settling in Kentucky, where he remained the balance of his days. His son, James W., who was the grandfather of our subject, also lived in Kentucky until his death. The latter was a natural born poet, although he never became famous. James A. Alexander, the father of our subject, was a farmer and trader by occupation. He removed to Indiana in 1837, when he settled in Clinton county, and subsequently settled in Tippecanoe County, where he was extensively engaged in farming and trading in horses and mules. He died in 1866, the mother of our subject surviving until 1877. J. B. Alexander, whose name heads this sketch, was reared to agricultural pursuits on the home farm in his native county, which he followed until attaining the age of twenty-two years. He received good educational advantages, attending the Commercial College both at Stockwell and Battle Ground in this county. He was engaged in the grocery business for some time, and was also teller in the warehouse of Morey & Van Reene about two and a half years. December 19, 1871, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Morgan, and to them have been born two children, named Luther and Lela. Mr. Alexander served as deputy sheriff under Sheriff S. O. Taylor, and also under his successor, A. F. Manning. In the fall of 1884 he entered the recorder's office as deputy, which position he yet occupies. He is a member of Friendship Lodge, No. 22, I. O. In early life he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Came to Marion county in 1847, and in 1849 returned to his native State. In 1856 he locaed permanently in this county. His father was a native of Bath county, Kentucky, and was born the nineteenth of March, 1796. His grandfather, William, was born in Virginia and was one of the pioneers of Kentucky. He died in Indiana at a very old age. Mr. Logan has been twice married. His first wife's maiden name was Susan Cortley, to whom he was married in August, 1857. She died in the year 1864. Biography of Lee Elvin Walkling, ID = 1338211

LEE ELVIN WALKLING

When Will Walkling contracted malaria in Louisiana (his birthplace), he, his widowed mother, Mary Southwick Walkling, brother, Henry, and cousin, Henry "Buster" Southwick, moved to Centralia, Washington, about 1910. The two brothers logged in Zenkner Valley and bought land there. Buster later became Chief of Police in Centralia.

Will went to Oregon, working at the Edenbower Orchard, near Roseburg. There he met and married Ella Mae Connelly in 1913. They moved to Garrard Creek, Washington with Will's brother and mother. When Ella was expecting her first baby, she returned to Oregon, as life was too hard on the primitive farm. Although Will arrived in Oregon May 5, 1917, the day his premature 5 lb. son Lee Elvin was born, he soon left to run a farm and then an apple orchard and packing plant in Filer; Idaho. Ella and Lee soon followed.

When the depression closed the apple plant, Will rented a boxcar and moved his family to Centralia. Will and Lee built a road, house, and barn; then started clearing a stump farm. Luckier than most, they had both a tractor and truck. For money, they raised hay (field shocked and stored loose), sold eggs, collected fern, did outside tractor work, raised sheep, picked berries and sold firewood.

Because of Lee's early interest in machinery, he became a "Mr. Fix-it" while he was young. He enjoyed making crystal sets and reading late at night by kerosene lamplight. Lee went to Centralia High School and drove the school bus. He had little time for school activities because of the farm work; "buzzing" wood, plowing (he loved to drive tractor), and road building.

After graduation, Lee went to a Los Angeles Aircraft School. He got a job he thoroughly enjoyed with Douglas Aircraft in El Segundo, California. In three years he advanced to assistant supervisor in charge of the graveyard shift in the sub-assembly department. Because of his work, the plant got him deferred from the draft in World War II. He won many "Suggestion" awards for inventions and shortcuts.

In 1943 Lee married Marion Chisholm of Pasadena, California. From Gardena they moved to Pasadena in 1945, where Lee worked at a secret method of repairing cracked car engines. Two girls (Connie Lee and Nancy) were born before they moved to Zenkner Valley where he remodeled a cabin into a home in 1954. Lee worked for Chris Althauser at the Centralia Junk Company, owned by Goldstein and Bloch. After eight years, Lee bought the business and ran it for 22 years, changing the name to the Centralia Supply Company. The merchants around town referred customers to Lee for unusual merchandise, scarce materials, or jobs that no one else would tackle. He was skilled at welding and machining.

Lee sold his business in December 1984 and retired to two acres east of Chehalis where he could play at his hobbies; gas engines, tractors, antique tools and inventing. His wife, Marion, does volunteer work at the Lewis County Historical Museum. One daughter, Connie Lee, lives in Los Angeles; the other lives in Seattle. Lee's only sister, Evelyn Clark, lives in Centralia.

Biography of Walter Eugene Connelly, ID = 13389

WALTER E. CONNELLY of Salina has had some unusual experience as an educator in the western part of the state. As a boy he attended one of the old dugout schoolhouses of Kansas, and he spent seventeen years teaching, concluding that service with a term as superintendent of instruction in Saline County. Since retiring from that office he has founded and is manager of the Salina Collection Agency, the first and only exclusive collection agency in the city.

He represents a family that during the past century have by successive stages progressed half way across the American continent from New England to Western Kansas. His grandfather, Alexander W. Connelly, was born in Massachusetts, and in 1811 went out to the extreme western frontier, along the Wabash River in Southern Indiana, and secured a tract of Government land, now occupied by the City of Terre Haute.

Robert W. Connelly, father of Walter E., was born on that land and within the present limits of Terre Haute, August 16, 1831. In 1860 he removed to Illinois, where he was a farmer until 1883. In that year he went to Nebraska, spent three years as a farmer in Thayer County, and in 1886 brought his family to Thomas County, Kansas. He homesteaded land there and for ten years was postmaster of DeMunn, and also a justice of the peace. In 1898 he removed to Sherman County, where he died September 20, 1905. He was an active member of the Christian Church and assisted in organizing the first church of that denomination in Thomas County. In 1854 Robert W. Connelly married Miss Catherine Young, who was born in Kentucky September 21, 1833. She died in Thomas County, Kansas, March 20, 1886. They became the parents of ten children, five sons and five daughters: Rhoda, born in 1855 and died in 1883; Henry B., born in 1856; Charles E., born in 1858 and died in 1907; Julia, born in 1861 and died in 1881; James H., born in 1863; Mary, born in 1865 and died in 1881; Emma, born in 1868 and died in 1915; William A., born in 1872 and died in 1914; Walter E.; and Sadie R., born in 1879.

Walter E. Connelly was born January 22, 1876, in a log house on a farm in Piatt County, Illinois. He was still a child when his father moved to the West and was ten years of age when the family located in Kansas in 1886. He continued his education in the public schools of this state, and for a time was a student in a dugout in Thomas County. In 1897, at the age of twenty-one, he began his career as a teacher. His first school was taught in a sod house in Sherman County. Altogether he taught seventeen years, seven years in rural schools and nine years in the towns of Waldo, Bunker Hill, Luray, Salina and Sylvan Grove. In 1910 Mr. Connelly was elected on the democratic ticket as superintendent of public instruction of Saline County, and filled that position two years. It was in 1914 that he established the Salina Collection Agency, and he has since developed that to a profitable business and an important service in the community.

On July 6, 1902, at Monument, Kansas, occurred his marriage with Miss Lizzie Belle O'Brien. Her parents were Thomas and Susan O'Brien, her father a native of Maryland and her mother of Ireland. Mrs. Connelly was born near Lincoln, Nebraska, April 1, 1878. Mr. and Mrs. Connelly have one child, Mildred Lillian. She was born May 22, 1903, at Hays, Kansas. At that time Mr. Connelly was a student during the first year after the opening of the Kansas State Normal at Hays, and his daughter Mildred has the distinction of being the first child born to a student in that institution.

Biography of James Maxwell Caldwell, ID = 1338a4

James Maxwell Caldwell was not a native of Goodland. He was born in Osgood, Missouri in 1903. In 1917, when his family moved to Goodland, he found the community to be a thriving small town. He got a job at the Goodland Power and Light Plant, where he learned much about wiring and electricity. Jim Caldwell married Erma Alice Nye in Burlington, Colo., on June 30, 1923.

Caldwell opened his first business, Caldwell's Radio & Electric Shop, April 18, 1928 at 1015 Main. He thought of his new business as a necessity since the power plant was being sold. He shared the building with Deave's Café. Each business occupied about 12 feet of the building.

Caldwell's Radio & Electric Shop was an appliance store and wiring service, which he was by now very familiar. While he never sold wooden iceboxes, he did wire them for electricity when ask to do so. He sold the first steel refrigerators in the area, which was quite a hit with people both in town and out on the farms. In the rural areas, people fueled them with butane or propane, so it was convenient for just about anyone to have one of these "new fangled" appliances.

When Caldwell's moved to 1010 Main in July 1937, Carl King was the first bookkeeper. Caldwell was the electrical contractor for the remodeling of the Millisack Department Store at 1024 Main, the Goodland Hotel, and First National Bank at 1102 Main. When the B. E. Bridges building was built in 1922, Caldwell installed the wiring. In addition, when the courthouse was dedicated in October 1931, "J. M. Caldwell, Electrical, Cont." was on a bronze plaque in the lobby, which is still there today.

In the 1930's, the washing machine sold best. Radios, the kind with tubes, were also good sellers. Ranges and refrigerators also sold well as Sherman County residents found that they needed these timesaving devices or wanted the convenience of home entertainment. In 1953, before there was even a television station in Goodland, Caldwell's began selling television sets. The reception was not good, "It skipped and was irregular but you could get a program now and then," according to the local newspaper.

Along with his developing business, Caldwell was also raising a family. He and his wife were the parents of four children: Peggy (deceased in 1971), Shirley, Dick and Don. Dick and Don and Shirley's husband, Maurice Peters, helped Caldwell with the running of the various stores. It was a family operation and brought much pleasure to Mr. Caldwell.

Besides having his family in the business, Caldwell employed a number of other employees. He was honored by the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped in recognition of this employing Karl King, a wheelchair-bound man.

At one time, along with his store in Goodland, he had stores in Colby, Atwood, and St. Francis, Kan., as well as in Burlington and Wray, Colo. and Benkleman, Neb. In July 1948 Caldwell's added a new storefront at Caldwell Gas & Electric. It was one of the finest and most modern in this part of the state. With the new plate glass windows and door it afforded a delightful view of the store day and night. New lights were also installed in the building. In 1953, the ceiling was lowered approximately two and one-half feet and a balcony was constructed at the rear of the main floor for displaying television and radio sets.

Another remodeling took place in 1958 with the addition of a new television, Hi-Fi, and piano room. The new room was equipped with heating and air-conditioning and wall-to-wall carpeting. The addition of this department added several hundred feet of floor space. The entire inside of the main floor was re-finished with the latest lighting.

James Caldwell had the distinction of having been in business in Sherman County for 62 years before ill health forced him to retire. His business was varied and at one time included a furniture store, housing business and the Goodland Finance Company. He was one of the most colorful businessmen in Goodland's history and a real institution. The people of Goodland missed his wit and missed seeing the "boss" with his trademark cigar when he retired in 1990. His wife passed away March 9, 1991 and he passed away January 1, 1994.

Richard Caldwell and Maurice Peter continued operating the business until they retired. Maurice Peters passed away in August 2000. In 2002, the family still operates the Goodland Finance Company located at the same address since 1937.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "Peter" should be Peters.)

Biographies of John Robert Connelly, ID = 133a4

HON. JOHN ROBERT CONNELLY has been given great distinction by the people of the Sixth Congressional District of Kansas. It is a distinction which he deeply appreciates, and which will mean more as the tremendous importance of the epoch in which he has served this district in Congress becomes more clearly defined in national and international history. Mr. Connelly was elected to his first term in Congress at the same time that Woodrow Wilson was first elected president. He has been continuously identified with the Wilson administration for three terms, and without entering specifically into the details of his record, it can be asserted unequivocally that he has been a judicious supporter of all the progressive legislation and the measures affecting this country in its international relations.

Congressman Connelly has been a resident of Kansas since he was eighteen years of age. He was born near Mount Sterling, Brown County, Illinois, February 27, 1870. This branch of the Connelly family came from northern Ireland and first settled in New York State. His grandfather Alexander Connelly was an Indiana farmer and died near Greencastle, Indiana. Arthur Connelly, father of the congressman was born in Putnam County, Indiana, in 1834. He grew up in that county and was a Kansas pioneer by virtue of his coming to this state or territory in 1860. He homesteaded in Linn County. After a year he went back east and in the fall of 1861 settled on a farm in Brown County, Illinois. From 1883 to 1887 he lived in Thayer County, Nebraska, and then returned to Kansas and homesteaded a quarter section of land in Thomas County. He died at Meriden, Kansas, in 1912. He was a democrat in political faith and a very active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was also affiliated with the Masonic and Odd Fellow fraternities. Near Mound City, Kansas, he married Sarah Jane Manar. She was born near Bowling Green, Kentucky, in 1844, and died in Thomas County, Kansas, in 1899. Their children were: W. E. Connelly, a veterinary surgeon living at Spokane, Washington; Dora, wife of T. J. Upchurch, a farmer at Meriden, Kansas; Laura, wife of John Carden, postmaster of Meriden; John Robert; and James A., a farmer at Gem, Kansas.

John Robert Connelly received his early education in the public schools of Illinois and Nebraska. He began teaching at nineteen, and at the age of twenty-four finished his course in the Salina Normal University. From 1895 to 1899 he was county superintendent of schools of Thomas County. In the meantime he has entered the newspaper field, purchasing the Colby Free Press December 1, 1897. He still owns that paper and continued to direct its editorial policy until 1918, when he leased the paper to other management.

Mr. Connelly has always been a sound democrat. He was first a candidate for Congress on the democratic ticket in 1908. He was elected to represent the Sixth District, and was re-elected in 1914 and 1916. Mr. Connelly is a member of the Christian Church, is affiliated with St. Thomas Lodge No. 306, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, which he served as secretary a number of years, and with Colby Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Among other interests he owns a farm near Colby.

Congressman Connelly is happily married and is proud of three young sons who are present or prospective soldiers. June 17, 1896, he married Miss Lillian Souder of Colby, daughter of Richard and Lizzie (Trotter) Souder, the latter now deceased. Her father is a retired farmer at Colby. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Connelly: J. V. Connelly, born April 18, 1897, is now with the American Expeditionary Forces in France; Arthur born September 17, 1898, is a member of the famous U. S. Marines, and at this writing is stationed at Mare Island; James, born in 1900, is a member of the Student Army Training Corps at Hayes City, Kansas. Inez, born January 25, 1903, is a senior in the Thomas County High School. The two younger children are Dorothy, who died at the age of eight years, and Annie Laurie, born April 15, 1912.

(Note by RRC:The bio says “This branch of the Connelly family came from northern Ireland and first settled in New York State.” I have no evidence that the family ever lived in NY, but there is a family tradition that they landed on Long Island, NY, when they emigrated from Ireland in 1735, proceeding overland to PA & then to Augusta Co., VA, by 1745.

From other sources I have Inez born in 1904, not 1903.)

J. R. and his Family

John Robert Connelly was born in Brown county, Illinois in 1870. His parents Arthur and Sarah Jane Manar Connelly had moved to Illinois from Butler, Missouri at the beginning of the Civil war. With the exception of Arthur, all the Connelly's and all the Manar's were southern sympathizers. Arthur was a Union sympathizer but refused to fight against the South. It was agreed that Arthur should take his wife and six families (wives of Sarah's four brothers, her sister, and wife and children of one of his brothers) north for the duration of the war, while the other men served in the Confederate army. They drove the caravan to Quincy, Illinois, where Arthur took up a rough timber quarter south-east of a settlement called Mount Sterling, and there with only himself and some half grown children and the women, seven houses and other buildings. All five of their children were born in Illinois. John was the second son with two older sisters Dora and Laura and an older brother Will. A last child would be born in 1873, the little brother Jim.

When some of the men returned from the war, Arthur felt his responsibilities were completed and began looking west to the newly opened lands. There is indication that the family was persecuted for their stance in the war so in the late '70's he took his family to Nebraska where he took a pre-emption near Alexandria, Nebraska.

In the spring of 1886, Arthur had a serious illness and while he was recuperating he made a trip to visit his two oldest daughters. Dora had married Tom Upchurch and had homesteaded in western Kansas near Menlo. Laura had married John Carden and they also had homesteaded near Goodland, Kansas. While he was visiting with the Cardens, he met a dissatisfied homesteader and traded his horse and buggy for a quarter of land just north of the Cardens. He returned for his family but J. R.who was 16 had a good paying job on a neighbors farm so he stayed until the next Christmas. A picture taken of the family three or four years before moving to Kansas shows a good looking family solemnly posed for the photographer. Arthur and all the children had large sparkly brown eyes that betrayed their emotions. All of the men would be tall and in their middle age they all became portly. The solemnity of the pose is unnatural as they loved good conversation, song and the home was full of laughter.

At Christmas time in 1886, John traveled to visit his family and brought them $120.00. In his later years he would recount the family reunion. With the money he brought them, they bought winter food provisions, paid the taxes, his mother bought a new dress and they still had $104.00 left.

It was this visit to his family that would change the direction of his life. John Carden, his brother-in-law was a teacher and he offered to help J. R. with his education so that he might be able to pass the Normal school and become a teacher. That year he stayed with the Cardens and went to school. When he felt prepared, the Cardens loaned him the money to go to the Salina Normal School. One of J. R.'s children found his grade card many years later. He was excellent in memory work and reading, average in math and very low in orthography (spelling). That would become a challenge. He not only would learn to spell, he'd be the best speller! He had an excellent memory and could memorize large tracts with seeming ease. When he returned to Menlo, the Cardens found him a teaching job in a country school for a month. He taught for six years and in 894, he started his political career he ran for Superintendent and won. Part of his job was to inspect all the schools in the district and of course one of the schools was the Menlo school. It was in Menlo that he met Lillian Lillian had taught school since she was 14 and at the time they met, Lillian was principal of the Menlo school and was getting the highest salary in Thomas County...$45.00 a month. She recalled the times in her later years, "I lived in a small rented house with two other teachers. We took turns managing the money and cooking. One girl had steaks at the first of the week and we starved the rest of the week. The other one managed to eke out the week but was a terrible cook. When I managed, we ate cheaper but nourishing meals all week and feasted on the weekend and I sometimes had money left over."

It wasn't long before J. R. came calling at meal time. It seems at first he was courting all three but it didn't take long for him to find the best cook and best manager. In June of 1896, J. R. and Lillian were married. J. R. hadn't planned too well, however, as he only had $50.00 to get married, go on a honeymoon and set up housekeeping. Lillian had to use her $400.00. Lillian in her subtle way never let him forget it either. In 1929, he built a two story office building and although it said J. R. Connelly on the front, it was clearly Lillian's building and his way of paying back that $400.00.

Their first home was an apartment over a bank on the main street of Colby, Kansas. When the stairs became too difficult for Lillian (she was expecting their first child), they rented a little house and ten months after their wedding day John Vernon was born.

A year before J. R.'s term as District Superintendent was over he bought a newspaper, the Colby Free Press. It was the heyday of colorful newspapers and J. R. had one of the best. He was a democrat in a republican state but he proceeded to run a lively paper, lacing it with politics, humor and debate. One of his best friends was the editor of a rival paper. One day they dreamed up an imaginary feud. It fueled interest so much that people had to buy both papers to find out what would happen next. In fact, the feud was so popular they had to arrange secret meetings if they ever wanted to see each other. One day the Tribune announced that they had heard "J. R. Connelly, the Moses of the Democratic party, had attended a meeting in another town in a futile attempt to stir up interest." The next week the Free Press editor answered with "I don't mind being called the Moses of the Democratic party. It certainly is preferable to being called Balam's saddle horse."

In 1904 J. R. and Nat Turner (editor of the Tribune) were on rival baseball teams. J. R. was on the Fats team and Turner was on the Beanpole team. There is a slightly slanted sports write-up in which J. R. explains that the Fats were so far ahead in the first inning that the Leans got discouraged and threatened to quit. The Fats didn't want to let down their audience so they allowed them to make a few runs. "The effect of this kindness was soon manifest by the Leans taking on new courage" and making 18 runs to defeat the Fats. However, according to the Fats scorekeeper this was not the case at all!

The early years of the Connelly's marriage were busy and eventful. Shortly after J. V. was born, a small house south of the Union Pacific railroad was purchased. Art was born in 1898, Jim in 1900, Inez in 1904, followed by Dorothy in 1907 and five years later in 1912 their last child Annie Laurie. Inez tells the story that by the time Anne arrived, they had run out of favorite names so they asked the boys to pick a name. They chose Annie Laurie after their favorite song of the day. It probably suited a pretty little brown eyed baby, but she soon became Anne and has remained Anne all of her adult life.

Culture on the prairies in the latter part of the nineteenth and early twentieth century was sparse and much of the entertainment was homegrown through the local churches, school plays and sports, community organizations and an occasional Chatauqua or Circus. Both Lillian and John were avid readers and in time built a rather large library in their home. They had joined the Christian church soon after their marriage and both of them taught a Sunday school class.

For them, the Christian ethic was firmly woven into the pattern of their lives. J. R.'s decision as a congressman to vote against World War I was based on his religion. In a speech to the House of Representatives on April 5, 1917 the last line reads; "I am listening to the voice of Him who centuries ago spoke to a mad and turbulent world and said; Thou Shalt Not Kill."

J. R. served on the school board, the city council and joined the Masonic Lodge and Lillian joined the first study club in Colby, but one of the most exciting forms of entertainment was the old fashioned political rally. The Democrat, William Jennings Bryan spoke throughout the midwest. His silver-tongued oratory appealed to the Heartland of America and J. R. greatly admired him. J. R. spent a lot of time in the late 19th & early 20th centuries building a strong democratic county. In 1908 he ran for the U. S. Congress and was defeated. The Connelly's and the Bryan's became good friends. There is a story in the family that may or may not be true, about the time the Bryan's came to dinner at the Connelly home. In the middle of the main course, the home brew which the boys had secretly made and stored in the coal room of the basement took this inopportune time to explode. The noise and smell permeated the rafters and the next day, there was great howling emitted from the wood shed, where due punishment was meted out!

Campaigning in Western Kansas in the early part of the century put many hardships on the family. J. R. was gone a lot, the family was growing up and had their own school activities and it must have been expensive but the family seemed to thrive on all the experience. Anne was born in April, 1912 and shortly after her birth, J. R. was busy running for office again. On one trip the whole family went to the neighboring towns to campaign. In the evening, they were to stay all night with a friend on a farm. There was room in the house for the parents, two little girls and the baby but the boys had to sleep in the barn. The boys, who never lacked for imagination, probably tried to outdo each other telling ghost stories. When the Hoot owls that infested the barn began their evening crescendo, three wide eyed boys were knocking at the door. They were sent back to the barn but the howling emanating from scared boys and terrified owls kept everyone up that night.

Because of the split in the Republican party, J. R. won his seat in the House of Representatives and was inaugurated in March 1913. His platform which was radical for his day seems tame by todays standards. There were issues such as; direct election of Senators by the people; a bank guaranty law that would make every dollar deposited in a National bank absolutely good; and election of all officers who serve the people, including postmasters and an income tax. Of course there were the usual issues that every politician includes such as economy in all public expenditures and "to abolish thousands of needless offices that now exist."

Shortly after his election, he came home fuming with anger. One of J. R.'s backers had come to the Free Press to tell him what he expected from him now that he was in office. He wanted a kickback from political appointees including postmasters. When he told Lillian what he had said to the man, she gasped and said, "Oh John, you didn't?" J. R. looked up, eyes twinkling and said, "No, but I would have if I'd thought of it!" The man didn't get his kickbacks either.

In March 1913, J. R. was in Washington D. C. alone. On Easter Sunday he wrote a beautiful letter to his daughter, Inez. He described his office in the Capital building and the Washington Monument. He adds that he hopes "she and Dorothy will write the next time mama sends a letter" and that he will be glad to have Art join him so he'll have someone to quarrel with occasionally and then it won't be so lonely. Both Art and Jim joined him that spring. Art gained a lifetime of experience and Jim got expelled from several schools.

Lillian remained in Colby that spring and coped with the family who were developing strong and individual personalities. J. V., the oldest, was quiet, tall, good looking, athletic and infinitely agreeable. When asked to do a chore, he always agreed and went on with whatever he was doing. Art, however, would do battle over the slightest request. He would argue the point six times over and then go do his and J. V.'s job. Jim was the families uncontrollable imp. All the other children were making a grade a year in school...not Jim, he made two generally. The teachers and parents told the story that he was too smart to stay in the class more than one semester, but there is a general suspicion that the teachers were simply providing self preservation. One summer Lillian was at her wits end trying to corral his high spirits. She asked J. R. to talk to him, so J. R. took Jim for a walk. They walked slowly toward town, the father scolding all the way. Jim was cheerfully agreeing and patting him on the back. When they arrived at the main part of town where people were gathered for shopping and talking, J. R. noticed his trousers slowly descending to his knees. Jim had cut J. R.'s suspenders in two. They arrived home a few minutes later, J. R. grasping his pants and both doubled up with laughter. They probably laughed all the way to the woodshed!

Inez, being the first girl, had to fill a strong role in the family. She asserted her femininity very early when she refused to play “horsie” with the piece of material tied to the treadle machine as Lillian sewed. She took the material and made a bow for her hair. Lillian used to say of Inez “She was never beautiful until she opened her mouth and then she was simply gorgeous.” Being a girl didn't stop her from competing with her brothers. Shortly after she got her permanent teeth, she knocked out a front tooth pole vaulting. Fortunately all the Connelly's had crowded teeth so in a short time it wasn't noticeable. Very early in her life she learned to help in the kitchen for by this time, Arthur Connelly (grandfather) had moved in with them after his wife had died in 1899. That meant three husky boys, a husband and grandfather to feed for every meal. For some reason, Lillian thought all human beings were frail if they didn't weigh at least 200 pounds and the family consoled her by consuming vast amounts of food. Fifty years later when the home and its contents were disposed of, only restaurants or churches were able to use the barrel size pans that cooked the early Connelly meals.

In the fall of 1913 Lillian and the girls went to Washington D. C.. The boys stayed in Colby. It was an exciting, educational and expensive time for the women in J. R.'s family. Inez and Dorothy were sent to a private Catholic school and Lillian learned to cope with Washington society. There were days to call and days to be called on. She would hire a coach and ride around to the homes to call, leave two cards and arrive home in the evening. She didn't mind the carriage ride, but the two cards really raked at her frugality. After a while she left just one card. There were special evening dresses, worn with long kid gloves to be worn to evening socials and of course J. R. had to have a tailed tuxedo for formal occasions. Woodrow Wilson's daughter was married and the former congressmen were still reeling from their donation to Alice Roosevelt's wedding present. Inez spent her extra time in the Library of Congress reading the whole section of fairy tales. When the family returned to Colby in the spring of 1914, what they found discouraged them from leaving the boys home alone. Everything in the home, including the underwear resembled unpolished obsidian.

The next session J. R. returned alone. It was a sad and lonely year for the Connelly's. Sometime in the winter months of 1915, Dorothy came down with diptheria and died a month after her eighth birthday. The family was devastated for Dorothy was the family's “Blithe Spirit.” She fit all the synonyms for blithe, being gentle and carefree. For years her name could not be mentioned without bringing a tear to the eye.

J. R. returned to Washington after the funeral and came home as soon as possible in June. The summer at home was slightly mystifying, however. He could never remember being so crowded in their little home. Everyplace he wanted to step was full of trunks. It was impossible to move through the house without bumping into one and he didn't remember acquiring so many before. The answer was simple. He was being wickered! Lillian had decided the family needed a bigger house. After a few weeks of bruised shins, J. R. went out and bought one of the biggest houses in town. That house was to be their home for the rest of their lives.

When Wilson ran for re-election in 1916, his most persuasive campaign slogan was “He kept us out of war.” The Democrats had made a progressive record that was especially persuasive with those who could not yet tolerate the idea of voting Republican again. By and large, rural America voted for Wilson as did labor, the liberals and most intellectuals.

When German plans for aggression against the United States were uncovered and three more American ships were sunk by German U boats just weeks after Wilson's inauguration, an agonized President called a special session of Congress on April 2, 1917 and asked for war. On April 4, the Senate voted 82 to 6 for war and was followed on April 6 in the House of Representatives with a vote of 373 to 50. J. R. Connelly was one of the 50. It is interesting to note that the majority of nays were from the midwest.

In 1936 a memorial was erected in Santa Monica, California. Its inscription describes what happened after the vote. It is dedicated “To the memory of those honorable men, both Senators and representatives, who braving the ignominies heaped upon them by a frenzied people, victims of malicious propaganda, dared stand forth on those fateful days of April 1917, to cast their votes against the resolution driving us into an iniquitous foreign war.”

J. V. joined the army in May and was sent to France where he met and married his first wife Charlotte. Within the year they had a son, Fred. Art joined the marines and although he wasn't sent to France, he was exposed to so much artillery firing in training maneuvers, he suffered a hearing loss. Jim and his friend Pete Zeigler joined the army in October of 1918 so their war experience was a month at Ft. Hays, Kansas in training camp. At the end of the war J. R. went to Europe with the Naval Affairs committee of the house. While there, they inspected the major battle fields and visited with all the monarchs and heads of state of Europe.

In November of 1918, J. R. ran for re-election. The Sixth district voted overwhelmingly Republican. He was the first Democrat to be elected from the district and the only person from Colby, Kansas. In 1932 when the district was changed and enlarged, the 6th district again sent a democrat to congress and the only woman congressperson elected in Kansas until the 1970's. He sold the Colby Free Press in 1918 and when he came home in 1919 he went into real estate. He ran for office again in 1924, but Coolidge was President, the country was at peace and the Republicans reigned victorious.

When the boys came home and didn't have anything to do, J. R. bought a mercantile store for them to run. J. V., Art, and Inez ran the store most of the time. Inez would get fired every Saturday night and then rehired on Tuesday. On Monday she could help Lillian with the mountainous wash. Jim went away to Kansas University and after J. V.'s wife had spent a year and a half on the prairies of western Kansas, she went back to Paris. In six months J. V. followed and worked as a tour guide in Europe for almost ten years. Charlotte and Fred never returned. In 1923, the store was sold and Art went to William Woods girls school in Fulton, Missouri. Both of the girls followed the family tradition and eventually taught in Colby. For a period of sixty years, a Connelly was involved with the Colby Public schools. When Inez's daughter Dorothy Ann taught first grade in 1948 one of her pupils was the grand daughter of one of Lillian's students. She in turn had taught Inez, Inez taught her daughter and the daughter could have taught Dorothy but did not.

When J. R. died in 1940, all of the children but Anne had married. Inez married Jim's friend N. D. (Pete) Zeigler from Oakley on January 31, 1925. Jim married Louise in 1926 and Art married Esther Calahan in 1927. Art and Esther were to have the first child, John Robert in October 1927. Within a period of ten months three girls would arrive in 1929 and 1930. Julia was born in November 1929 to Jim and Louise, Dorothy missed being a New Years baby by hours being born on the morning of January 2, 1930 to Inez and Pete. Esther and Art missed the fireworks the next 4th of July as Jane decided to be born that day. In 1935 the Zeiglers had their last child, Daryl who was supposed to be a Christmas surprise but she became impatient and arrived before Thanksgiving.

If one could say anything about J. R.'s family, it should be that there was not a dull or uninteresting person in the bunch! There was a distinct Irish flavor to the family gatherings with singing, eating and loud talk of politics. All flavors of religion were tolerated but the grandchildren learned early that any preference to the Republican party might involve getting their end of the table cut off.

Upon J. R.'s death in 1940, Frank Carlson, the Republican representative spoke in the House of Representatives:

> Mr. Speaker, I rise to announce the death of Hon. John R. Connelly, a former Member of the House of Representatives. Mr. Connelly represented the Sixth Congressional District of Kansas during the Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth and Sixty-fifth Congresses. As a Member of the World War Congress he was one of a group of 50 who voted against the entry of the United States into that war. This vote typifies that he was a man of convictions, and he was not afraid to take a stand, even when its popularity was questioned. The intervening twenty some years since that vote was cast have convinced most everyone that our entry into that war was responsible for the misery and serious economic condition which has faced this country ever since. It is interesting to note that at present there are only 2 Members in Congress were here and cast their votes against entry into the World War. They are the Honorable George H. Norris, Senator from Nebraska, and Hon. Harold Knutson, Representative from Minnesota. The late Honorable Ernest L. Lundeen, Senator from Minnesota, who met his death in the tragic airplane accident 2 weeks ago was another member of that group.

Representative Carlson then gave a brief biography of J. R. Connelly and asked that the list of Congressmen who were in the sixty-fifth Congress and voted nay on that fateful day of April 1917 be placed in the Appendix of the Congressional Record.

Biographical sketch of Ninian 'Squire' Connely, ID = 1342

Ninian Connely, an early pioneer of Monrovia Kansas was born in Kentucky November 7th 1817, the son of Arthur Warren Connely and Jensey "Jane Steel".

He married Elizabeth J. Evans on the 2nd of April 1839 in Putnam County Indiana. Their children were Franklin, Sorena and Martha J. Connely. Elizabeth passed in Putnam County on Jan 9th and was subsequently buried at Monrovia in 1852.

Mr. Connely married Sophia Stauffer at Monrovia, April 26th, 1856, This was the first marriage to take place in Center Township. Sophia was the widow of Henry Stauffer of Monrovia and is buried with Mr. Stauffer in the Monrovia cemetery. Sophia died in 1892 and Ninian later married Julia Y. Farley. Julia died in Valley Falls Kansas in 1915.

Mr. Connely and his brothers Robert and Arthur were among Monrovia's earliest settlers where He worked his trade as a carpenter and wagon maker.

Biography of Robert Alexander Connely, ID = 1344

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in "History of Jasper County, Missouri", Mills & Company, 1883, pages 1038 – 1039.)

ROBERT A. CONNELY, post-office Georgia City. His farm consists of eight acres of fine land, situated in Georgia City Valley, on Blackberry Creek. The farm is improved up to a fair standard, his crop being principally wheat, the crop of 1882 averaging some twenty-five bushels per acre. The above subject settled where he resides in March, 1881, but having settled in Jasper county, Mo., in 1870, in section 22, township 27, range 34. That farm proving to be a mineral one he soon disposed of it and purchased where he now resides. Robert is a native of Monroe county, Ind., born Jan. 23, 1822. The father was a native of Virginia and when quite young moved with his parents to Montgomery county, Ky., where he married the mother March 2, 1818. She was a native of North Carolina, but was raised in Kentucky. In 1822 Robert's parents settled in Indiana on a farm, the father having built the second log-cabin in Putnam county. There was a family of eight children, as follows: Thomas, Anther, Alexander, Robert, Gilmore, Margaret, Isabell, and Mariah. The above subject grew up in his native county on a farm. He was married Nov. 31, 1843, to Miss Marilda Evans, a native of Monroe county, Ind., born May 27, 1821, being a daughter of William and Martha (Berton) Evans, the father a native of Bath county, Ky., and the mother of east Virginia. They married in Kentucky and settled in Monroe county, Ind., in about 1822. Their family consisted of eight children, as follows: Susan, John, William H., Elizabeth, Marilda, Serena E., James, and Martha. Mr. and Mrs. Connely settled on a farm in Indiana and remained until 1855; then moved to Atchison county, Kan., and improved a farm of 160 acres, remaining until 1870; then came to Jasper county, Mo. They have a family of six children living: Louena, born Dec. 28, 1844; Harrison T., born Feb. 20, 1848; Anther L., born Dec. 21, 1850, and died Aug. 22, 1878; James M., born July 21, 1852; Melonia, born March 22, 1855; Margaret J., born Dec. 22, 1857; William B., born Feb. 13, 1860.

(Note by RRC: I found this bio hard to interpret and not entirely accurate. From other sources, Robert was born in Putnam Co. IN, not Monroe Co., IN (his wife Marelda was born in Monroe Co., IN). Robert's father, Arthur Warren Connely, was born in VA, went to Montgomery Co., KY, at a young age (with his parents, Arthur & Jane (Dale) Connely). Robert's father married Jensey Steele in Montgomery Co., KY on 2 Mar. 1815 (not 1818): the family moved to Putnam Co., IN, in 1822.
Arthur & Jane (Dale) Connely had 9 children, 8 who reached maturity (and named above in the sentence that begins "There was a family"), and Elizabeth who died young.
Robert married Nov. 30 (not 31), 1843, to Marelda (although Marilda might be correct, I'm not sure) Evans. They had 7 children as named above; I have several minor differences in birth dates and spelling of first names, e.g. the 3rd child was a son named Arthur (not Anther). A major difference is that the son Harrison (not Arthur) died 22 Aug 1878.

In 1856, with his parents, removed to Atchison County, Kas., his father Henry being one of the pioneers in the vicinity of Monrovia, where W. H. spent several years. In 1862 he enlisted in the Thirteenth Kansas as a private in Company D, serving in the departments of the southwest until the close of the war. Mr. W. is an active business man, and one of the most genial citizens of Douglass.

(Note by RRC: From other sources, I have his 1st wife's maiden name as Batsell, not Ratisel, and his 2nd wife's first name as Melvina, not Emma.)

Arthur and Emily Connely were the parents of Lucy Connely, Mastin A. Connely and Stephen Connely.

Arthur, a free mason was a member of the Monrovia lodge, No. 48 and later an officer of the Mackey Lodge of Effingham.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, Arthur was born 27 Sept. 1829, and was married on 12 March 1850. His mother's maiden name was Steele. I suspect Mastin should be Maston. Several other children born to Arthur & Emily are not mentioned here.)

Biography of Joseph Jackson 'Jack' Galvin, ID = 13514

JOSEPH J. GALVIN, vice-president of the Citizens' Bank of Pleasantville, Iowa, and a leading farmer and stock dealer of Marion county, is numbered among the native sons of Kentucky. He was born on his father's farm in Montgomery county, that State, January 14, 1821, his parents being James and Elizabeth (Darnel) Galvin, the former a native of Bourbon county, Kentucky, and the latter of Maryland. All his life the father followed farming. From his native State he removed with his family to Benton county, Indiana, locating on a farm, where he resided until his death. His wife passed away two years later. Their family numbered three children. *Allen, the eldest, was a farmer of Hendricks county, Indiana, and an extensive dealer in horses and mules, which he shipped in large numbers to the South. He died, leaving a wife and two sons, but all are now deceased. * James, a farmer of Marion county, Iowa, was joined in wedlock with Miss Mahala Logan, and to them have been born four children — Allen, Elizabeth, John and James.

*The subject of this review in his early childhood accompanied his parents to Benton county, Indiana, and he became familiar with all the duties of farm life, and also acquired his education in the district schools of the neighborhood. He is numbered among the pioneer settlers of Marion county, Iowa, has seen the greater part of its growth and upbuilding, and has always borne his part in the work of progress and development.

The life of Mr. Galvin has been a busy and useful one. He has known few idle hours, and his splendid success has been achieved through his enterprising and well directed efforts. His judgment is seldom if ever at fault, and he is sagacious and far-sighted. This has enabled him to make judicious investments which have brought to him prosperity. His landed possessions now aggregate 1,200 acres of as fine land as can be found in this section of Iowa, all located in Pleasant Grove township. A mile and a half east of Pleasantville stands his beautiful residence, which is supplied with all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life. In addition to general farming he is extensively engaged in feeding and shipping stock, and has found this a profitable source of income. In addition to his other business interests he is vice president of the Citizens' Bank of Pleasantville.

In his political views Mr. Galvin is a stalwart Democrat, but has never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of public office. His wife is a member of the Christian Church, and though he is not a member he contributes liberally to its support and attends its services. He takes great delight in travel, and has visited all parts of the country. A public-spirited and progressive citizen, he is deeply interested in everything pertaining to the country's welfare, and is very popular, his genial manner winning him many warm friends. His life illustrates what can be accomplished by capable management, earnest effort and honorable dealing, and his success is certainly well deserved.

He was married on the 14th of May, 1857, to Miss Margaret McGinnis, a native of Putnam county, Indiana, and a daughter of Levi and Lucretia (Logan) McGinnis, both of whom died during her early girlhood. She was then left an orphan, and with her grandparents came to Marion county, where she was reared. To Mr. and Mrs. Galvin have been born eleven children, namely: James A., who married

Miss Margaret Haynes, and is a farmer of Calhoun county, Iowa; Richard and Albert, both deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Theodore Stubbs, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Marion county; Riley, who wedded Miss Ellen Spencer, and is a farmer in Marion county; Granville, deceased; Emma, wife of C. F. Haynes, who is numbered among Calhoun county's farmers; Joseph, who was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary Pitman, and is a farmer of Marion county; Clementine, wife of Albert Forst, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Calhoun county; Julia, wife of William Spalti, a farmer of Marion county; Miles, who completes the family and is still at the parental home.

(Note by RRC: Joseph's wife's first name is Margaret here and, from other sources, her full maiden name was Margaret Elizabeth McGinnis; her first name seems to be Margarete on her gravestone in Pleasantville cemetery but I think that the inscription was meant to read Margaret E.

Joseph's brother James married Mary Jane Logan (ID = 13521) prior to his marriage to Mahala Logan. Mary Jane & Mahala were cousins. As far as I know, Mahala and I shared no Connely genes, so I do not include her children in this genealogy. I do have a genetic connection to Mary Jane)

His wife is a member of the Christian Church, and though he is not a member he contributes liberally to its support and attends its services. He takes great delight in travel, and has visited all parts of the country. A public-spirited and progressive citizen, he is deeply interested in everything pertaining to the country's welfare, and is very popular, his genial manner winning him many warm friends. His life illustrates what can be accomplished by capable management, earnest effort and honorable dealing, and his success is certainly well deserved.

He was married on the 14th of May, 1857, to Miss Margaret McGinnis, a native of Putnam county, Indiana, and a daughter of Levi and Lucretia (Logue) McGinnis, both of whom died during her early girlhood. She was then left an orphan, and with her grandparents came to Marion county, where she was reared. To Mr. and Mrs. Galvin have been born eleven children, namely: James A., who married Miss Margaret Haynes, and is a farmer of Calhoun county, Iowa; Richard and Albert, both deceased; Elizabeth, wife of Theodore Stubbs, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Marion county; Riley, who wedded Miss Ellen Spencer, and is a farmer in Marion county; Granville, deceased; Emma, wife of C. F. Haynes, who is numbered among Calhoun county's farmers; Joseph, who was joined in wedlock with Miss Mary Pitman, and is a farmer of Marion county; Clementine, wife of Albert Ford, who carries on agricultural pursuits in Calhoun county; Julia, wife of William Spahr, a farmer of Marion county; Miles, who completes the family and is still at the parental home.

JOHN R. MORRISON, dealer in grain, Winden, Iowa, is one of the well-known business men of this place, and it is appropriate that personal mention be made of him in connection with biogra-

(Note by RRC: Joseph's wife's first name is Margaret here and, from other sources, her full maiden name was Margaret Elizabeth McGinnis; her first name seems to be Margarete on her gravestone in Pleasantville cemetery but I think that the inscription was meant to read Margaret E.

Joseph's brother James married Mary Jane Logan (ID = 13521) prior to his marriage to Mahala Logan. Mary Jane & Mahala were cousins. As far as I know, Mahala and I shared no Connely genes, so I do not include her children in this genealogy. I do have a genetic connection to Mary Jane)

CHARLES F. HAYNES.

A farm of two hundred and eighty acres pays tribute to the care and labor bestowed upon it by Charles F. Haynes, whose systematic and carefully managed business interests are bringing to him substantial and gratifying success. He is one of Iowa's native sons, his birth having occurred in Pleasantville, Marion county, on the 10th of September, 1861, his parents being Silas and Mary (Rose) Haynes, who were natives of Ohio. The father was a farmer by occupation and also followed blacksmithing on his farm in the Buckeye state. Before the building of railroads across the country he journeyed westward with wagons and oxen and settled on the river in Marion county. There he built a log cabin and the family began life in the primitive style of the true pioneer. Day after day Mr. Haynes devoted his attention to the work of the fields, and later he left his original farm and removed to a place in the vicinity of Pleasantville, where he had one hundred and sixty acres. He became an active man in community affairs, particularly in advancing the moral progress of the district in which he lived, helping to organize the church near his home.

Charles F. Haynes attended the district schools of Marion county, Iowa, and also was a pupil in the school at Pleasantville. At twenty years of age he began farming on rented land in Marion county, and in 1886 removed to Calhoun county. Prior to this time he took a claim in Dakota but lived there for only eight months before coming to this county. Renting a farm in Reading township, he has lived in the township for the past twenty-nine years and is today the owner of two hundred and eighty acres of rich and productive land which he has carefully tilled and developed, bringing his place under a high state of cultivation and adding to it many modern improvements.

In early manhood Mr. Haynes was united in marriage to Miss Emma Galvin, a native of Marion county and a daughter of John J. and May (McGinnis) Galvin, who were born in Kentucky and Ohio, respectively. Her father became one of the early settlers of Marion county, Iowa, casting in his lot with the pioneers of that district in the '50s. As time went on he became the owner of considerable land in the county and also extensively engaged in raising and feeding stock. He likewise owned land in Reading township,
Calhoun county, having about six hundred and forty acres, but he never lived in this county. In the later years of his life he lived retired on his farm at Pleasantville, and his wife since his death has continued to make her home in Pleasantville. He was interested in the bank at that place and was regarded as one of the most prominent and progressive men of his community. In business affairs he displayed sound judgment and keen discrimination, and moreover he had many likeable qualities that endeared him to those with whom he came in contact. He was generous and kindly in spirit and displayed those commendable manly attributes which everywhere awaken confidence and regard. In township affairs he was very active and filled all of the local offices. In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Haynes were nine children, as follows: Elza, an agriculturist residing in Reading township, who is married and has three children; Eton, the wife of A. B. Kennedy, an agriculturist who is also engaged in the real-estate and ice business at Lake View, Iowa, and by whom she has two children; Julia; Sadie, the deceased wife of O. Cresswell, of Belle Plaine, Iowa; and Joe, Vance, Jack, Dee and Margaret, all of whom are still on the home farm.

Fraternally Mr. Haynes is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America. He attends the Christian church and is interested in all that pertains to the welfare and upbuilding of his district. For twelve years he served as school director, but he has never had desire for political office, preferring that his public service shall be done as a private citizen. Both Mr. and Mrs. Haynes are held in high esteem, their many good qualities endearing them to all with whom they have come in contact. In his business affairs Mr. Haynes is progressive and alert and what he undertakes he carries forward to successful completion.

(Note by RRC: From other sources, I have the first name of the mother of Emma Galvin, Charles' wife, as Margaret, not May, and her birth state = IN, not OH; I have the first name of the father of Emma Galvin as Joseph, not John; I have Canady, not Kennedy, for the married name of the 2nd child of Charles.)

Margaret and Carson Cram — 1955

C. CARSON CRAM FAMILY

Burchard Von Cram and wife, Amgard Von Veltheim of Oelbar, Germany were sent to England. Burchard, as a soldier in the service of the Bishop of Durham, received a land grant near Jarrow, New Castle on Tyne. His great grandon, John and wife Hester emigrated to America in 1635. They came first to Boston, later to Hampton Falls, N.H. where Hester died in 1677 and John in 1681. Caleb, a son of John's great, great, great-grandson Asa, and two other sons, Asa and John came to Iowa in 1865. Caleb and wife, Sarah Putnam are Carsons great-grandparents and Carson Eugene and wife, Henrietta Stanton his grandparents. His parents, Claude and wife Harriet Jacques came to Lohrville on their wedding day, March 26, 1902. Charles Carson was married to Margaret Haynes, Feb. 5, 1925.

Margaret's parents, Charles Fremont and Emma (Galvin) Haynes were born at Pleasantville, Marion County, Iowa. They came to Calhoun County in 1886. Fremont's grandfather, Jacob was born March 15, 1796 in Pennsylvania, married Elizabeth Shriner, July 3, 1817, in Ohio. In 1838, when living at Terre Haute, Indiana, Jacob was sent to Northwest Territory to make treaties and survey. In 1948, Jacob purchased 865 acres near Red Rock, Iowa. Fremont's parents Silas and Margaret (Rose) Haynes came to Marioon County in 1849 and to Calhoun County in 1886.

Margaret was born Oct. 5 and Carson March 6, 1903. Margaret taught rural school two years. Carson worked in and around Lohrville, in Lake City, and Lake View, for Lake View Ice & Supply until 1938, when he became a clerk in the Lake View Post Office. Also in 1938, an opportunity came to buy a four bedroom house for $800. Carson had taken out life insurance in 1920. A loan value request was returned with notice the company was insolvent and assets frozen. A retired contractor suggested a nearly new Chevrolet be sold for the down payment and necessary improvements and he would take a note and $10 dollar monthly payments on the balance. Three daughters, Bette, Jo and Sadee were 13, 4 and 2 years old when this house was acquired. When it was sold in 1955, Bette was Mrs. George D. Smith, Jo was Mrs. Robert Leonard and Sadee to be married in 1956 to LeRoy Frank. A new two bedroom house was built in 1955. In 1960, Carson took Physical Disability Retirement. This home was sold and an apartment rented in Dr. Lierman's new office building. Carson passed away May 25, 1961.

Margaret clerked at a Lake View hardware store from 1961-1973. She bought her present home in 1962 and repurchased the 1938 house in 1968 as rental property.

There are 12 grandchildren: Jackie, Diane, Georgia, Doug and Kim Smith; Chuck, Calvin and Clint Leonard; Cynthia, Mike, Joe and K'Lee Frank; and 9 great grandchildren: Kirstin Terry, Alicia and Matthew Theis; Kelli and Ben Zastrow; Lisa and Lori Leonard, Brook Leonard; Andra Snyder.

Biography of Harrison 'Harry' Horsman, ID = 13542

HARRISON HORSMAN.

Among the active, energetic and enterprising business men of Marion county is Harrison Horsman, president of the Citizens Bank of Pleasantville, in which institution he has been a stockholder for the past twenty-two years or more. He is also the owner of a farm in Union and Pleasant Grove townships, comprising four hundred and thirteen acres and his rental of this property brings to him a gratifying annual income.

For sixty years Mr. Horsman has lived in Marion county, having arrived in November, 1854, at which time he-took up his abode upon a farm in Union township. He was then a youth of fourteen years, his birth having occurred in Highland county, Ohio, June 2, 1840, his parents being Levi and Sidney (Bonecutter) Horsman, who were natives of Virginia but were married in the Buckeye state. They started west in 1844 and spent ten years in Shelby county, Illinois, whence they removed to Iowa in 1854, casting in their lot with the pioneer settlers of this county. The father here engaged in farming after entering land from the government in Union township. Not a furrow had been turned nor an improvement made upon his place, but with characteristic energy he began its development and transformed the tract into richly cultivated fields to which he added from time to time until he became the owner of an extensive farm property, in the conduct and management of which he was very successful. He resided upon that farm until his death, which occurred in 1873 when he was sixty-five years of age. In politics he was a republican and gave loyal support to the principles of that party. Both he and his wife were consistent and faithful members of the Christian church. Mrs. Horsman survived her husband for a number of years and passed away at the advanced age of eighty-eight. In their family were seven children, of whom five are yet living: David, who is now retired in Pleasantville; John, of, Wichita, Kansas; Joseph, living in Union township; Mrs. Grace Elder, a widow whose home is in Kansas; and Harrison. One sister died in early life in Illinois and another died in this county.

Harrison Horsman was reared in Marion county and attended the public schools. He also pursued his education in Pella for a time and was a pupil there when the Civil war broke out. He watched with interest the progress of events, saw that the war was to be no mere holiday affair and, prompted by a spirit of patriotism, offered his services to the government, enlisting at Red Rock in 1862 as a member of Company H, Fortieth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he served for three years and three days, or until the close of hostilities. He became a noncommissioned officer and was mustered out at Fort Gibson, Arkansas, in the fall of 1865. He was never seriously wounded nor was he at any time held as a prisoner of war. He participated, however, in many hotly contested engagements, arduous campaigns and long, hard marches and returned to his home with a creditable military record. When the war was over he resumed farming, in which he was actively engaged until 1894, when he retired from business life and took up his abode in Pleasantville, where he erected the comfortable and commodious residence that he now occupies. While upon the farm he carefully managed the work of the fields and his energy and determination brought good results.

Mr. Horsman was married in Pleasant Grove township in 1867 to Miss Margaret Jane Logan, who was born October 31, 1849, at what is now Pleasantville, a daughter of Gilmore and Mary (Stratton) Logan, who had settled in Marion county in the fall of 1845, being among the pioneers of this part of the state. All around was the unclaimed and undeveloped prairie and the work of improvement had scarcely been begun, but with other pioneer settlers Mr. Logan aided in planting the seeds of civilization that in time brought forth abundant harvests. He entered land and followed farming and upon his original home place he resided until his death, which occurred in 1895 when he was seventy-five years of age. For a brief period he had survived his wife, who died in 1891. They were earnest, Christian people, loyal to their professions as members of the Baptist church. In the family were three sons and three daughters, who are yet living: Mrs. Horsman; Charles, a resident of Knoxville; Albert, whose home is in Dallas, this county; George, living in Des Moines; Mrs. C. R. Johnson, who is located at Centralia, Kansas; and Mrs. Bertie Elliott, of Des Moines. Mr. and Mrs. Horsman are the parents of four children: Leonard, who died leaving a wife and one son, Gail, who are now residents of Knoxville; Iva Nora, who died in infancy; Elva, the wife of Thomas Conway, by whom she has five children, their home being upon her father's farm; and Lula, who is the wife of Warren Summy. They also live on one of her father's farms and their family numbers three children.

Mr. Horsman exercises his right of franchise in support of the men and measures of the republican party and his fellow townsmen, appreciating his worth and ability, have called him to a number of local offices, including that of member of the board of supervisors, on which he served from 1896 until 1899, exercising his official prerogatives in support of many measures for the public good. He and his family are members of the Christian church and he is highly esteemed throughout the community in which he makes his home. More than two decades ago he became connected with the Citizens Bank of Pleasantville and since his retirement from farming has been called to the office of president, in which capacity he is now connected with the institution. He is a thoroughly reliable and energetic business man and in every relation of life commands the confidence and good-will of those who know him.

Biographies of William Albert Connely, ID = 1381

HON. WILLIAM CONNELY.—In the annals of Clay county no name, mayhap, is more worthy of honor and respect than that of the late Hon. William Connely, who was an extensive landholder in Harrison township, and for many years one of its most prominent and influential citizens. A son of Gilmore Connely, he was born in Fayette county, Kentucky, of substantial Scotch-Irish ancestry. A native of Kentucky, Gilmore Connely lived there during his early life. Subsequently coming with his family to Indiana, he located in Putnam county at an early period of its settlement. Purchasing a tract of timbered land near Putnamville, he cleared and improved a home- stead, and from that time until his death, at a good old age, he was prosperously engaged in farming, stock raising and in real estate dealings. Very young when his parents came to this state, William Connely took advantage of every offered opportunity for acquiring an education, and later in life became a very successful business man and a most wise and safe counsellor. Removing after his marriage to Missouri, he settled in Bates county, where he purchased a large tract of land, on which he began improvements. He was strongly opposed to slavery, and the exponents of that cause made it so very unpleasant for him that he sold out and returned to Vigo county. A few years later he came to Harrison township, purchased large tracts of land in the Eel River valley, and was a resident of Clay county until his death, which occurred in October, 1896, on his estate. Mr. Connely married Elizabeth Leavitt, who was born in Riley township, Vigo county, a daughter of William Humphrey and Ann (Halstead) Leavitt. She preceded him to the better world, dying in 1875, leaving three children, Rhoda, Anna Kate, and Frances. Anna K. is the wife of William J. Hall, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this volume. Mr. Connely always took an active and intelligent interest in everything pertaining to the public welfare, and in the state legislature rendered excellent service two or more terms, representing Vigo county in 1877 and Clay county in 1886.

(Note by RRC: From other sources, I have 1897 as William's death year, not 1896, and his wife's death year as 1876, not 1875.)

W.A. Connely, Riley, was born in Boone county, Kentucky, in 1821, and went with his parents to Montgomery county, Kentucky, thence to Putnam county, Indiana, where his father, Gilmore Connely, died in 1864. He came to Vigo county thirteen years ago, and in 1856 he married Elizabeth Leavitt, a daughter of William Leavitt, one of the early pioneers of this county. She was born in Vigo county in 1829, and died there in September, 1876, leaving a family of three children: Rhoda R., Annie R., and Francis M. Mr. Connely owns 800 acres in Clay county. In politics he is a democrat, and has served one term in the legislature, having been elected in 1877. He is also a prominent and energetic member of the Masonic fraternity.

MARION EDGAR COOPER.

One of the thrifty farmers and well known citizens of Warren township, Putnam county, is Marion Edgar Cooper, who was born in this community, May 17, 1868, the son of Archibald and Frances (Connely) Cooper. The father, born February 25, 1836, in this county, was the son of Archibald Cooper, who was born in Greenbrier county, Virginia, January 15, 1798, and when quite young moved to Tennessee. When sixteen years old he enlisted in the war of 1812 and served until its close. On April 6, 1823, he married Elizabeth Hodges, and in October, 1834, he moved with his family of eleven children to Putnam county, Indiana, settling in Putnamville the following year. A few years later he moved to a farm in section 10, Warren township, where he resided until his death, which occurred on April 17, 1872. He was a blacksmith by trade and built the first shop in Warren township. Mrs. Cooper was born in Claiborne county, Tennessee, February 14, 1800, and she died January 26, 1868, her ashes now resting beside her husband's in the cemetery at Bethel. Of the eleven children they brought to this county, two of them are now living - Mrs. Margaret Duckworth, of Iowa, and James C. Cooper, of Putnamville. The latter remembers a family tradition to the effect that his maternal grandmother was scalped by the Indians, and although a very small boy at the time the family came to Indiana, he remembers well when his mother placed him in the wagon preparatory to making the long overland journey from Tennessee.

Archibald Cooper, Jr., was married on December 22, 1844, to Frances E. Connely, the daughter of Gilmore and Jane Connely. He moved with his family from Kentucky in 1834 and settled on a two-hundred-and-seventy-acre tract of land, a part of which was the old Cooper homestead. WALTON, KY, ROUTE 2

The Conley family is one of the oldest in this section of Kentucky as they came here shortly after the Revolutionary War and started farming on a tract of land near Walton after they had cleared off the trees and wood groves. Land was cheap at that time and the great grandfather of John W. Conley was offered one hundred acres of land across from his farm in trade for one horse. The writer is uninformed as to whether or not the trade was consummated.

John W. Conley was married to Kate Ryan in 1889. Both of this couple went to the same school, and their parents' farms adjoined.

Mr. Conley was born on October 11, 1866, the son of R. A. and Elizabeth F. Conley. The house in which he is now living was built by his grandfather in 1861 and 62, during the stirring days of the Civil War.

Biography of Thomas Henry Bagnell, ID = 15244

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in the “Encyclopedia of the History of St. Louis: a compendium of history and biography for ready reference, Vol. I”, edited by William Hyde & Howard L. Conard, The Southern History Co., New York, Louisville, St. Louis, 1899, page 66.)

Bagnell, Thomas H., railway builder, was born December 21, 1845, in Rowden, Canada, and died in St. Louis, March 21, 1895. He was the third son of William and Amelia Bagnell, and was reared in the Canadian town in which he was born, receiving a liberal education in the schools of upper and lower Canada. He came to Chicago, Illinois, when he was eighteen years of age, and gained his earliest knowledge of railway building as a tool-carrier in the employ of some of the largest railroad contractors of that day. After serving in this capacity for a time he was employed by his elder brother, Robert Bagnell, who had then just entered upon an eminently successful career as a builder of Western railroads. He was associated with his brother in various capacities until the firm of Bagnell Brothers was organized in 1869, in which year he became a partner in the firm, acting also as bookkeeper and paymaster. For ten years thereafter he had entire charge of the books and accounts and of all the disbursements of the firm, but in 1879 he was relieved of a portion of his growing responsibilities by his younger brother, Samuel Bagnell, who became the firm's paymaster. In 1893, when the business of the Bagnell Brothers was incorporated as the Bagnell Timber Company, Thomas H. Bagnell was made secretary and treasurer of the corporation, a position which he held until his death. In 1875 he became extensively interested in sheep and cattle raising in Colorado and for some years was a resident of that State. Several years later he purchased what was known as the Elk Hill Stock Farm, located on Black River in the southeastern part of Saline County, Missouri, and carried on there one of the most extensive farming enterprises in the State. This farm, which still belongs to his estate, comprised nineteen hundred acres of fine agricultural land, of which one thousand acres are as fine bluegrass lands as can be found in the famous "bluegrass region" of Kentucky. Here Mr. Bagnell engaged largely in raising thoroughbred horses and other kinds of stock, and was scarcely less prominent as farmer than as railroad builder. In all his transactions and business ventures he exhibited broad capacity and was uniformly successful in his operations. He died leaving a large estate, although his expenditures had always been made on a liberal scale and he had been also a generous donor to charitable, religious and other enterprises of a kindred nature. Politically he was identified with the Republican party, and his religious affiliations were with the Episcopal Church. He was a member also of the Masonic order, affiliating with Mt. Moriah Lodge No. 40, of St. Louis. He married, in 1876, Miss A. M. Gant, of Grand Chain, Illinois, whose ancestors were prominent pioneers of the State of Kentucky, and whose grandfather served as a Kentucky soldier in the Mexican War. Mrs. Bagnell died in 1888, and their surviving children are Nellie Amelia, Robert Oscar, Thomas H., and William F. Bagnell. Their daughter, Miss Nellie A. Bagnell, graduated from the Hardin Female College, of Mexico, Missouri, at sixteen years of age, and later spent two years in Parisian schools, perfecting her French and music education. Robert O. and Thomas H. Bagnell are now students at Washington University, and the younger son, William F. Bagnell, is still at school at Baden, a suburb of the city. Since the death of their parents their home has been with their aunt, Miss Jane Bagnell, at Cloverdale, a fine old country home in the outskirts of the city.

(Note by RRC: From other sources, I have his marriage year as 1877, not 1876; his wife’s maiden name was Gaunt, not Gant.)

After graduating high school in Cairo, Illinois in 1920, he worked for two years as an apprentice pharmacist, three years as a grain inspector for the Cairo Board of Trade, and in 1924 he went to work for the Mobile & Ohio Railroad for two years. While in Cairo, he helped organize Oriac chapter of DeMolay and was a charter member, serving one term as Senior Counselor. During this time, he played professional football for five years in and around Illinois, Kentucky and Missouri with the Cairo "Independents". Another player invited him to travel together to California and play pro there. They arrived in Los Angeles August 30, 1926, where Fred got a job working with McKesson Wholesale Drug Co. as a clerk until 1930. The next five years he owned and operated a restaurant across the street from Universal Movie Studios in Hollywood with his brother, Bill. They ran it successfully for five years, but lost their lease at the end of that time, as the depression was hard on their business.

Bernace was born in Aberdeen, South Dakota the only child of Egbert and Grace Merrifield. After moving many times, they settled into the Los Angeles area. Bernace attended Manual Arts High School, then went to work for the Van de Kamp Bakery Co. in one of their outlets.

After her marriage to J.Frederick Davidson in 1929, they had two children, Adele and Frederick Bruce Davidson. They bought a home in the West Adams area of Los Angeles and J.Fred worked with Bert Merrifield in his real estate business for a time. Later, J.Fred took a job with the Southern Pacific Railroad as a claims inspector where he worked until his retirement. He was also a member of the Southern Pacific Railroad Square & Compass Club (he served as Chaplain circa 1949).

Bernace and Fred enjoyed growing dahlias, and they won many awards for their flower blossoms and Bernace for her flower arrangements, most notably at the Los Angeles County Fair. Fred served as Secretary of the Inglewood Dahlia and Floral Society.

They moved to Westchester, and Bernace worked painting ceramic figures and as Assistant Librarian in Westchester. They were a Charter Family of the Westchester Christian Church in 1943 and put in countless hours building the church structure. They both held many offices in the church, including Choir Director, Superintendant of Sunday School, and President of the Women's Fellowship.

Fred was active in the Masons, Scottish Rite and the Al Malaika Shrine, including membership with Mount Olive Masonic Lodge #506 in Hollywood from 1936. After J.Fred retired from Southern Pacific, their home was taken for airport expansion, so they built a new home in Crestline at the San Moritz Club area of Lake Gregory, California. Later they moved to a mobile home park in Huntington Beach, California to be near more of their old friends.

After J.Fred's passing in 1974 and due to failing health, Bernace moved to Encinitas, California to be near her daughter Adele for care and comfort.

Biography of Harry C. Walker, ID = 152954

(Transcribed by RRC from page 92 of the book “Leaves from the Family Tree”, by Harry C. Walker, Promise Pub. Co., Savannah, GA, 1991, 92 pages.)

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Harry C. Walker was born the youngest son of Lee Otis and Cyrious Ann Walker on a farm near Grand Chain, Illinois on May 12, 1915.

When his father died of typhoid fever in 1924 and his mother of frail health died two years later, Harry was taken in by his eldest brother and his wife. In the spring of 1928, his sister-in-law died. Harry then was taken care of by his grandmother's sister, Aunt Jane, who was then 79 years old and her unmarried son Henry.

Harry gained much of his knowledge of his family heritage by this long link with the past.

Harry went to college and studied education. Twenty five years were spent in Illinois mainly in the field of administration. During World War II, he served in the China-Burma-India Theater for 2 1/2 years. After 1964, he spent sixteen years teaching at Colonial High School in Orlando, Florida.

Following retirement at age 65, he enjoyed being an "Adjunct Teacher" of Government at Valencia Community College until a stroke caused him to retire for the third time in October, 1988.

Since that time, he has recovered fully with no perceptible impairment. This "misfortune" was the "door of opportunity.” It allowed Harry to have the time t0 put in writing the many stories he has shared over the years with his wife, Wanda, daughter, Sharon, son, Lynn, and grandchildren, who have encouraged him to write this book.

(Note by RRC: I never met Harry, wish I had, he was a true American hero from the Greatest Generation. He wrote an excellent family history! It contains several beautiful family photos; mentions his early Steers ancestors (but not Connely); has some evidence that Tharp was Thorpe early on.

Harry also wrote “An Autobiography of a G.I. Joe”, 2001. A bio that I found online was probably taken from the 2001 book: Born on a farm in Grand Chain, Illinois, May 12, 1915, Harry C. Walker was orphaned at 11 years of age and taken in by his 79 year old Aunt Jane. With her support, love, and his willingness to work, he was able to attend McKendree College and Southern Illinois. He eventually received a master’s degree in Education and Social Studies. The author invested 49 years in the field of education, first in teaching and then in administration. Uncle Sam and WWII interrupted Harry’s love for teaching, however, when he was sent on a real adventure to help build the Burma Road though the Huck-Cong Jungle for two and a half years. After publishing Leaves From His Family Tree in 1991, Mr. Walker’s wife, Wanda, daughter, Sharon, and son, Lynn, convinced him to put some of his remarkable WWII experiences into print.)

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in "Portrait and biographical album of De Witt and Piatt Counties, Ill.", Chicago, Ill.: Chapman Bros., 1891, pages 979 - 981.)

THOMAS D. BONDURANT. The name of Bondurant has been bourne by generations of noble men and women, some of whom have endured privations for principle's sake, and who have transmitted to their descendants the steadfastness of nature that cannot fail to make of life a success in the best sense. One of the present representatives of the family is Thomas D. Bondurant, an honored resident of Goose Creek Township, Piatt County, whose biography is herewith appended.

Our subject is a lineal descendant of Dr. Bondurant, who was one of the Huguenots banished from France in 1690, on account of their religious faith and practice. The little band of earnest Christians crossed the Atlantic and landed near Charleston, S. C., thus establishing on American soil the family which has for several generations been represented in the Southern States. The grandfather of our subject was Thomas Bondurant, a native of Virginia, who married Margaret Drury, who was born in the same State. They removed to Boone County, Ky., in 1820, and spent the remnant of their days there, the husband dying in 1840 and the wife a few years later.

In the family of this worthy couple was a son, Joseph B., who was born September 18, 1801, in Bedford County, Va. He accompanied his parents to the Blue Grass State, whence he came to Illinois in 1828. He crossed the country in wagons, being ferried over the Ohio near Cincinnati and reaching Sangamon County entered eighty acres of land on which he made his home five years. He then removed to Athens where he lived for about ten years then, in April, 1844, returned to Sangamon County and became a resident of Mechanicsburg. There his death took place April 30, 1864, after a long and useful life, in which he had added to the honor of the family name and won the hearty respect of his associates. He was a man of sincere piety and a member of the Christian Church.

Joseph B. Bondurant was married in 1823 to Martha Thorp, who was born in Boone County, Ky., November 2, 1805. The happy union resulted in the birth of eleven children and three sons and three daughters are yet living. These are: the subject of this biographical notice; Lucretia J., wife of Joel Churchill, a farmer in Goose Creek Township; Alexander C., a farmer in Polk County, Iowa, living near the town of Bondurant which was named in his honor; Mary E., who resides with her brother Thomas; Fanny, wife of William Thornton, a farmer in Polk County, Iowa; and Joseph N., a farmer near Paxton, this State. The mother, although now in her eighty-sixth year, is in the possession of all her faculties and is quite hale and hearty. She is living with the son of whom we write, and his handsome residence contains many artistic specimens of fancy work that have resulted from her ingenuity and taste. Mrs. Bondurant joined the Christian Church in 1838 and has been a zealous and faithful follower of the Master from that time.

Thomas D. Bondurant opened his eyes to the light of day, December 29, 1831, in Sangamon County, in the log cabin that had been built by his father a few years before. This, his boyhood's home, was rudely constructed, the walls being chinked with wood and daubed with mud, the ceiling of clapboards, and the floor of puncheon. As may well be supposed the school privileges that the lad enjoyed were meager, as the tuition was paid by subscription and the sparsely settled condition of the country would not authorize teachers in spending but a few months of each year in any locality. In the intervals of his attendance at school, our subject worked for his father until he was of age.

Mr. Bondurant then started out for himself, beginning his labors in life by breaking prairie. In order to do this work he bought a yoke of oxen on time. In 1856 he came to Piatt County and entered a tract of Government land in what is now Goose Creek Township, and the following year began his improvement of the property, making a permanent location upon it. There was not a house in sight and the surrounding country was open prairie on which not a furrow had been turned. Mr. Bondurant borrowed an ax with which to drive a stake in order to picket his horse, and ere long had a small frame shanty up in which he kept bachelor's hall for some time with only his thoughts for companions. His little dwelling has been replaced by one of the most attractive and substantial residences in the county, and his home life is made cheerful and happy by the companionship of the mother to whom he is devoted and the sister who is also an object of his affectionate care. The present dwelling which was erected in 1882, occupies a natural elevation, from which the ground gradually slopes in all directions, giving excellent drainage and a wide view over well tilled acres. It is elaborately furnished throughout, as the labors of Mr. Bondurant have been so well rewarded that he is able to gratify every taste.

Few men who have begun life without other capital than their own mental and physical abilities have been more successful than Mr. Bondurant in achieving fortune and winning the favorable opinions of their fellows. It is doubtful if this section of the State can present a higher type of the architect of his own fortunes than he. He is the personal owner of a large amount of real estate, consisting of about fifteen hundred acres in Piatt County and eighty acres in Indiana. He and a brother are the joint owners of nine hundred acres in Iroquois and twenty-two hundred acres in Kankakee County; they now have about six hundred head of cattle and one hundred head of horses on their estates.

Mr. Bondurant laid out the now thriving village of Deland in 1872 and has done more then any other one man toward its improvement and development. He stands in the very front rank among the citizens of this section and is well and favorably known over a large extent of country. He was Supervisor of Goose Creek Township for some years, but is not at present holding any public office. He is well read, and while weighing carefully the merits of any subject to which his attention is called, he is prompt to decide and steadfast in his adherence to what he believes to be just and right. Politically, he is a Republican. He belongs to the Christian Church and conscientiously discharges the obligations of life, the only fault his friends have to find with him being that he is unmarried.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, the middle name of this Thomas Bondurant was Early, so his middle initial was E, not D; the middle initial of his father was A, not B; "Thorp" should be Tharp.)

Joel Churchill was also an early settler of the 1970's. He married Lucretia Bondurant. One son, Edgar, spent his life north east of DeLand where Howard Gantz lives today and then lived many years in DeLand, living first where Wrench's live and then in the Hermann Meyer house. They finally moved to Cerro Gordo. Both were quite old when they died, Mrs. Churchill passing shortly after her 100th birthday. They had one son, Wayne, who died in a farm accident. His wife was Gertrude Conner who was the local telephone operator for many years. Edgar's brother Will also remained in the township, being the father of Alice Churchill Conner, Harold and Edgar and Gertrude Jordan.

(Found online at BIOGRAPHIES OF PIATT COUNTY, IL; source: "History of Decatur County, Iowa, and Its People" by J. M. Howell, Heman Conoman Smith; published by S.J. Clarke Pub. Co., 1915 - submitted by K. Torp.)

THOMAS A. CHURCHILL.

Thomas A. Churchill is an extensive stock-raiser and dealer and owns and operates a splendid farm of five hundred and eighty-three acres on sections 28 and 29, Garden Grove township. His birth occurred near Springfield, in Sangamon county, Illinois, in 1856, and he is a son of Joel and Lucretia (Bondurant) Churchill, both natives of Kentucky, although descended from New England stock. The ancestry in the Churchill line is traced back to England. The Bondurants were originally French Hugenots but about 1687, following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, emigrated to Virginia. When a boy, Joel Churchill accompanied his parents to Sangamon county, Illinois, and there his marriage occurred. He was a farmer and was well known and highly respected in his community. In 1865 he removed with his family to Douglas county, Kansas, settling between Lawrence and Ottawa. In the spring of 1874 they returned to Illinois and became residents of Piatt county. Mr. Churchill's political allegiance was given to the republican party and he and his wife were devoted members of the Christian church. Both passed away in Piatt county, his demise occurring in the spring of 1902 when he was seventy-six years of age, and that of his wife in January, 1896, when she was seventy years old. To their union were born six sons and five daughters, of whom our subject is the sixth in order of birth, and all of whom are living, residing in Illinois, Iowa and Missouri.

Thomas A. Churchill was reared in Illinois and Kansas and received his education in the public schools. He began his independent career in Illinois and although he had no capital, he was energetic and determined and soon began to prosper financially. Later he removed to Wayne county, Iowa, where he farmed for five years, and on the 18th of November, 1908, he removed to Garden Grove, Decatur county. He remained there until October 18, 1909, when he settled upon his present farm of five hundred and eighty-three acres on sections 28 and 29, Garden Grove township. His property is not only extensive, but is well improved, and he is meeting with marked success as a raiser of high grade hogs and cattle.

Mr. Churchill was married in Kansas to Miss Mary Browning, a native of Indiana, who accompanied her parents to the Sunflower state in 1868. Her father was a farmer and blacksmith and took considerable interest in public affairs, serving at one time as assessor of Franklin county, Kansas. His wife passed away in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church and he is also deceased, both dying in Kansas. They were the parents of four daughters and three sons, of whom two have passed away. To Mr. and Mrs. Churchill have been born six children, the eldest of whom died in infancy. Olive L. graduated from a high school in Illinois and later attended Drake University. She is now teaching in the Des Moines public schools. Vera Pearl is also a high-school graduate and has taught school, although she is now at home. Martha Elizabeth is at home. Clifton Bondurant, who operates part of the home farm, married Miss Louise Gehlhaar, and they have a daughter, Lorene. Thomas Arthur is also at home. Mr. Churchill is a republican and is now serving as a member of the Garden Grove township board of trustees. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and to the Royal Neighbors, and his wife is likewise a member of the latter order. Their daughter Pearl is a member of the P. E. O. Sisterhood. Mr. Churchill has made many improvements upon his farm since it came into his possession and has but recently erected a large barn, which replaces one destroyed by fire a year ago, the building with its contents, including five horses, being an entire loss. Although he began his career empty handed, he has accumulated more than a competence, and his success is a source of justifiable pride to him. He has also gained the sincere respect and esteem of all who know him, for his business methods have at all times been open and honorable, and he has manifested a praiseworthy consideration for the rights of others.

T. E. Bondurant - founder of DeLand.

Thomas Bondurant had arrived here with others of his family in 1854. He soon thereafter secured 293 acres of land in the north-central half of the township, paying the government fifty cents an acre. He immediately put out an orchard near which he built a house for the family. This house stood north and a little east of what is now the village. The lane to it was directly opposite what we now call Main Street. His land was partially covered with water each year and he drained it with a mole-type contraption mentioned before. Mr. Bondurant was honest and industrious and a shrewd business man. He added to his holdings from time to time and became one of the wealthiest men in central Illinois. He was the first president of the First National Bank of DeLand which was established in 1900. He was a very generous man, giving freely to the churches as well as taking an active interest in their work. He took an interest in neighboring churches, as well as the Eureka college which was affiliated with the Christian churches. He served as supervisor of Goose Creek Township for seven years. He built a beautiful home at the edge of DeLand for his family which at that time consisted of his mother, his sister Mary, and his niece Lucy Thornton who was his secretary. This was in 1882. He died there in 1905.

Two of the sidelights of Thomas Bondurant's interest in his village were simple things but of value to the community. He planted maple trees all up and down the boulevards and they created shade and beauty for the town for many years. There are still some old maples in town that may have been among those he planted, though most of them are replacements. The streets of DeLand in the early days sometimes became a sea of mud during a long rainy period. At such times, it was very difficult for people who came to town to shop, to load their groceries and other purchases into their buggies without getting mired down. Mr. Bondurant had several carloads of limestone slabs shipped into town which he had laid along the edges of the sidewalks, thus giving solid ground on which to load and unload. Later, some of these slabs were used for curbing. It has been less than ten years since sidewalks were replaced on the south side of the Odd Fellow building (the old State Bank), the east side of the same bank and in front of Rigg's store, and the North side of what is now the Post Office, and the limestone curbing was taken up then.

Mr. Bondurant was a jolly man. He could take and enjoy a joke even if it was directed toward him. Once someone placed a doll on the community Christmas tree for him. The account said that "it pleased friend Tom very well." Mr. Bondurant was a bachelor and when he built the house in town he came in for considerable ribbing. To quote the article in the county paper:

"T.E. Bondurant is in Chicago buying furniture and carpets for his new residence. He has been gone for so long that some of the boys began to fear he had been allured from the paths of rectitude but remembered he couldn't naturally be expected to know all the wants of a household as quickly as a happy benedict so agreed he should have plenty of time."

Editor, owner and founder of the Atlanta Express, of Atlanta, Missouri, is one of the best known newspaper men of North Missouri. Mr. Howlett is a native of Missouri, having been born in Putnam county, Liberty township, on December 17, 1871.

His parents, Francis A. and Buena Vista A. (Dale) Howlett, were natives of Kentucky and Missouri, respectively. The father was born October 5, 1828, in Kentucky, and while he was yet a child the family removed to Illinois and later to Henry county, Iowa. There he grew to manhood, remaining at the old homestead until twenty-six years of age.

In 1854 he fell a victim to the gold excitement in California and became one of a party which crossed the plains in that year with ox teams and remained in California for fifteen years. But, meeting with indifferent success as a miner, he returned to Missouri in 1869, locating in Putnam county, when he met and married Miss Buena Vista A. Dale, their marriage taking place in April, 1870. To them were born four sons and two daughters, but both daughters died in infancy, the sons are living and filling important positions of life in various parts of the United States.

Arthur C. Howlett was educated in Missouri and at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, where he attended "Howe's Academy," a private school for teachers. After passing two years at the academy he turned his attention to teaching and followed it successfully for some time. Later he again attended "Howe's Academy," taking a postgraduate course of twelve weeks and then returned to Missouri and followed school teaching for some years.

In 1903 he removed to Schuyler county, Missouri, where he engaged in farming, but not finding tilling of the soil to his liking. In 1906 he abandoned it and removed to Kirksville and entered the State Normal School, which he attended some months.

While he was still a student at the State Normal he was tendered the position of principal of the Greentop schools, which he accepted and acceptably filled that position for two years, resigning at the and of the second term that he might enter the newspaper field.

In the spring of 1908 he removed to Atlanta, Missouri, and April 2 of that year issued the first copy of the "Atlanta Express," a weekly paper, which has been a success from the start.

The paper is Democratic in its politics and Mr. Howlett is an active worker in the cause of his party, and his paper has ever advanced the interests of its candidates, and defended the principles for which it stands.

Mr. Howlett was married August 15, 1895, to Miss Lucinda M. Hemstreet, daughter of Benjamin Hemstreet. Three children have been born to them, Buena Vista Janet, Margie May, and Arthur Conley, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Howlett are active workers in the Christian church of which they are members, and he holds membership in the Modern Woodmen of America.

Biography by Lenora Jerred Dodds of Arthur Conley Howlett, ID = 15521

The A. C. Howlett Story

By Lenora Jerred Dodds

The A. C. Howletts came to the Texsam Community from Putnam County in Missouri, where A. C. was born in a log cabin in 1871. His paternal ancestor had emigrated from Scotland to England and then to America in the 1700·s. Mrs. Howlett's maiden name was Mary Lucinda Hemstreet and she was called "Ninnie." She was born in 1875 near west Grove, Iowa. Her father's people were Holland Dutch and came to America about 1684. The Howletts had three children; Buena, Margie and Arthur Conley. Jr., called Art. They came to Mellette County to homestead in 1913 before the girls were married.

Mrs. Howlett's father was a Civil War veteran and drew a fairly low number for a homestead. He decided he was too old, and his health too poor to use it so he turned it over to Ninnie.

A. C. came to Mellette County first to check out the claim. He arrived the 15th day of May, 1913. The claim was about 10 miles northwest of White River in the Texam Community. He thought the land was worth living on, at least for 14 month, so he filed on it. To establish residence, he hired help to build a 10 by 12 hack for the family to move into later.

A person could not make a living on a homestead itself, at first, so outside jobs were always needed to keep a family going. A. C. had taught school, farmed and published a newspaper back in Missouri, so he was prepared for making a living for his family. There was nothing for A. C. to do around White River and he did not have money to go ahead and improve on the claim, so he got a job on the Tripp County Journal in Winner. He went to work on May 20 with a promise of a typesetting job for daughter Buena. After school was out, the family came by train to join him on June 28, 1913.

One weekend, the family hired a team and wagon and drove to the homestead. The trip took two days to make the seventy miles from Winner. Ninnie had written in some of her stories: "People who never were in South Dakota in the early days cannot imagine what this trip was like. No graded roads, only trails that went along the easiest route. Crossing streams where they could be forded, and going up the hills where they were less steep. We forded the Little White River close to the old Indian Day School where Frank Perry's father taught. There was a foot bridge built near the ford, that had been built by Mr. Perry and the Indians so the Indian children could come to school. It was a swinging bridge suspended on wire that were tied to trees on either side of the river."

They passed the Standing Elk house, after fording the river, then Doctor Pugh's, Miss Wright's, Beal's, Jensen's and Searle's. Then there were no more houses along the trail, until they came to their own little shack sitting all alone on the prairie without another house in sight.

Arriving at the homestead, they discovered there was no place to put the stovepipe out for the little laundry stove they had. So they took a pane of glass out of one window and stuck the stovepipe out through the hole.

Ninnie did not think she could cook on the little stove, but she soon learned. The next day she cooked a jackrabbit that one of the men who had come to help had killed. The men helped A. C. put rubberoid roofing on the roof, where the earlier roofing had blown away, and they ate dinner with the Howletts. Wooden packing boxes were used for chairs and a large box turned over a barrel for the table. Home-canned fruit from Missouri had been packed in the barrel.

At that time, they stayed about a week in the shack, using make-shift furniture. Ninnie said it seemed like a continued picnic. They carried water and bought milk from their nearest neighbor, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Witherow, who lived about a half mile north of the Howletts, just over the hill.

A. C. continued to work on the Tripp County Journal till the first of November when he dealt for the Mellette County News in White River. He again left the family behind and went out to run the paper. When he finally found a house, the old Bev Witherspoon house, the family joined him on Christmas Day.

They rode to White River with Chris Anders, who had gone to Winner after them in an open-top Auburn auto. Said a family member: "Imagine riding 60 miles in a convertible with the top down in minus 20 degree weather!" This auto, however, was equipped with a cover made of a material like oilcloth, that had five holes through which the passengers could put their heads and button a collar around their necks. If your head got cold, you could unbutton the collar and pull in your head, like a turtle. Needless to say, we all took advantage of this protection-except Chris, who was an old-timer at the business. And used to the outdoors, and dressed warmly with a cowhide fur coat, cap and mittens.

While we were still in the Bev Witherspoon house, the fire engine had to come one morning when smoke was discovered coming out the cellar. A. C. hurried to get the fire engine. It was a two-wheeled cart with a chemical tank. Filled with some kind of foaming substance, and was pulled by man power. A gong rang as the wheels went around and signaled other men to come running. The fire was small and was put out quickIy without much damage done.

Buena was married on March 8, 1914 to Ira H. Barclay, an Atlanta, Missouri boy, with whom she had gone to school. They filed on a relinquishment one mile west of the Howletts in the Texsam community.

A. C. had to get the family out on the homestead soon, so had to find something bigger than a 10 by 12 shack to live in. In the spring of 1914, he had a cellar dug and a house moved over it, dug a well, had some plowing done and some fence built. Ninnie's father was sick and not expected to live, so she and Art went back in March. Her father died in May, but she stayed on to help care for her grandmother, who had been making her home there for many years. She was past 93 years old and passed away in June. Buena, Ira, Margie and A. C. went back to help settle the estate, leaving the News in charge of Noah Gerig. A. C. settled up the estate and they got back to White River the first part of September, bringing Mother Hemstreet with them.

Mrs. Hemstreet bought a relinquishment about two and one half miles north of the Howletts. They bought a shack, west at the edge of the Badlands, and moved it to her homestead.

Then the families settled down in earnest to homestead. A. C. and Margie continued to work in White River putting out the paper, while Ninnie, Art and Mrs. Hemstreet stayed on the homestead. Ninnie would go after A. C. and Margie on Saturday afternoon and take them back Monday morning. Either Margie or Art would take Mrs. Hemstreet to her homestead on weekends to spend the night. Establishing residence meant living there part time, plowing a certain number of acres and planting it. This was the requirement for homesteading. Unless you owned a herd of cattle, a living could not be made entirely on a homestead without some outside means of making money.

Buena and Ira moved a good homestead shack on the relinquishment they bought. A. C. bought a team of dapple grey horses, and Ira bought a team of blacks. Together they formed a four-horse team, and Ira did the farming for all of them for a while. Ninnie, Margie and Little Art helped all they could.

A. C. 's team of greys would run away every chance they got. The first time, Ira and Frank Brickner were going to town on the running gears of the wagon when the box they were sitting on broke and spilled Ira and Frank off. The team got scared and ran down Cottonwood Hill, crossed the bridge and started up the hill on the other side. On the steep hillside, the team started rolling over and over to the sloughs at the bottom, where the wagon landed right side up. The horses were on their backs with their feet in the air. Untangling them took quite a while. They no longer looked grey after rolling in the mud in their travel down the hill, and A. C. did not recognize them when they got to town.

The next time they decided to run away was when they were moving Mrs. Hemstreet's shack from the Badlands to her homestead. Everyone wore out trying to catch them.

Another time, Margie was coming home after returning some borrowed machinery. Both horses had harnesses on and they were dragging the doubletrees. Margie was riding one horse and leading the other. The doubletrees bumped against one horse's heels and they started to run. The harness in some way pulled Margie off the horse. She landed on some rocks when she fell. The horses went home without her, and the family started looking for her and found her unconscious. Not long after that, Margie discovered she could not see out of one eye. The specialist in Omaha, Nebraska said it was probably caused from a blood clot on the retina as a result of the accident.

The last time they ran away for the Howletts, it was with Ninnie. She was going home from town alone when the strap holding the neck yoke broke, letting the tongue of the buggy down. The buggy turned over when the horses started to run, and Ninnie was thrown out and injured badly. One of the Jensen boys and his sister found her and took her home. She was in bed for a long time with an injured back. A lady chiropractor, Doctor Leanard from Winner. Went out and gave her adjustments, which put her back on her feet.

They sold the team not long after that, and that fall the same team won the wagon race at Frontier Days for their new owner. That was probably the only time anybody was ever glad they ran away.

The Howletts experienced a three-day blizzard one time during their homestead days. There was so much snow it covered the fences and made the whole country look different. The family could hardly tell where the barn was when it quit snowing. The barn had frame sides and a hay roof, which was native and slough grass, covering a framework of poles and tree branches. So much snow had blown into the barn that the saddle horse was standing on a snowdrift and had eaten a hole in the roof. Art climbed down through the hole and pitched hay to the horses and cow. He had carried water from the house to give each animal a drink, before help came to shovel the snow away from the doorway.

It was not uncommon to have two or three feet of water over the wells, when the snow melted and ran down the creek, as most wells were dug in the sloughs or draws in those days.

Some schools were already established when the Howletts started homesteading. There was one a mile north of them and one about three miles west. The northern one was later moved about two miles west.
Art attended all of these schools at different times. The teacher would often board with the Howletts and drive to school. Olga McKennett was one of the teachers who boarded at the Howletts. Another teacher. Bessie Gapen, also taught one of these schools.

Sunday School was also held at the schoolhouse to the north, and sometimes in the Shouldis home. Rev. Van Valkenburgh would come as often as possible to preach. He was a Congregational preacher and homesteaded west of White River. He made the rounds of county Sunday Schools as often as he could, driving a team of black ponies. He also preached regularly in a church in White River.

The Howletts' homestead house could be seen from the main trail, called the Texsam Trail. This trail was between the Badlands and the Big White River northwest. To Cottonwood Creek to the south. Many travelers stopped at the Howletts' to spend the night on their journey past. They were always welcome and would bring supplies out from town to them to repay the hospitality.

Kerosene was used in the lamps. As well as oil for cooking, and they never missed a chance to send the kerosene cans along to be filled. One time on such an occasion, Ninnie had emptied some kerosene into a pail so she could send the can to town, and had it sitting on a box by the kitchen door. Iles Huey, a neighbor. Came over, and thinking it was a pail of fresh water. Took a big swallow before anyone could stop him.

A big attraction in the early days was Frontier Days. Which featured a rodeo. There were bleacher seats. Judges stand, race track. Cattle and horse corrals. Bronco riding, bulldogging, calf roping, wild steer riding, wagon races, relay races and Indian dances were the main events. Sometimes they would have a mock stage holdup, or other traditional events. A mock sunrise attack on the town by the Indians would really thrill the visitors and got everybody in the mood for a celebration.

There was a sham battle one year in which the Indians supposedly captured a white man known as Colonel Doyle. For many years he had been a friend of the Indians, so he consented to be "captured and scalped" in front of the grandstand. It looked pretty real to the audience, as the "actors" used catsup for blood. The "brave" cowboys then drove the Indians away, and Margie and a friend, a Brodball girl, dressed as Red Cross nurses, came out and pretended to bandage Doyle. Then the cowboys took him away.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Witherow, who were the Howletts' closest neighbors, were old friends and had been on their homestead for a little over a year, and had urged the Howletts to come homestead. They had two children, Bessie and Edgar, and lived in a one room house with an attic. They managed to have a box with pigeonholes along a wall to put mail in. So this was the beginning of the Texsam Post Office. Later, the post office was moved to the Shouldis home when the Witherows went on an extended visit.

When the bachelor homesteaders-and there were a lot of them in those days-came to get their mail, they hoped for a home-cooked meal. They also liked the homemade bread and begged to buy some. Mrs. Nick, as she was called, would let them have some. The Witherows had no oven at home, so when the dough was in the pans, Mrs. Nick and Bessie would carry the loaves over a mile to the TL Ranch cook hack to bake it. On the way, they picked up scraps and pieces of the old corrals, and even cow chips, for fuel to use in the wood-burning cookstove with the oven.

TL was an old well-known cattle brand used by a cattle company, that at one time had fenced in hundreds of acres. It had been government or Indian land, but the cattle company could no longer lease it as a unit, because the government land was now open to homesteading. The cattle company sold their cattle and the oldtime cowboys dwindled down also. One of the cowboys went to the Howletts' place one night. He was driving some horses to market that he had rounded up on the range. He asked permission to stay overnight and rolled his bedroll out and slept under the stars, as he was accustomed to, even though he was asked to stay in the house.

Ninnie said it was scary at first for a woman who had been used to living in town, to live out on the prairie with not another house in sight. She got a big scare one day when she saw some Indians on horseback coming along the trail toward their shack. The Indians had large revolvers in their holsters and wide gun belts, with lots of cartridges in them. They went to the door and knocked. Ninnie debated about going to the door, but she remembered a revolver they kept above the door. The gun was kept handy for killing rattlesnakes. She took the gun down and that gave her enough courage to open the door a crack.

She was surprised that the Indian men could speak English, when they asked very politely for a drink of water. She told them the water was good and they would find a drinking cup at the well. They wanted to water their horses, and she told them they would find a tub beside the well. They went on their way, after thanking her kindly and getting their drinks. (A lot of water in the community was alkali and non-drinkable.)

Mrs. Witherow went later to check if the Indians had frightened Ninnie, as she knew Ninnie was not used to seeing Indians. She said they were Indian Police and that was why they had guns. Ninnie had many Indian friends later and lost her earlier fear of them.

The Howletts had a riding horse, Old Joe, and one cow named Cherry. Old Joe was famous for shying when he heard a rattlesnake, and he would sometimes "dump" his rider. Cherry would kick like a horse, backward, or like a cow, forward, so was a real character. When women milked her, she usually stood very still, but she would kick a man over every chance she got. Margie was milking her one day when Cherry decided to be skittish, and Margie was afraid of her. A neighbor, Iles Huey, came by just then and offered to milk. Before he could get started, Cherry kicked him over twice and Margie had to milk the cow after all.

Two major prairie fires were remembered by the Howletts in their early homestead days. The first one started southwest of them, across Cottonwood Creek, and burned east to the river.

The other started west of them, three or four miles, and at first burned west to the Badlands. Then the wind changed and the fire burned along the north side of the Cottonwood Creek, almost to the Big White River. Again the wind changed and the fire burned from the river back northwest, until it had burned a complete circle around their homestead. There was a farm sale north of the Big White River, and the men in the community who had attended the sale had to go around the long way home because they could not ford the river. To keep the fire away from the buildings, the women and children fought the fire by making backfires around the buildings and hay stacks. There was no grazing on the burned out area till late spring.

Rattlesnakes were plentiful and the Howletts had their share of stories to tell. Many times they had to take the bridles off the horses they were riding to use for killing the rattlesnakes. Mrs. Hemstreet found a rattler on her doorstep once, but it crawled underneath before she could kill it. Art pried up the step and killed it.

In 1917 the Howletts and Mrs. Hemstreet decided to "prove up" and move to White River. The Barclays did the same, but moved to Winner. A. C. was serving as clerk of courts at this time and held the office for four years. They sold the printing office in July of 1917 and bought their first car that month, a Ford Touring car.

Mrs. Hemstreet passed away in 1918, while they were living in White River.

Due to a shortage of teachers, A. C. was persuaded to hire a deputy clerk of courts and go out to teach the Bechtold School. It was their home school and he got $80 per month. He had taught his first school back in Missouri and got $25 a month. The family moved back to the homestead, and A. C. taught school and served as county commissioner for two terms.

Influenza was bad in the fall of 1918 and there were many deaths. Among them were three young people who had gone to school to A. C. They were Edgar Witherow, Leodine Pastain and Homer Shouldis. When Ira, Buena and their two children had the flu at the same time, Mr. and Mrs. Howlett went to Winner to take care of them, so they could not attend the wedding of their daughter, Margie, on October 26, 1918, to George Jerred, a young homesteader from Gregory.

George had purchased the Sam Texter homestead relinquishment. Sam was a live wire; the post office, community and the trail had been named for him. He had built a good house on the homestead, but his bride from back east decided homesteading was too rugged, so Sam gave up.

Margie and George lived on this homestead until the Depression and sickness in George's family forced them to sell out and move near Gregory in 1927. There they took care of his parents until they passed away. (There is a story on them elsewhere.)

The Howletts continued to live on the homestead, where A. C. continued to teach and farm. In 1927 they moved back to White River to live in the house they built for their son, Art, to batch in while going to high school. The house was added onto later, with the original building remaining as the living room. A. C. was hired as custodian of the school, a post which he held for 14 years.

In those days, school in White River was held in four different buildings, three of them on the school grounds and one three blocks away in the Odd Fellows Hall. Mr. Howlett became custodian in 1929. He walked back and forth to tend the janitorial needs in all kinds of weather, and his record was that never once did school have to be dismissed because rooms were not heated. The janitor chores were much easier when the new school was built.

Art worked for C. E. Kell after he finished high school-this was in the abstract office-and he also wrote insurance on his own. On June 6, 1933, he was united in marriage to Hazel Elley. Art and Hazel lived in White River for a while and then moved to Lincoln, Nebraska.

In 1940, A. C. retired and kept busy around their home in White River. The two were avid gardeners and craft people. Their home was attractively decorated with wooden ornaments they had made, and with woven rag rugs. A. C. would help with preparing the rags, clothes people threw away, by cutting and tearing them into strips, which were later sewn together. Ninnie was the "weaver," using a loom, a contraption that had a wood frame and two wooden "pedals." It had some metal parts, and was threaded with warp, and the sewn strips were passed between two separate layers of warp. The wooden pedals were pushed down, one at a time, to cross the warp; this was what held the rug together. After yards of rugs were woven and the warp used up, the rugs were taken off and separated into the individual rugs by cutting the warp that was left unwoven between them. Then the warp that was between them was tied to keep them from coming apart.

A. C. came out of retirement in 1944 when he was asked to teach the Lindquist school; this was at the age of 73. They lived in a one room teacherage at the school, a they did the next year when he taught a school near Mosher.

The Howletts celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter, Buena Barclay, in Lincoln on August 15, 1945.

Ninnie broke her hip on August 14, 1949, the day before her 74th birthday. She was flown from Winner to Lincoln. Nebraska, where her hip was successfully pinned. They stayed with Buena and Ira till November. On their way home, they stopped near Winner to spend the night with their granddaughter, Mrs. Lucy Barclay Miller. That night A. C. suffered a fatal heart attack. He was buried in the Winner cemetery.

Margie and her son Verl spent the rest of that winter with Mrs. Howlett. Verl attended school there so they stayed through the school term. After that time, she continued to live alone until the last few years of her life; then she spent time living among her children.

She kept busy with handwork of some kind all the time-her hands were never idle. She hoped to live to be a hundred, but missed it by a few years. She passed away in March 1965, just five months short of 90 years of age. At the time, she was spending the winter with her daughter, Margie, in Gering, Nebraska. She was laid to rest beside her husband in Winner cemetery.

The Howletts place was one of the showplaces in White River. As they raised lots of flowers and sold many of them for different occasions through the year, especially for Memorial Day. Mrs. Howlett also made artificial flowers from wood fiber and chenille; she even crocheted them. She also sold these flowers to people.

At 85, she revived an old-time craft, that of making flowers from human hair. This she did for other people, also would make a flower for herself if there was enough of their hair. She would make it into a large wreath with a small spray of flowers for the center. Ira built a frame for the wreath and this is to be passed along down through the generations in the family. Ninnie learned this art from her mother and had a frame of flowers that her mother made in 1860. The family decided this would be passed to the oldest daughter in each generation.

The Howletts' home. No matter where they lived, was always full of hospitality for people in the community. Many young people stayed at their home while they went to high school, as they lived too far from school.

Buena and Ira Barclay had three children. They moved to Lincoln, Nebraska in 1941. Ira worked at the carpenter trade. They celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary in March, 1984. They continue to live in Lincoln. (Story elsewhere.)

Margie and George Jerred had eight children. The Jerreds moved to Gregory in 1927 and lived around Gregory and Dallas till 1945, when they moved to Gering, Nebraska. George worked as a mechanic, and Margie in a canning factory, and managed and cooked in several cafes. George died from the result of burns in 1949. Margie passed away January 6, 1983. (Story elsewhere.)

Art and Hazel Howlett moved to Lincoln, Nebraska in the mid 1930's. Art sold insurance and became an insurance broker. They had four children: William Conley was born in Murdo, S. D. in 1935, but lived only six months; Darlene was born in Lincoln in xxxx, married Lee Smith, has a son and daughter and lives in Houston, Texas; Ray was born in xxxx in Lincoln, married Helen Hardman, has a daughter and son and lives in California; John was born in xxxx in Lincoln, married Laura Ott, has two daughters and lives in Ohio.

Art and Hazel celebrated their 50th anniversary June 6, 1983, and continue to live in Lincoln.

Two photos that accompanied the article were not copied by me; the caption of the 1st photo read "The Howlett's homestead shack was located 10 miles northwest of White River. Later three more shacks were joined to this one making a very comfortable home. Mrs. Howlett stands by the door. Repairing the roof are A. C. Howlett Family

By Mrs. A. C. Howlett

The opening of Mellette county to homesteaders caused many old soldiers to join with others in filing certificates of entry. My father, B. F. Hemstreet, was one who drew a number. Feeling he was too old to homestead he relinquished his number to my husband, A. C. Howlett.

May 15, 1913, A. C. arrived in White River and established residence on his claim 10 miles northwest of White River by building a 10 by 12 foot shack. Then he went to Winner where he had a job with the Tripp County Journal to earn money to improve the claim. Our three children, Buena, Margie and Arthur, Jr., and I joined him there in June of 1913.

A. C. bought the Mellette County News in 1913 and on Christmas day we joined him in White River. I will never forget that ride. In the 60 miles there was not a fence, no graded roads, just trails, and only one bridge. The rest of the streams we forded.

Chris Anders had come to Winner after us in an open-top Auburn auto. Imagine driving 60 miles in a convertible with the top down in 20 degree weather! This auto, however, was equipped with a cover made of oilcloth-like material that had five holes through which the passengers could put their heads and button a collar around their necks. If your head got too cold you could unbutton the collar and pull in your head, like a turtle. Needless to say, we all took advantage of this protection. All except Chris. He was an old timer at the business, used to the outdoors, and dressed warmly with a cowhide fur coat, cap and mittens.

A. C. had rented the Bev Witherspoon house for us. One cold morning, building a fire in the cookstove with kindling and coal, he used a small can of kerosene to get it started. There was just enough fire in the stove to form gas; it exploded and blew the stove pipes down and soot all over the house. We got the stove pipes reassembled, and a little later when A. C. started to the print shop he noticed smoke coming out around the cellar door. Smoke poured out when he opened it. Our guest at the time, Ira Barclay, and A. C. hurried to get the fire engine; we began to carry out clothing and furniture.

The fire engine was a two wheeled cart with a chemical tank, filled with some kind of foaming substance, and was pulled with man power. As the wheels went around a gong rang, and other men came running to help. Because of smoke coming out the cellar door the fire was finally put out by running the hose down through a hole they cut in the floor. It was discovered that the upstairs explosion had blown some old rags out of the cellar stovepipe opening and onto a couch and feather bed, causing the basement fire.

Our daughter, Buena and husband, Ira Barclay, filed on a relinquishment one mile west of ours in the Texsam community. After my father's death my mother also filed on a homestead, making four generations of our family living in the Texsam area.

In 1917 after proving up on our claims, Ira and Buena moved to Winner, the rest of us to White River. My mother passed away there in 1918.

A. C. was elected clerk of courts and we sold the Mellette County News and moved back to the homestead. My husband hired a deputy so that he could teach the Bechtold school, then continued to farm and teach until 1927 when we moved into White River to live in the house built for our son, Art, to batch in while going to high school. That house is now my living room, the rest of the rooms were added later. Mr. Howlett served as county commissioner from the second district during the years from 1925 to 1929.

School in White River in those days was held in four different buildings, three on the school ground and one three blocks away in the Odd Fellows Hall. Mr. Howlett became custodian in 1929 and cared for the many operating schools until 1940. Despite the disadvantage of having to walk back and forth to tend to the janitorial needs in all kinds of weather his record was that never once did school have to be dismissed because rooms were not heated. Later, when the new schoolhouse was built the janitor chores were much easier.

After four years of retirement A. C. taught again in 1944 in the Cottonwood School. The next year he taught near Mosher, and there at the age of 74 finished.

We celebrated our golden wedding anniversary at the home of our daughter, Buena Barclay, in Lincoln on August 15, 1945. We were returning from Lincoln in his teaching career. He had taught his first school at the age of 18 in Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, after attending teacher's academy there. His first salary was $25.

1949 when A. C. suffered a fatal heart attack at the home of our granddaughter, Mrs. Russell Miller near Winner. He is buried in the Winner cemetery. My daughter, Margie, who had lost her husband, George Jerred, in a gasoline explosion that spring, and her son Verl, spent the rest of the winter of 1949 with me. Since then I have lived alone except for visits among my children.

I love my home, my yard and my flowers, and have lived in this home for 34 years. I keep busy. . . weaving rugs and making artificial flowers. In August I will be 86 years young. My family now consists of Buena Barclay, Arthur Howlett, who is an insurance broker living in Lincoln, and Margie Jerred DeRock, Gering, Nebraska. I have 10 grandchildren, 20 great grandchildren and four great great grandchildren.

In reminiscing about early Mellette county days, Mrs. Howlett recalls that many humorous things happened to the city people who homesteaded, unschooled in the strange ways of rural pioneering.

One young man from Chicago went to a sale and purchased a team of horses, harnessed and hitched to a wagon. He drove them to his homestead without any trouble, but there discovered he knew nothing about unhitching them. Finally, he unbuckled all the places he could find and let the harness drop to the ground. The next time he wanted to drive the team it took an honest-to-goodness "dirt farmer" a good half day to re-buckle the harness.

One homesteader from the city labeled a wagon tongue the "wagon handle."

Biographical sketch of Buena Jeanette (Howlett) Barclay & Ira Henry Barclay, ID = 155211

(By Lenora Jerred Dodds who noted that she transcribed this from "Mellette County 1911-1986" published by the Mellette County Historical Society; found online at genealogytrails.com.)

Buena Howlett was born in Putnam County, Missouri, on September 24, 1896. Her parents were Arthur Conley Howlett and Mary Lucinda (Hemstreet) Howlett. Her ancestry is Scottish, English and Pennsylvania Dutch. She grew up on various farms in Missouri and also lived in Kirksville, Greentop and Atlanta, Missouri. Buena's father, A.C., as he was called, went to Dakota first and located the homestead in the Texsam community, in May of 1913, and secured a job in Winner on the Tripp County Journal. Buena, her mother (Ninne), sister Margie and brother Art followed him when school was out. The family took the train to Winner and arrived on June 28, 1913. They were met by Mr. Howlett and spent the night in a hotel.

Buena described their feelings as homesick when they got up the next morning. The wind was blowing the dust so bad they could hardly see across the street. Winner was a new town set out on the prairie with no fences and no roads, so when travelers sighted the town, they headed straight for it, thus surrounding the town with trails like the spokes in a wheel. Then when the wind blew, the dust from the trails blew with it. That was the last bad dust storm that season and they soon learned to love the country.

Setting type at the newspaper where her father worked was Buena's first job. Then her father bought the Mellette County News in White River and he went there to run that newspaper, again leaving the family behind till he could find a place for them to live. He did so and the family joined him on Christmas Day of 1913. Buena remembers the ride in the open top Auburn that is in the Howlett story.

That same Christmas, Buena's sweetheart from back home had come to join them at Winner and make the trip with them to White River. His name was Ira Barclay and he was looking for a homestead for himself as he would soon be 21 and eligible to file a claim. Ira had his birthday on February 18, 1914, and he and Buena were married in the Howlett home in White River on March 8. He was born in 1893 on a farm near Heyworth, Illinois, the son of George and Ella May (Washburn) Barclay.

Buena tells of being targets for an old-fashioned charivari. Lots of noise was made, guns fired, pans were banged, anything that made a lot of noise was used. The newlyweds were not prepared with treats but Ira gave the leader money to treat the crowd at the drugstore.

They bought a relinquishment some 10 or 12 miles northwest of White River in the Texsam community, close to Buena's parents. It had no living quarters and the Howletts were still living in White River, so Buena and Ira stayed in the Howletts' shack while Ira moved a house to add on the Howlett shack and moved a shack on his own relinquishment claim. A blizzard came up before the bigger house was moved and caught Ira and Buena in the little shack. The blizzard lasted two days and two nights. The shack was made of ship lap over 2x4 framing and the snow blew through the cracks. The newlyweds unrolled two 9x12 rugs that Mrs. Howlett had shipped up from Missouri. They nailed one around the north and west walls and the other they put over the bed.

Each morning they would carefully lift the rug and shake the four inches of snow off it. The "topsy" stove would not get hot enough to cook on as the high wind outside was making all the heat go up the chimney. So they put food in the stovepipe oven to heat or cook.

While Ira was doing the carpentry work on the claims, Buena was having some young-bride cooking experiences. She soaked some common old navy beans overnight and cooked them all day and they never got any bigger and not much softer. When she asked Mrs. Witherow what she had done wrong, she was told the water was so hard (alkali) that beans could not be cooked in it. Melted snow or rain water was the best for cooking beans.

Near the Barclays' new home was the Texsam post office located in Mr. and Mrs. Nick Witherow's house. This was the hub of the community that stretched out in a five-mile radius, and even farther.

Buena's parents' homestead was the first on the trail going northwest from White River after Cottonwood Creek. The road branched three ways there. The Barclays lived one mile west of her folks and their nearest neighbors west were Pete and Frank Bechtold, Frank Brown, Ernie McLane, Joe Petranek and the Blazek family. On the north of the Barclays were Ralph Kositzky, C. E. Kell, Charles Shouldis and the Pastian family.

Gus Kositzky, Nick Witherow, Iles Huey, Ed Kositzky and Henry Schwisow lived on the north and east branch of the road.

After those homes were passed, the trail branched three ways again at the schoolhouse and the T L dam.Then were the homes of Alan Jerred, Charles Bates, Gus Kriege, Buena's grandmother-Mrs. B. F. Hemstreet-and later Floyd Anderson.

Northwest on the left fork were A. V. Watson, the Shelly Findley family, Louie and Roy King and M. M. Mott.

The right fork of the trail led to the Texsam schoolhouse, then Doctor Rhule's homestead and store building where his father and mother lived and had a grocery store. Later the store was leased to two bachelors named Frank Bricknor and McDonald. A community hall was in the other half of the building and was used for box socials, pie suppers, literary societies, Sunday School and church.

The Texsam trail split again and to the right was the Sam Texter homestead, later occupied by Buena's sister Margie, and her husband George Jerred. On the creek were Bert Steel's and some others.

The left branch led past the Jim Briggs place, then toward the Otto Hanson place and his sister's homesteads, Oscar and Art Rybergs and the Lindquists.

Some families from way up by the Big White River who came down to Texsam Sunday School and socials were the Charles Astlefords, and the Giroux and Burnette families. Others were Paul Gapen and his sister Bessie, also Roy and Roxie Raffensperger, who lived south of Cottonwood Creek.

Ira and Buena were the first newlyweds in the community. The next were Alan and Fern (Anderson) Jerred, then Gus and Gladys (Jerred) Kriege, Alva and Nina (Shouldis) Ducan, then lies and Bessie (Gapen) Huey.

When the Barclays' daughter, Lucy, was born January 11, 1915, they had Mrs. Pastian as midwife and Mrs. Pete Bechtold as interpreter, as Mrs. Pastian was a German graduate nurse but could not speak English.

Buena's father and mother got lost going the mile from their place to the Barclays' when they went for the birth. Remember, this was still open country with no fences or roads, just trails. They teased Mr. Howlett about letting the pony, Old Joe, pick his way the next time and they would not lose their way. They hung a lantern on the north side of the house to guide him back when he went after Mrs. Pastian.

Buena told of the fun they had at Literary Society; once they put on a three-act comedy. They had numerous debates and told of the White River debate team coming out and having to stay all night at the hall once, because of a sudden thaw that filled the slough with water. Ira ferried everyone across the slough the next morning with a team and wagon, also the Texsamites who lived on the south side.

Ira and Buena once got their days mixed up and went to Literary a day late. The next time they went they were the victims of a "mock trial" with a judge, jury, lawyers for defense, prosecution witnesses and all. Buena was blamed for hitting Ira over the head with her rolling pin, making him forget, so he was not guilty. They produced her rolling pin with only one handle, so said she must have hit him with it and broken the handle off.

Vern Giroux's father played the violin and had sort of a family orchestra. He played for a dance after Vern Giroux and Grace Burnette were married and had come to the hall for Literary, and everyone was invited to stay for the wedding dance and delicious lunch.

Fern Jerred cut the pies at a Fourth of July picnic held at the hall and cut clear through Buena's new aluminum pie pan. Buena asked if Fern thought she made tough pie crusts.

Lucy gave them a couple of good scares when they thought she was taken by the Indians. The first time was when Lucy was about six months old. She was left napping on the bed while Buena worked in the garden. When Buena went back into the house, Lucy was not on the bed. They found her fast asleep behind the bed where she had rolled. They were better acquainted with the Indians the next time she was missing, when about 18 months old, but they were afraid of rattlesnakes and exposure. Each parent thought Lucy was with the other when they missed her. They started up the trails calling for Lucy and the collie dog who had gone with her. Finally they heard the dog bark and they found Lucy safe and sound, again fast asleep, on the trail to the Bechtold house.

The Barclays experienced the prairie fire in the spring of 1917 that burned all the way from the Badlands in the west to the Big White River in the east. They had good fire guards plowed around their buildings so did not lose them or the hay that was piled close.

Did you ever hear of borrowing a cat? The first cat in the neighborhood was loaned several times when the mice were overabundant. For several years kittens sold for a good price-not the fancy long-haired kinds, but common barn cats with a reputation of being good mousers.

The Barclays "proved up" in 1917 and went to Winner, by team and wagon, to live. Ira carried on in his carpenter trade. They had two sons, Vernon in 1918 and Wayne in 1928. Vernon gave his life for his country in World War II.

In October 1941, the Barclays moved to Lincoln, Nebraska. Ira still worked as a carpenter and helped build the Air Force base buildings and many houses, several buildings on the University campus, many commercial buildings and several large churches. They still live in Lincoln and celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary on March 8, 1984. (Their 71st has now passed, 1985.)

Art Howlett and Family

By Arthur C. Howlett, Jr.

I was born in Greentop, Missouri, October 22, 1907. My parents were Arthur C. Howlett and Mary L. Howlett. My mother's father, Ben Himstreet a Civil War veteran, was issued a homestead in Mellette County, South Dakota, but was too ill to go there. He relinquished his claim to my father. Dad went to Mellette County in 1913, decided to take the claim, filed on it and returned to Missouri. He sold his newspaper, the Atlanta Express, and all of us, the folks, Buena, Margie and Art, Jr., arrived in Winner by train in June, 1913.

Dad had a small shack built, only ten feet wide by twelve feet long, to live in for fourteen months until we could prove up-that is, get title from the government. He also bought the Mellette County News. We rented a house from Bev Witherspoon, and Chris Anders moved us from Winner to White River by car, where we arrived on Christmas Day.

I received a kite for Christmas and one morning was pestering Dad to help me fly it. He was on his way to the print shop and he turned to face me and saw smoke coming out of our basement window. Our house was on fire! A young fellow named Ira Barclay, who lived on a farm near Atlanta, Missouri, was sweet on my sister Buena. When he came to South Dakota, he was living with us. He and Dad ran to the firehouse and rang the fire bell and started back with the two-wheeled chemical fire fighting apparatus. They were soon joined by other men who put the fire out. There wasn't much damage except for the hole in the floor they made to get at the fire. A lot of excitement on a cold winter morning!

One Sunday morning in March, 1914, there was a lot of hustle and bustle in the house and I asked what was happening. I was told the preacher was coming to marry Buena. I started crying. Upon being asked what was the matter, I said I didn't want that preacher to marry Buena, I wanted Ira to marry Buena! They were married by the Rev. Van Valkenburg. (They celebrated their 71st wedding anniversary March 8, 1985.) There was a charivari the next night, with lots of noise, lanterns, and a lot of big fuss going on, and so the next night there was someone walking by with a lantern and I ran out the back door to see if there was going to be another charivari and fell down the cellar steps. I was knocked silly and hurt my back. I never left the cellar door open again after that.

We didn't live in the homestead shack much except what was necessary to prove up, but Buena and Ira decided to spend their honeymoon there, and while they were there, a big blizzard came up and in the morning they would have four or five inches of snow all over everything. Now remember, this was in March, probably about March 12, 1914. They had a small two-hole stove but could not cook on it because the wind sucked the heat right up the stovepipe. However, they had a nice stovepipe oven-that is, an oven in the stovepipe above the stove-and managed to cook things in that. They never forgot that experience!

1914 and 1915 saw a lot of homesteaders leave. Many just simply gave up. Dad bought a 14 by 24 house from one and the homestead shack was attached to that and used as a kitchen. The building had a large walk-in closet, or a very small bedroom, at one end, and that became my room. We then moved into the new house to stay. Later, we bought another shack and added that as the dining room. I also put my bed, a sanitary cot as they called it, that had drop sides and could be folded up and not take up much room in the daytime.

This house was placed where the kitchen was and the kitchen moved to the west. A stairway to the cellar was made by taking away a part of my old bedroom. Later, another bedroom was added on the north and then we had a nice four-room house. The building on the north was used as a bedroom. Incidentally, our claim, or farm, was about six miles northwest of White River as the crow flies and in the Texsam community. The Texsam post office was first in the Withrow house and then later moved to the Shouldis house.

So we now had a living room, a kitchen, a dining room and a bedroom. The bedroom contained two beds, the living room had one bed and the dining room had one bed. Each room had a stove and that took a lot of wood and that was my main job, keeping a supply of wood on hand. That was fun and we were never short of firewood.

The next year a back porch was added. The Toledo store and post office north of us up on the Big White River was run by some folks named Mallett, who also had a sawmill and made lumber out of cottonwood. Ira, with the help of neighbors, built our barn with cottonwood lumber from that sawmill. Only three sides were lumber, the other side was made of baled hay guarded by a double row of woven hog fence to keep the cattle from eating it. The roof was made with thatch, made from long, tough slough grass over tree branches. It was about a foot thick and would shed water and would hold up a man. Later, we added a hay shed to the side.

We built a hog house the same way, planted alfalfa around it, kept our hogs there. We later built a nice frame chicken house with places for them to roost and lay eggs. We had turkeys and guineas in addition to chickens. Our outdoor plumbing was back of the chicken house and built on skids so that when the pit was full, we would dig another and put the outhouse over it and use the dirt to cover the old pit. Oh, what a life in the wild, wild west!

We had a small granary, corn on one side, small grain on the other, with room in the middle for our car. That was it for our farm buildings, and it took a few years to acquire them all.

I should tell you about the snakes, mostly rattlers. There were bull snakes that looked like rattlers except they had no rattles and they were non-poisonous. But they could scare you. We had blue racers, a few garter snakes. The rattlers were the big problem. They were poisonous but I never heard of anyone dying from their bite. But a fellow by the name of Charley Kerlin was bitten and he was pretty sick. He had a nurse to help him whom he later married.

The Frank Browns had a homestead two miles southwest. Mother was invited over to pick ground cherries and for dinner. We had dinner and afterwards Mr. Brown picked up a 22 rifle and a box of shells and said, "Let's go chase the rattlers out of the ground cherry patch." I don't remember how many rattlers he killed but he shot up the entire box of shells. We still have ground cherries growing in our garden from the seed from the Browns. That winter he found a rattlesnake den about a hundred yards from his house, on the bank of the river, and killed them all. So he wasn't bothered about snakes too much after that.

My mother's mother, Grandma Himstreet, from Chariton, Missouri - no longer on the map, not even a building left - came to live with us after Grandpa died. She also took a homestead about two miles north of us. Rattlesnakes usually let you know where they are, thank goodness, but one day Ira and I were sitting on the back steps when Grandma went to the outhouse. When she came back, we noticed a rattlesnake coiled up in the path. It was too late to warn her so she stepped right over it without seeing it. No one was hurt except the rattler, which we killed. She must have stepped over it on the way to the outhouse but the snake must have been asleep in the sun because it didn't sound a warning.

Another time we went to Grandma's shack to stay a few days. I opened the screen door and a rattler fell out at my feet. A few years later, a neighbor boy, Bill Day, and I were riding across the prairie. Bill was about fifty feet ahead of me when he leaned over and picked up a snake and threw it at me. It landed around my neck. It was a bull snake but it could have been a rattler, because riding a horse at a fast gallop, he could not have seen that it was not. I was so scared, I didn't even get mad!

Pete Peterson had a claim not far from White River. One day he rode into town to get some supplies. It was after dark when he got home. He put his horse in the barn and went to the shack. When he opened the door, he heard a rattler rattle. He closed the door real quick and listened, trying to locate the snake, but there was no sound except the sound of the wind. So again he opened the door, and again the rattle. The rattler was in the house! He spent the night in the barn with his horse.

In the morning, he went back to the house and opened the door cautiously. Again the rattle, but this time he located it. It came from the window across the room. There hung a rattlesnake's skin with the rattle still on it. He had forgotten he had killed the snake a few days before, skinned it with the rattle attached, hung it in the window to dry so he could make a belt out of it. The window was open, so when he opened the door, it then caused the rattle to sound. A few days later, he was back in town and told the story on himself, and someone called him "Rattlesnake Pete" and the name stuck. He was then known as Rattlesnake Pete forever.

We did not stay at the homestead the winter of 1913-1914, so I went to first grade in the lodge building directly across the street from the Jones Hotel. That spring we moved to the homestead, as we now had a good three-room house. The bedroom was added the next year. The winter of 1914-1915, I went to school in the little red schoolhouse two miles north, and the building was red. Roy Raffensperger was the teacher.

I rode my horse to school. The next spring when the snow melted, little draws had water in them. I rode to school that day bareback, as Dad had our one and only saddle. Going home after school, I was loping along on my horse at a pretty good clip and came to one of those little streams. I expected the horse to just run through it, but he didn't; he just left me sitting in the middle of the stream.

I also attended that school the next term, 1915-1916, when Bessie Gapen Huey taught. That year they built a new schoolhouse just south of the Pete Bechtolds' place and two miles west of our farm. We had many teachers and sometimes none at all, and sometimes we might just as well have had none because some were no good. One year we had a young fellow for a teacher and when he came back from Christmas vacation, he brought his new bride back with him. From then on he paid more attention to her than he did to us kids. He brought her to school every day. We sure had some long recesses and noon hours! I don't remember where he stayed, but most teachers stayed at our place.

One time one young girl teacher brought her girl friend to stay with her for a while. One night after they had gone to bed. I sneaked up to the window and made a howling noise with a saw-you know, bent it in an s-shape and hit it with my thumb-I never heard such a commotion in my life! They screamed and fell over the bed in the room getting to the living room where there was a light and where my folks were reading. I never did tell anyone that I made that awful noise!

I believe my dad was the first teacher in that school, and, of course, he was a good teacher. And I remember also that a neighbor, a fellow by the name of Floyd Anderson, who was just back from the war in 1918, taught for a while. That spring when the snow melted, there was a lot of water going down the creek and big chunks of ice. And us kids were straining our necks out the window to see what the ice was doing over there, and finally he just dismissed school for about an hour so we could go out and look at all the ice going down.

So with this teacher problem, I got behind two years. But one year we had a good teacher-I wish I could remember her name-she had a girl about my age but in the 8th grade. Anyhow. That teacher got me through the 5th and 6th grades that year. The next year we had another good teacher who got me through the 7th and 8th grades. Her name was Olga McKennett. She was not only a good teacher, to get me through the two grades in one year, but my grades were second high in the county.

Who beat me? A girl! Thelma Strain, who later married a preacher named Stevenson, the same one who married Hazel Elley and me and Paul Mountain and Caroline Wells. At the graduation exercise in White River, Thelma recited the poem, "I Would Like to Live in a House by the Side of the Road and Be a Friend to Man." They had me recite a poem called "I Would Not Live in a House by the Side of the Road but Would Enter the Stream of Life and Be a Friend to Man."

Miss McKennett had a brother who had a crystal set radio he made himself, and I rode seven miles on a horse to listen to it and heard the Saturday Night Barn Dance from Shreveport, Louisiana on earphones.

There were several prairie fires each year, some severe. Sometimes a high wind would carry them across the road and small creeks. One time I was attending school at the little red schoolhouse. During recess, we noticed smoke coming from over the hill. All of us walked to the top of the hill and saw a huge prairie fire to the southwest, still several miles away. The teacher dismissed us right away and sent us home. By the time I got home, the fire had burned across the south half of our land. Mother had the livestock in the corral and had started a backfire around the building. We beat that out with wet gunny sacks as it was no longer needed. Some men came for water to wet down their sacks and beat out the side fire to the east of us toward Cottonwood Creek. The fired burned all the way to the Little White and Big White rivers.

We were friendly with the Jim Briggs family, who lived a couple of miles northeast of us. They had three children-Daisy, who later taught in the little red schoolhouse, Delton and Desmer. One was a year older and one was a year younger than I. Occasionally I would stay all night with them and they would come over and stay with me. I remember how hot it was sleeping in the middle, when all three of us boys slept in the same bed.

One day I rode over to their place to play, and as I topped the hill where I could see the buildings, I saw none, only a little smoke coming up from the ground. The family was standing around a team and wagon, the only belongings they had left except a few cows and chickens in the pasture. The house and barn were gone, so was their tractor, which had been too close to the house. A team of horses was in the barn and the hogs in the shed attached were burned. They stayed at our place for a while and Dad headed a committee of neighbors to collect money and clothing for them. When these things were presented to this family, all of them cried. That was the first tragedy I witnessed, and the first time I had seen a grown man cry.

Our first year on the claim saw Mother making friends with the neighbors. They would call on each other and usually stay for a meal. One day Mother visited Mrs. Withrow a half mile north of us over the hill. The Withrow and Kositzky shacks were only about a hundred yards apart. Mr. Withrow later purchased the Kositzky place, so the Withrow place joined ours on the north. While Mrs. Withrow was getting lunch, I went out in the yard to play.

The Withrows had gone to the river and had dug up some little cottonwood trees, which they had planted around their shack. Well, I proceeded to pull up every one of them! Why, I don't know-just an ornery, spoiled brat, I guess, but I may have thought they were weeds, as I had seen Mother pull weeds from around our shack. No great harm done, however, as Mother helped replant them that afternoon.

We also became friendly with the other neighbors to the north, the Kositzkys and the Schisows, but as they had no children, I didn't pay much attention to them. The other neighbors to the northwest, the Shouldis and Pastain families, to the west the Frank and Pete Bechtolds, had children so I remember them the best. The Pete Bechtolds had an adobe house. I remember how warm it was in the winter and how cool in the summer. She had moss rose flowers on the dirt roof, and when in bloom they could be seen for miles. We still have moss rose in our garden originating from that roof.

I have described our farm buildings, but not our efforts to live there and produce food. We always had plenty to eat, but in the beginning the same thing over and over got kind of monotonous. However, in a few years we had plenty of variety, most of it produced right there on the farm. One of the first things we did was set out an orchard. Mother had brought some small cherry trees, plum trees and red raspberries and rhubarb from Missouri. Then just below that a large garden, very rocky and hard to till. My folks gave me a penny for every wagonload of rocks I would haul from the garden. My little wagon would hold about 100 pounds of rock and I made a game out of it, and in two years had nearly all of the larger rocks out.

We raised a variety of vegetables: tomatoes, lettuce, carrots, radishes, turnips, beets, potatoes, onions, cabbage, peas and beans. Later we dug a well farther down the draw and irrigated a level spot covering about an acre, so we were assured a good garden every year. We added sweet potatoes, peanuts and celery to our menu.

Of course, pests were a threat to everything. Rabbits liked our tender young shoots, and that problem was solved by building a closely woven wire fence around the garden. Birds liked the cherries and we solved that problem by putting minnow nets over the trees so the birds couldn't get at them. Potato bugs and grasshoppers were the big problem. When the hoppers got bad, we would turn the turkeys, chickens and guineas into the garden, but they would not eat the potato bugs, so we had to mash them between a couple of wide boards, which became a daily task.

Mother canned a lot of vegetables but onions, potatoes, turnips and cabbage were buried in the garden to preserve them. We dug a pit, lined it with hay and straw, put the vegetables in and covered them with hay and straw to a depth of about two feet, and then covered it with dirt. They would keep this way until spring. We would take the surplus to town and sell them. One year, I remember, we sold $700 worth of onions to the stores. We raised cattle, hogs, chickens, turkeys for meat and always had plenty of milk and eggs.

In the fall, the neighbors would get together and butcher-hogs first, because their meat could be preserved with salt and sugar and smoke. I think I liked butchering the hog best because so many good things to eat were associated with fresh pork. The first thing we did was strip the tenderloin out of the back, and I would take it in to Mother and she would fix biscuits and gravy, fried tenderloin and mashed potatoes for dinner. Yum, yum! At that time, dinner was the noon meal and the evening meal was called supper. Next came the lard, and the doughnuts and pies and sugar cookies, which were promptly dunked in coffee.

One year we had a serious accident. Ira had brought a muzzle-loading rifle from Missouri, and decided we would use that to kill the hogs. But we had no powder for it, so we emptied some shotgun shells and used that powder. Nick Withrow fired the first shot and the gun blew up! The big hammer out on the side of the gun, and the powder primer, flew back past his right ear without hitting him, but he had some severe powder burns on his face and right hand. He could have been killed.

Mother made some real good sausage and canned most of it to use during the following year. I liked sausage and gravy and also took sausage sandwiches to school. We butchered steers early in the winter because we had no way to preserve the meat other than to freeze it and can it. The Indians dried their meat to preserve it, but we didn't think much of the flies that always were there while the meat was drying-unless it was below freezing-and it was too slow. So we always had a side of beef hanging in the granary until it was used or it spoiled during the spring thaw.

For sweets we had pies and cookies, jellies and jams. Our wild fruits were choke cherries, plums and buffalo berries, (a kind of currant). Oh mercy! We never had much money, but we always had plenty to eat.

The cellar was used to store Mom's canning and several days, supply of carrots, cabbage, onions, potatoes and turnips from those buried in the garden. And also a barrel of apples in the wintertime. We also put milk in gallon crocks in the cellar and the cream would rise to the top. We used what we wanted and sold the rest. Did you ever taste pure cream? That is a delicacy few people have enjoyed. We later enclosed the back porch and bought a cream separator. We also bought a hand powered washing machine and I was the power. Before that, Mom used the washboard.

My sister Margie married George Jerred from Gregory, South Dakota, and they moved onto the Sam Texter place a mile northeast as the crow flies. Texsam was named after Mr. Texter by using parts of both names. George made a frame to set the washer in and connected a small one-cylinder engine to the washer, and Mom had the first motorized washer in the county.

Before Margie was married, she went with a man named Frank Breckner. Frank had a car. I was crazy about that car, a 1915 Ford. I was all over it and under it, and Frank was impressed and let me sit on his lap and steer and told me all about it.

That Christmas I got a little red wagon, and I had never thought of using my old wagon as a car, but this one I imagined to be the finest car in the country. With my knee inside the box, I pushed that car all over the country, and with my lips, made the sound of the motor. Many were the fine places I visited. I took two tin cans and tied them to the front of the box, and with candles made from paraffin I even had headlights.

One day a wheel came off, and I dragged the wagon a half mile over the hill to have Mr. Kositzky fix it. I was on my way home and, as usual, taking a trip, when over the hill came a brand new Ford. I thought to myself-I sure wish that was Dad and the car was ours. The car came even with me and stopped. Sure enough, it was Dad! And the car was ours! They couldn't get me out of the car and I spent the night in it. It was a very serviceable car and we used it as one might use a Jeep today.

Usually we kept things cool in the well and in the cellar, but the 4th of July was the only time we used ice. We would take the buggy and drive to the icehouse in town and buy two l00-pound blocks of ice, pack them well in sawdust and drive home. The ice was used to make ice cream, lemonade, iced tea and just to chew on.

I should tell you a little more about the 4th of July. The celebrations were held in various places in the Badlands and everyone would come from miles around. They would have horse races, foot races, sack races, ballgames, tug of war and whatever they could think of to have fun. My brother-in-law, Ira, would entertain by walking on a slack wire and performing on a trapeze. One time it rained and snowed at the same time, and everyone had to take shelter in the wagons and in tents. Snow on the 4th of July? Snow on the 4th of July!

I have mentioned wells, so I should tell how we got them. They were dug by hand, pick and shovel. Our first well was dug by a Black man. He was such a nice man. He always brought a huge watermelon, which he would share with me. Occasionally he brought one for the folks. He had to dig through hard shale and most of the shale had seashells in it, some large and many small. They may have averaged six inches across. We could not keep them because, as soon as they were dry, they fell apart.

The water was very hard and we could not cook with it or wash with it, and it wasn't very good to drink. We hauled water from the Shouldis well in cream cans. When we added the third room to our house, and the kitchen was permanently in place, we put in a large cistern. We added gutters to the house and let the rainwater run into the cistern through a filter made of sand, gravel and charcoal. We kept it full of water with water from the Shouldis well. Then we also installed a cistern pump in the kitchen. Water inside the house? Now we had everything!

No one could afford a threshing machine, but some of the neighbors had gone together and bought a binder, which everyone in the neighborhood could borrow. A man with a thresher with a large steam tractor came through every summer and did the threshing, and everyone helped. We never sold any grain but raised barley, oats, corn for the livestock and millet for the poultry.

One summer after threshing was over, the tractor and thresher were parked in the Shouldis yard. The machine had a belt that took the straw up a wooden chute and stacked it. The belt was not on the chute and the slick surface of the chute looked very inviting to two little boys. I went down first, never realizing that the belt had been going up and I was going down and all the splinters were pointed up. We went to the barn and he started picking splinters out of my rear end. Before he finished, his sister barged in and caught me with my pants down. I have never been so mortified and it was a long time before I had enough nerve to go back to the Shouldis place.

Bee: a gathering of people for a specific purpose, according to Webster. In those days, we entertained ourselves by doing everything we could. They had what was called a quilting bee at our place three times a year. We had a quilting frame, and all the ladies in the neighborhood would gather. It was my job to set the frame up on the chairs so the ladies could get at it. They made quilts, bedspreads and that sort of thing. I also helped to quilt, running the needle up and down with the thread attached, to do all the binding of the different layers in the quilt.

We also had a shucking bee. We raised what we call Indian corn, or squaw corn. Some of this corn was very, very colorful, and occasionally there would be a red ear-that is, the grains of the corn would be red. About an average of one out of fifty would be red. We raised quite a bit of squaw corn and would go out and pull the ears off the stalks with the shucks on, throw them in the wagon and bring the wagon up to the house and dump all that corn out in the yard. Then we would invite all the neighbors and have a shucking bee, and the one who found a red ear of corn could kiss the one of their choice. So naturally, all the young people came. Even the bashful ones got into the act. That was a lot of fun.

Ira gave Buena a Kodak box camera for a wedding present, so naturally they took a lot of pictures with it. They developed their own black and white film in the kitchen at night, and they would put the pictures on a frame of chairs and things to dry, and I always liked to get in there and see the pictures. One time I was in there and I pulled a chair away from the table so I could see the pictures better, and it being sort of dark in there, Buena came back to where she was sitting and the chair wasn't there. I thought she was going to kill me till she got over it.

My dad's brother, Uncle Frank, had quit the insurance business and had purchased a dairy, and somehow or other the partner he had had pretty well robbed him blind so he almost had a nervous breakdown. He wanted to get away from it all, so he came out and stayed two or three months at our place. His job was to split the wood. One item I wondered about was that he shaved every day, whereas everybody else shaved Saturday morning when they went to town.

We supplemented our meat diet by fishing, and by shooting rabbits and prairie chickens. The most fun was to go fishing because we would get several neighbors together and put a bunch of tubs in the wagon and lots of hay and drive down to the Little White or the Big White River. We would take throw lines we called them, that is, a rock on one end, a stake on the other with several hooks strung along the line, and we would put the stake on the bank and throw the rock. The baited hooks would then follow and we would run those lines during the night. We also used a seine, which was permissible in those days, and caught a lot of fish that way. So, we would go to the river and fish all night and bring home three or four tubs of fish in water and stop along the way, passing the fish out to the neighbors. That was fun.

Dad sold his print shop and then was elected clerk of courts, where he served two terms. In 1917 we moved to town and lived in a house on the north end of the block from the Witherspoon house. It was here that Grandma Himstreet died. Mrs. Frank Day bought the house and she was the owner when it burned to the ground a few years later.

Back to the farm in 1918. Dad didn't do much of the farming, spending most of his time teaching in the country schools and serving as clerk of courts and county commissioner. It was while he was county commissioner that we got a graded road out past our place. That was the way it was done-if you wanted a road, get yourself elected county commissioner. However, the road was no improvement as it was just dirt. And when it rained it was mud, and cars would slide off into the ditch and were really stuck.

Margie married George Jerred in October 1918, and I got a job in 1919 working for George putting up hay and dragging our new road, as George had a maintenance contract for our stretch of the road. The drag was a homemade affair made of two 4x 12 planks set on edge and at an angle and pulled by a team of horses. One time out and one time back and that was it. This was supposed to fill up the ruts in the road, but if the ruts were deep. And they usually were. We had to use the road grader.

I mentioned that while living on the farm. We raised turkeys. I might tell of an incident while we were killing turkeys to get ready for market. We picked them out in the hen house, or in front of the hen house actually, and it was my job to take the picked turkeys up to the house where the women would dress them. So I laid one down on the table and Margie reached over to get hold of it and it stood up right there on the table. She liked to have fainted. I never saw anyone turn so pale. It was then that I think she learned how to yodel.

Our farm seemed to be sort of a halfway place because everyone up north always would stop at our place on their way to town and on the way back. So they would go to town on a Friday and stop at our place Friday night, and then they would come back and stay Saturday night and leave Sunday. Well, this was continued throughout the season.

During the winter, we had quite a bit of trouble with bedbugs. It seemed the bedbugs liked those great, huge horsehide coats-overcoats-that the farmers wore out there. When they stopped in the wintertime, of course, they would have these big coats on and we had bedbugs, and were continually and everlastingly fighting those things. The only thing we had to use was kerosene and that didn't help too much. But we finally got rid of them eventually.

The 4th of July and Frontier Days, held in White River once a year, was a big event throughout the years. While we were on the farm, we would all get together in the hayrack, put some hay in there and drive to town and put up tents. Two or three days of Frontier Days, we would stay in those tents. In the evening, the men would all get into the hayrack and drive back out to the farms and do the chores and then come back.

One year, before we had gone to Frontjer Days, some folks came through with a couple of little kids, and they asked if they could take a bath. Well, we cleared the kitchen and brought out the tub and they all took baths. But the next morning the kids were sleeping in the dining room on my cot and their toes were sticking out under the covers, and we noticed they had cleaned their feet pretty good, but in between their toes were still dirty.

I also worked for George putting up hay during the summer of 1920. They had a girl and a boy, Orpha Hitchings and Rupert Hitchings, working for them. So after the crop was taken care of and everything, they decided they were going to go to the Black Hills for vacation. George came over and brought his car and we took our car and upset them in our yard and overhauled them and got ready to go to the Black Hills. Well, we took Orpha Hitchings and Rupert Hitchings along with us.

When we got there, and oh by the way, George's radiator was leaking but thank goodness, it had rained and we could stop along the way and get water out of the ditches to fill his radiator, so we managed it that way until we got to Hot Springs, where he had it fixed.

But as we approached Hot Springs, we found a little farm that was selling honey and eggs, so we bought some honey and eggs, and this was in the comb, so the next morning at the top of Evans Heights where we had camped. We had a breakfast of eggs, bacon, fried potatoes, toast and honey-the best breakfast I ever had. Yum. Yum!

Well. It finally came time for me to go to high school. Can you imagine a country boy like me going to a town school, like a high school? I was very, very shy in the beginning. Anyway, I stayed at Jack Hocking's place for two months, along with Thelma Strain and one of the teachers. It was a big house with lots of room. Anyway, there was a scare about typhoid fever going around and so everyone had to get a shot or inoculation of some kind. That thing made me so sick. In fact, I was unable to go to school so I went back home.

Then the next spring I talked Dad into renting some more land, buying a tractor and everything with it, and we went into farming in earnest. Well, anyway, the hoppers came, a late spring, a late wet spring, and an early freeze in the fall, so we didn't have much of a crop and sort of failed that year. So the next year, we had to have a sale and go to town. But anyway, I did not want to go back to high school, and so the principal of the high school came out to see me, a Mr. Boschma. So did Chris Anders and Jack Hocking. The folks built a house about 12 x 20, I think. That was quite large compared to that old 10 x 12 homestead shack. And just think, it was just for me. Of course, they had additions in mind because they were coming in later to live there themselves.

High school in those days was really something to me, but it really wasn't much. We had only two rooms above the grade school in a four-room schoolhouse. They were large rooms, but the high school was contained in the two upper rooms. They moved in another schoolhouse from the country and we got to use that. We played basketball in a store downtown-an old store, I think they called it the Legion Hall-at that time, and it was about 25 feet wide and a hundred feet long, and we would play in that thing. It had rafters in it and a very low roof, so we learned how to shoot above the rafters and make a basket. When the visiting team came, they couldn't do that without hitting the rafters, so we always beat the team that visited us while we were in that place.

Then they built a new gym and that was a full, regulation size with bleachers on one side, and there we played. I played the regular team for three years, and the last year we almost made it to the state tournament but got beat by somebody, so the town got together and raised the money and sent us up to Spearfish to the state tournament anyway. That was great.

Oh, I almost forgot. I want to tell you about the first time I saw Hazel Elley, whom I later married. They had a hog judging contest sponsored by the county agent and, of course, all of the kids from all over the county came to judge the hogs, me included. Well, I was a farm boy and Hazel was actually a city girl, but she won the contest and won a little sow pig, which she developed into quite a herd. But imagine again I was beat by a woman.

Also, while in high school, Hazel and I were going together, and we had one of these rooms upstairs called an assembly room where everybody studied. Well, studying sometimes was a problem because all these kids up there were making noise and fooling around. One day Rodney Manson got to pestering me so I threw an ink bottle at him and missed him and the ink went all over Hazel, who was wearing a new dress that day. I think it was about a month before she'd even speak to me again.

While in high school, they had a lot of other activities other than basketball, and I was on the debating team and also recited different kinds of things. I got into one of these things that you recite that is quite sad, and I won the award at school and went on to the district. Kids could come in there and compete against each other with these little poems or stories that we recited. Well, this thing was kind of sad and I was up there giving my recitation, and I looked down in the front row and there was an old farmer with a great big red handkerchief and he was crying. Tears were running down his cheeks. It tickled me and I could hardly talk after that, so I lost the whole thing. I didn't win the district meet.

We also put on class plays and there were several of them. I remember one time we put on one called "Aaron Slick from Pumpkin Creek," and it so impressed one old Indian that every time he would see me, he would say, "Aaron Slick from Pumpkin Creek, " and laugh his head off. I was in three senior plays and one after I graduated from high school put on by the Catholic Church there.

They built a dam on the river and put in a hydroelectric plant. While the thing was still under construction, one of the spillways was open and Rodney Manson's dog fell in the thing and went through. Rodney Manson jumped in after him and both of them went through that thing, which was lined with exposed rebars, steel bars that stick out to reinforce the concrete. They went through without a scratch, although both of them almost died.

This dam provided a real good place to swim, and there was a lot of brush below the dam that we could dress in there, put our swimming suits on and run up to the dam. We had installed a springboard and, of course, the last one in was a monkey's uncle and everyone tried to be first. Well, I remember Ben Johnson was the first out one time and as he left the springboard, he let out the most awful yell you ever heard, and when we got to the top and looked down, here he was stuck in the mud up to his waist-head first. So we had to get out there and dig him out real quick. It didn't hurt him any, but he sure was scared.

The dam also made an excellent place to learn how to drive on the ice in the wintertime. We'd take our cars down after the ice got thick enough, and we'd drive around on it and make them skid. We had a lot of fun that way. Then one year, when the ice went out, it sort of blocked up everything and the dam was going out on the other side. In order to get to there, there was a place under the spillway that you could walk through underneath the water, and it was half full of ice water. Well, Giles Wells, Rodney Manson and I waded across like a bunch of dummies and got to the other side to watch the water run out, and then walked back through that water again and back to town before we changed our clothes, and we like to froze to death.

After graduation, I started to work for C. E. Kell, who was an attorney, and also a county judge at that time. There were two other attorneys. One was Rodney Manson's father and the other was Ralph Hutchinson. Well, there were two regular jobs they had. One was a county judge, the other was the state's attorney there in the county. They would pass those jobs around. While one was county judge, the other would be the state's attorney, and the other would have private practice, so they had a good thing going.

Well, Mr. Kell, attorney and county judge, had an abstract plant whereby you could look up the titles to the various lands around the county and copy down the titles, the mortgages, and so forth. They all appeared in the abstract so you could see who owned it and whether or not the title was clear, and all that stuff. You have to have this stuff before you sold it or mortgaged your land. In addition to that, he had a loan company and made loans to the farmers roundabout on their livestock and personal property.

Well, it turned out that my primary job was as chauffeur for the loan inspector who came up from Omaha. This was federal money being loaned out, and that was the Mellette County Production Credit Association. The loan inspector's name was Mr. Burnham, and we would go out every summer and go all over the western part of South Dakota counting cattle and sheep and checking up on the loans.

One time while out on an inspection, about two o'clock in the afternoon we were rather hungry and so we stopped in at this place when they were just getting dinner. She was making biscuits. We went inside the house, chatting with the farmer, and they were living in, I believe, an adobe shack, or maybe it was sod. Anyhow, it was quite a primitive place, and here she was kneading dough for the biscuits, and the pigs and chickens were on the floor around there, a dirt floor. So they invited us to stay for dinner. Mr. Burnham was watching her and he noticed there was a drop on the end of her nose, and so he said to the farmer, "It kind of depends on where the drop falls." Pretty soon the drop fell, the wrong way, and Mr. Burnham gathered up his papers, and said, "Well, guess we'd better be going." So we went.

Also a part of my job was to check the county records as to the mortgages and so forth for the abstracts, and I had to type the mortgages and titles-the whole thing. So I would sit there with my typewriter, typing away, the mortgages and things, and just about fall asleep. It was a very, very boring job. One day the monotony was broken because Mr. Witherspoon, who was the county treasurer, started downtown to the bank to put the money in the bank, and some wise guy grabbed a gun and hollered, just as he went out the door, "This is a stickup." Mr. Witherspoon didn't pay any attention and just kept right on going down the pathway to the bank. The guy fired in the air and Mr. Witherspoon kicked up his heels and kept going. Thank the Lord for people with humor.

Giles Wells' father, Hugh Wells, worked for Gerig in the print shop for quite a while and finally decided to set up a print shop of his own, which he did. So, he put out this little weekly, and this one fall, in October, let's see, it was Halloween night, it snowed and snowed and Giles and I helped his dad finish getting the paper out, ready to mail the next morning. Well. We worked till way after midnight and closed up and started home.

Well, it being Halloween I wanted to do something, but Giles was tired and wanted to go to bed, so when I left him and started on home and they went into their house and went to bed, I went a little ways and I thought, gee whiz, why should I waste the whole Halloween? So I went back downtown to see what I could do.

Well, there were a lot of benches sitting around in front of stores and things, so I just drug those benches out to the middle of the intersection and left them sit out there, then wondered what else I could do. So I went around behind the buildings and found a big pile of wooden boxes. They were sort of stacked up like a stairway, so I went up to the top of the roof and saw a large chimney up there and, of course, everybody burned coal, and I went back, got a box and put it over the top of the chimney, went back down and went home and went to bed. I never heard another word about anything.

Everybody kept quiet, they never said a word about what happened that night, and this was the first time I ever told that story to anyone that might get it back to White River. I believe all of the merchants and everybody concerned is now dead, so I don't think they would shoot me.

Well, I graduated in 1928 from high school. 1929 was the crash on Wall Street and the panic and everything. Then came the dirty thirties. The drought, the grasshoppers, everything was working against the farmers and the ranchers. They finally gave up and started calling Mr. Kell and told him to come out and get the herd and close out the mortgages.

Mr. Kell also had a ranch out there. At one time, he had 35,000 head of cattle out there. The only thing we could do was drive them to market, which we did. We drove them to Winner and also to Murdo. We'd make $8 a head for cattle, so the loan company went broke and the land bank-that is, not the land bank but the federal loan institution, whatever its name was - had to close it out. So the loan company went bust, Mr. Kell could no longer afford to have anyone work for him and he let me go.

Well, there wasn't much to do around there, but I finally got a job with the Federal Land Bank. They gave me a great big long title. They called me the local correspondent for the land bank commissioner. Well, my job was to help the farmers round about obtain loans on their land from the Federal Land Bank. Part of the rule to obtain a loan was to be sure that that loan paid off all of the farmer's debts. The farmer must also provide an abstract to the bank and it was my job to close these loans. And I also helped the farmers get adjustments on their debts and to get the abstract and do all the paperwork for them because most of those guys didn't even have a grade school education, let alone a high school education.

So that kept me busy for a couple of years. But you know, when Hazel and I got married, I didn't have a job. Hazel was teaching school so we lived on her salary until I started receiving money from closing these loans. I had been going with Hazel for several years and Paul Mountain had been going with Caroline for several years also. So when the depression hit like that and we had no prospects whatsoever, we thought, what the heck, we're going to go ahead and get married anyway. Something will happen. So we all decided to get married at the same time.

We had a preacher friend, a fellow by the name of Steve-that was his nickname-Stevenson, and had married this girl I mentioned before Thelma Strain. So he'd moved down to Parmelee, South Dakota, had a church down there. Parmelee was in Todd County, which was an unorganized county, and that county was attached to Tripp County for judicial purposes. In those days you had to have a marriage license in the county in which you were married. So we had to go to Winner to get our marriage licenses. So we went to Winner, got our marriage licenses, went back to Todd County and Parmelee, and got there just before dinner.

Thelma fed us a very fine dinner and we were married and then we were on our honeymoon to Black Hills, South Dakota. Our first stop was the Evans Hotel in Hot Springs, South Dakota, where we stayed all night, then went up to the Game Lodge and got a big cabin up there. We spent the remainder of our seven-day honeymoon there and then we returned to White River to continue looking for jobs.

After I served the time there and finished the land bank commissioner's job in Mellette County, I didn't have anything further, but I finally got a job as deputy clerk of courts, which I did for two months. Then again there was nothing to do; I went to Pierre to see Governor Tom Berry who was a friend of the family, and he simply told me to go to Brookings, South Dakota, where Ralph Hutchinson, one of the attorneys from White River, had gone and was heading the state department for making loans to the farmers of South Dakota. Floyd Anderson (you remember, he taught school at our place for a short time) was also there, so off to Brookings I went.

Ralph Hutchinson gave me a job and the first thing I had to do was get all their notes and mortgages in order. They were just jammed away in the filing cabinets and hadn't even been filed with the register of deeds in any county, so I had to get that job done. That was the first thing I had to do and I was hired by Hutchinson at $105 a month, which I thought was pretty good wages, but the clerk in the office sent me in and I was getting $80 a month. I didn't even know it because I didn't get paid for three months. So there was another stick-in-the-mud thing that happened that was kind of devastating. This was in 1935.

Hazel continued to teach school. Oh, I want to first tell about the winter of 1935 -1936. Here I was in Brookings and she was out there staying with a farm family, teaching school, and oh, it was a cold, rough winter. The temperature got way down, there was a lot of snow, and I was staying at a place where the bedroom was way off from the main part of the house. It was so cold in there I put newspapers under the bedding in order to keep warm, wore both pairs of pajamas that I had, and I put my overcoat over the top of that to keep warm. But finally I moved into a hotel and stayed there so that I could keep from freezing to death.

Hazel was snowed in out at the farm where she was staying for three weeks, no mail, no nothing. They even ground corn in a coffee grinder to keep from starving to death. They killed a calf and ate cornbread for a week. No mail. I never heard from her at all. But finally, the mail went through on horseback and we began to get correspondence again.

In the spring, after school was out, Hazel came to Brookings to join me. But in the fall they consolidated all of the state offices, this was the Farm Credit Administration, and sent them all down to Lincoln, Nebraska as a regional office, and I got shipped down to Lincoln. That's how we happened to arrive in Lincoln. I continued to serve in the note and mortgage division, finally headed the thing, finally got my $105 a month, and finally got $135 a month-when they moved everybody out to Denver, Colorado, the whole shebang.

Our department was dissolved and I thought I was fired, so I went downtown and got a job as an agent for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company. They told me all I had to do was go and collect life insurance premiums, just run around town and go to houses and they would pay me money for their insurance, and I could sell a little on the side and make a little extra money. Well, that's all right but they emphasized more selling than they did collecting, and I finally got disgusted after four or five years and quit. I went into business for myself and became an insurance broker and had several insurance companies, and worked for myself in that capacity for about thirty years. I retired in the year 1972 at the age of 65.

Our children were all born in Lincoln, Nebraska. Darlene, the oldest, now lives in Houston, Texas; Ray, the middle one, now lives in Malibu, California; John, the youngest, now lives in Elyria, Ohio. Darlene married a Wilbur Lee Smith of California. They have two children, a boy and a girl. Ray didn't get married until December 29, 1979, when he married a Helen Cynthia Hardman of California. John married a Laura Ott of Nebraska City, and they have two children, two girls. Ray has a boy and a girl.

While we were still living in White River. A baby boy, William, was born to us but lived only six months.
He is buried in White River along with his Great-grandmother Howlett.

My sister Margie's daughter, Mary, had three children, Judy Bennett of Valentine, Nebraska, Janet Hamm of White River and Jerry Hitching of Baytown, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schwarz adopted a boy by the name of Oscar Johnson. Brother of Ted and Ben Johnson. Oscar and Mary were married, and when Mary died, the three children were adopted by Perry and Esther Hitchings, and Mary was buried in the White River cemetery.

Fifty year have passed since I lived in Mellette County and most of the people living at that time are dead. The surviving members of our family are the following: Buena and Ira Barkley, who are now in a rest home at 4610 Adams Street, Lincoln, Nebraska. Their surviving children are Lucy, who lives in Winner, South Dakota, and Wayne Barclay, living in Lincoln, Nebraska. By the way, Lucy's name is Miller. Buena's child, Vernon, died during World War II in the Army.

Margie's surviving children are George Jerred, who lives in Harrisburg, Nebraska; Lyle Jerred, Spearfish, South Dakota; Ronald, better known as Corkey, Jerred, living in Littleton, Colorado; Verl, better known as Tommy, livings in Tucson, Arizona; and Lenora, Mrs. Roy Dodd, now living at Kiowa, Kansas. Deceased: Mary and Howard, who died during World War II.

The Elley survivors are Hazel Elley Howlett and husband, Arthur C., living at 4230 W Street, Lincoln, Nebraska 68503; George, living in Hot Springs, South Dakota and Houston, living in West Covina, California. As you can see, all have scattered to the four wind. Some are no longer living. It makes me sad God does not give us a longer life so we can enjoy our friends and family longer, and do the things we always wanted to do and never get around to. May God bless all the surviving members of the pioneer families who once lived in Mellette County, South Dakota.

This is written by Arthur C. Howlett, as of March 31, 1985.

Biography of John C. Tomlin, ID = 1575

(Found online at F-A- G, memorial created by Beulah Wiley Franks; bio was published in a Souvenir Edition, The Williamstown Courier, Williamstown, Ky, May 30, 1901, reprinted September 19, 1981 by the Grant County KY Historical Society.)

HON. J. C. TOMLIN is a native of Grant County and was born in the house in which he now resides. His father was Asa Tomlin, for many years a preacher in the Baptist Church, and a historic old character. His mother was Miss Nancy J. Franks. His two great-grandfathers were John M. Tomlin and Jacob Franks. Jacob Tomlin immigrated to the United States from Germany and settled in Culpeper County, Virginia. Jacob Franks emigrated to the United States from Germany, and first settled the District of Michigan, but afterward migrated to Kentucky and settled at what is now the village of Mount Zion. The grandfather of J. C. Tomlin was Christian Tomlin, and he was born on the Atlantic Ocean while his parents were on their way from Germany to this country. He was reared in Virginia and married to a daughter of a Revolutionary soldier named Wright. He was a farmer, a doctor and Baptist preacher. He moved from Virginia to Brown County, Ohio, and from there to Pendleton County, Kentucky. Asa Tomlin, the Baptist preacher, was born in Brown County, Ohio, and came with his father to Kentucky, where he was reared. John Franks, the grandfather of J. C. Tomlin on his mother's side, was born in the District of Michigan, and came from there to Kentucky with his parents more than one hundred years ago. His grandmother Franks was named Elizabeth Cowgill, and his and his grandmother Tomlin was named Lucinda Wright. His father and grandfather were both preachers, and according to the old English law, he was born a gentleman and has demeaned himself so in this county as to preserve the title, as his friends and neighbors will readily testify. Mr. Tomlin had the advantages of a common school education, attending the Mount Zion public school three months in the year for many years. While not in school he was working on his father's farm, "digging for gold" as it is a proverbial fact that the farmers have dug more gold out of the ground than all of the miners in the world. His people and his father and mother were slave holders, and so wasthe young man Tomlin, of whom we are trying to write; but he never believed that human slavery was right. When the war came on in 1861 he cast his fortunes with the Union side, and enlisted as a soldier to fight the battles of his country. He enlisted in the United States service at Williamstown in Grant County, about one mile south of Williamstown, at Camp Combs, October 23, 1861, as a private in Company B., 18th Regular Kentucky Volunteer Infantry. He was promoted to corporal and sergeant, and served with distinction during the entire war. He was mustered out of the service at Goldsborough, North Carolina, April 4, 1865. During his service he was commanded by Generals Palmer, Thomas and Davis. Helped to hold Chattanooga four months on one-fourth rations. Was in nearly all of the battles and skirmishes of the corps and was under fire more than sixty days and parts of days. Was in Sherman's march to the sea, and then march north through North and South Carolina, and was finally discharged. He says now that his company should have been called "the rough walkers". Mr. Tomlin's record as a soldier is without a blemish. He was in Washington when the President was assassinated on the 14th day of April, 1865. Leaving the army for good he set his race toward the home of his youth and arrived at Mount Zion on the 20 day of April, 1865. Since that time he has married and raised a family, and has been a first-class citizen. He was commissioned to fill the vacancy in the Magisterial district of Mount Zion caused by the death of his Uncle Barnette Franks, and was re-elected and commissioned to fill the next term in a strong Democratic district. Mr. Tomlin has been a farmer all of his life, and owns a nice farm and a good substantial home. He is a Baptist in religion and a Republican in politics. Mr. Tomlin was appointed to take the census last June in his district, and received a very complimentary letter in regard to his work. September 7, 1865, he was united in marriage to Miss Fannie Bondurant of Boone County. To this union two children were born, Archie and Eva Tomlin. His first wife died in August, 1867, in Belle Plains, Iowa, where he temporarily located. Later he was united in marriage to Dora C. Stevens, a great-niece of William Hume. This last marriage was September 7, 1873. To this last union the following children were born. R. Early Tomlin, Misses L. Tomlin, Ona Tomlin, Rosa Tomlin (now dead), Lidie M. Tomlin and Panzie M. Tomlin, all grown young ladies at home. Mr. Tomlin is an honest, successful business man and an honor to his county and the neighborhood in which he resides.

MILES & CONNELY

(Dealers in Hardware, Stoves, Agricultural Implements, etc., Shelbina).

Though born in Kentucky, Mr. Miles was reared in Missouri. He was the third in the family of William F. and Nancy W. (Jackson) Miles, formerly of Washington county, Ky., where John H. was born January 15, 1845. Coming to Missouri in 1850, the family settled on a farm near Paris, in Monroe county, where they lived until 1866, a period of nearly 20 years. In the years of his activity, Mr. Miles' father was an energetic and well-to-do farmer, but he is now leading a retired life. He is a resident of Shelbina, and is closely approaching the allotted age of three score and ten years. Mr. Miles' mother is also still living. She is past 60. John H. was reared on the farm near Paris, and came to this place with his parents in 1866. During the latter part of the war he entered the Confederate service and was in Finnell's Sharp-shooters, serving in the trans-Mississippi department until the final surrender. He surrendered at Shreveport, in May, 1865. Prior to entering the Southern service he had been engaged in merchant clerking at Shelbina, and after returning from the war he resumed clerking at this place. In 1874 be erected the business house he now occupies, built then for Mr. C. R. Whitehead, of which, however, he became the purchaser two years afterwards. He and Mr. J. L. Bates, now deceased, then engaged in business, and since that time he has continued to be identified with this line of business. The present partnership of Miles & Connely, was formed in 1880. They carry a stock of about $5,000, and do an annual business of six or seven times that amount. They carry full lines of hardware, stoves, agricultural implements, and similar goods, and have a large trade. January 15, 1880, Mr. Miles was married to Miss Ida Connely, a daughter of Arthur Connely, and sister to his present partner in business. Mr. and Mrs. M. have two children: Maggie and Charles H. He and wife are members of the Baptist Church, and he is a prominent member of the I. O. O. F. and of the A. O. U. W.

Biography of R(obert) Emmett Smith, ID = 1668

R. Emmet Smith, the junior partner in the firm of Minter & Smith, is also a native of Virginia, born in Fauquier county, January 4, 1850. He was left an orphan when a mere child by the death of his mother, who was previous to her marriage, a Miss Eliza Reed, but his father, for whom R. Emmet was named, was spared to the family and under his paternal care the son was brought up in a manner worthy the irreproachable and successful career he has since made. At the age of 19 he began clerking in the store of his uncle, William A. Reid, at Shelbina, having come out to this State a short time before. His uncle was then a partner with Hill, but afterwards List succeeded his uncle, and finally Mr. Smith himself succeeded List in 1877, the firm becoming Hill & Smith. Minter bought out Hill's interest in 1877, since which the firm has been as it now stands, Minter & Smith. January 28, 1880, Mr. Smith was married to Miss Olive Connerly, a daughter of Arthur Connerly. They have two children, Lucile and R. Emmet. Mr. Smith is a thorough-going business man and as a citizen is highly respected in the community.

The firm of Minter & Smith is without doubt one of the most enterprising business firms in the county. They buy their goods largely direct from the manufactory and exclusively for cash. Mr. Minter has the reputation of being one of the closest and most careful buyers that visit the Eastern market, which facts doubtless answer the inquiry so often made why they sell their goods at such low prices.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, "Emmet" should be Emmett"; "January 4, 1850" should be January 4, 1849; "Connerly" should be Connely.

I have never been able to confirm that Emmett & Olive (Connely) Smith had a son named R. Emmet Smith but they did have a daughter named Lucile Smith and a son named Arthur Emmett Smith.)

Biography of Eben Albert Soderstrom, ID = 191aa

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in "A standard history of Oklahoma, Vol V", Joseph B. Thoburn, The American Historical Society, Chicago and New York, 1916, page 2139.)

EBEN SODERSTROM. This is one of the few men who can claim lifelong residence at Pawhuska, though until recent years there was no city specially worthy of the name in that locality. The milling industry in this section of Oklahoma owes more to the enterprise of the Soderstroms, father and son, than to any other individual. It has been with milling and the grain business that Eben Soderstrom has been identified all his active career, and his father before him was one of the prominent millers in the early days of old Indian Territory.

Born at Pawhuska November 3, 1879, Eben Soderstrom is a son of John and Laura (Coffey) Soderstrom. His father was born in Sweden in 1853, and died at Pawhuska in 1905. When nineteen years of age he came to America, having learned the trade of millwright in the old country, and from Chicago, where he first located, worked at different points until he came to Indian Territory in 1878. He was at that time and for a number of years in the employ of the United States Government, and it was under Government auspices that he built two mills in this part of Oklahoma, one at Kaw Agency and another at the Osage Agency at what is now Pawhuska. When the Government sold this latter mill at auction he and W. S. Mathews secured the property, and following this purchase he continued its operation until his death. His early death was the result of drowning in Bird Creek, while putting up ice. While he followed the milling industry all his life, and built a number of mills in different parts of the country, he was also for a number of years in the cattle business, operating a large ranch near Pawhuska. In politics he was a republican, but contented himself merely with voting, and was not an active party man. He was affiliated with the Masonic order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. John Soderstrom was married soon after coming to Indian Territory in the spring of 1878 to Miss Laura Coffey, who is still living at Pawhuska. Special interest attaches to her because of the fact that she is one of the daughters of Colonel Coffey, the founder of the City of Coffeyville, Kansas, where she was born in 1863. Of their six children Eben is the oldest; Delia is the wife of Ben Parsons of Pawhuska; J. W. lives at Pawhuska; Hannah is the wife of John Renfrew, also of Pawhuska; and Carl and Floyd are likewise residents of that city.

After his education in local schools up to the age of sixteen, Eben Soderstrom found a place in his father's mill, and under the latter's direction learned all the details of the milling business. He was associated with the elder Soderstrom until his death, and then in partnership with J. E. Scarborough bought the old stone mill on Bird Creek which his father had built and operated. Three years later this landmark of early industry burned. Then with his own capital Mr. Soderstrom built the present grain elevator and seed mill located near the Midland Valley Railroad station in Pawhuska. The elevator has a capacity of 10,000 bushels of grain, and he also does a business of custom grinding for the farmers of that community. He is wholesale flour agent in this part of Oklahoma for the Globe Flour Mills. In his business Mr. Soderstrom employs three men, and is one of the live and enterprising citizens of Pawhuska. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic Order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In 1914 occurred his marriage to Naomi Conley, who was born at Arkansas City, Kansas, in 1886, a daughter of Joseph Conley. They have a son, John, who is one year old at this writing and named in honor of his grandfather.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, Naomi was the daughter of Benjamin Conley, not Joseph Conley.)

Perrin, J.H. Battle, and G.C. Kniffin, 7th edition, Louisville, Ky.: F.A. Battey and Co., 1887, page 890.)

ORLOW STEELE, a native of Gallatin County, Ky., was born June 20, 1820. His father, Joseph Steele, a native of Virginia, and a farmer and salt maker, settled in Gallatin in an early day, where he lived until his death, which occurred February 6, 1855. He took part in the war of 1812, and married Mariam M. Boone, niece of Daniel Boone, the pioneer settler of Kentucky. She bore him ten children, the subject of this sketch being the youngest son and ninth child of the family. Orlow Steele was reared on the farm, and now owns 180 acres of well cultivated land. He married Harriet F. Howlett, a native of Boone County, and a daughter of John and Fannie (Conley) Howlett, natives of Kentucky. She bore him three sons and four daughters, viz.: William O. (deceased), John O. (deceased), O. F., Medora F., Elizabeth, Jennie and Clara. Mr. Steele is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and is a Democrat.

Perrin, J.H. Battle, and G.C. Kniffin, 7th edition, Louisville, Ky.: F.A. Battey and Co., 1887, page 780.)

THOMAS F. CURLEY, a prominent merchant of Boone County, was born in New York, October 6, 1849, and was the second of a family of eight children born to Patrick and Margaret (Cahill) Curley, natives of Ireland, who came to America in 1847, and first settled in New York, but in 1851 moved to Cincinnati, where Patrick Curley engaged in the coal and wood business; he was a baker by occupation. In 1856 he moved to Kentucky, and settled in Covington, where he became a contractor, grading the streets of Covington. He then began manufacturing cider and vinegar, and is still engaged in that business in Covington. Thomas F. Curley was reared on a farm, received a common-school education, and graduated at Nelson's Commercial College, Cincinnati, in 1869; he taught common schools, and then opened a general store, and by his industry and economy now owns three large stores, and as many lots in Walton. In February, 1876, he married Miss Dora Northcutt, a daughter of L. M. and Margaret (Conley) Northcutt, of Kenton County, Ky. Five children blessed this union, of whom three are living, viz.: Francis E., Willie H., Gertrude A., Pauline A. and Mabel M. In 1882 Mr. Curley was elected magistrate of Walton, served four years, and was re-elected in 1886. He is a member of the Catholic Church. Politically he is a Democrat.

John W. Conley
WALTON, KY, ROUTE 2

The Conley family is one of the oldest in this section of Kentucky as they came here shortly after the Revolutionary War and started farming on a tract of land near Walton after they had cleared off the trees and wood groves. Land was cheap at that time and the great grandfather of John W. Conley was offered one hundred acres of land across from his farm in trade for one horse. The writer is uninformed as to whether or not the trade was consummated.

John W. Conley was married to Kate Ryan in 1889. Both of this couple went to the same school, and their parents' farms adjoined.

Mr. Conley was born on October 11, 1866, the son of R. A. and Elizabeth F. Conley. The house in which he is now living was built by his grandfather in 1861 and 62, during the stirring days of the Civil War.

Mr. R. A. Conley was a member of the Masonic Lodge and a leading and upright citizen of his community. He has the respect and confidence of all who know him, and has proven himself a loyal booster for Boone County with his willingness to cooperate and contribute to every cause.

(Note by RRC: John's paternal great-grandfather was Robert Connely (1781 Augusta Co., VA - 1850 Boone Co., KY), ID =19.)

Biography of Leander Madison 'Matt' Connley, ID = 195a

L. M. CONLEY. Grant County is especially proud of her farmers, and well she may be. Being, in the first place, a purely agricultural county, with no manufacturing establishments and no mineral interests, she has to look to her farmers for practically all of her wealth. That she has as good a class of farmers as there is in the state within her borders is certainly true. There is no better example of the practical up-to-date farmer than L. M. CONLEY, who lives some two miles east of this place. He is a son of Calvin CONLEY and Mrs. Malissa CONLEY, and was born in the county of Boone October 27, 1854. His father was married twice and he is a child of the last wife, being one of eight children born to that marriage, and the oldest boy in the lot. His birth-place was near Elliston Station, and there, on his father's farm, young CONLEY grew up. He obtained a good common school education, and began life as a school teacher, teaching for four years under a first-class certificate and giving universal satisfaction wherever he taught. February 4, 1879, he was united in marriage to Miss Malissa Bennette, daughter of James Bennette, and to this union three children have been born--one boy and two girls--Lester L., Dena Pearl, and Anna E. Mr. CONLEY went to house-keeping when married at the place where he now resides, and has lived there ever since. He owns 115 acres of fine land and a beautiful home, and is surrounded by all of the conveniences and comforts of life. He is an active member of the Christian Church at Fairview, and has been an elder in the church for many years, and has also been the secretary and treasurer of the church for fifteen years. He believes in giving his children a good education, and has given them every advantage, his youngest daughter having taught school last year under a first-class certificate with decided success. Mr. CONLEY is engaged in general farming, live stock and tobacco raising, and make a specialty of his apiary. He has forty colonies of fine bees, and sells every year a great quantity of honey and a good many swarms and queens. His bee stock is the finest to be found in the state.

Biographical sketch of Eric Malcolm Filson, ID = 1968112

(Copied from "Eric Filson traveled an eclectic career path, devoured history" by Andrew Meacham, Times Staff Writer, published in the Tampa Bay Times, Tampa Bay, FL, Wednesday, 9 May 2012, online. I (RRC) have replaced the names of his wife and stepdaughter with ...)

LARGO — Eric Filson had been to Chile, Italy, Greece and Tunisia. He had driven by himself out west to photograph whatever, only to return to his wife and his favorite place in the world, his blue recliner in the living room.

From there, he would make his way through U.S. history, from George Washington to the Civil War to LBJ, study road maps, sip his Coke and figure out which presidential library to visit next.

Mr. Filson, whose interest in everything led to several areas of expertise and a diverse career path, died Saturday. He was 71.

An award-winning newspaper reporter and editor, he left journalism to study accounting, then taught himself software analysis.

"What attracted me was his sense of sincerity," said... his wife since 1989. Mr. Filson, who had emerged from a childless first marriage, tried to teach his stepdaughters, then 13 and 14, the kind of curiosity that had guided his life.

"If we found a word in the newspaper we didn't know, wrote it down and gave the definition, he would give us a quarter," said stepdaughter... "We could get $1.75 a week doing that."

A son of two college professors, Mr. Filson was born in Saginaw, Mich. He graduated from Michigan State University, then spent a year as a reporter for the Royal Oak Daily Tribune in Michigan. He moved to the Gainesville Sun as a reporter and city editor, his local stories often reflecting broader tensions over civil rights or the Vietnam war.

Then he went back to school, earning an accounting degree from Florida State University. Before long, Mr. Filson had discovered he was also interested in computers. He spent the last 25 years of his career at what is now St. Petersburg College, retiring in 2006 as a senior computer analyst.

All the while, he read U.S. history. He leaned Democratic despite having no party affiliation, but was equally eager to visit the presidential libraries of Ronald Reagan or Bill Clinton. When President Gerald Ford died in 2006, stepdaughter... who lives in Baltimore, agreed to photograph the proceedings for him.

He had planned to do much more traveling with his wife. Then two years ago, doctors said he was becoming affected by an unclassified dementia. He entered East Bay Rehabilitation Center after a fall, and died there Saturday.

His stepdaughter, now 37 and a civil and environmental engineer, credits Mr. Filson with broadening her horizons. Once a shy teen... took up the clarinet after her stepfather bought her one. Before long, she was a soloist.

"He said that while others may tell me this was a useless hobby it really wasn't," she said, "because you wanted to be well-rounded and a Renaissance woman. That way you have something to talk about to anybody."

The Conely Family

Dr. John A. Conely migrated with family from Wales to Boston in 1770. At outbreak of Revolution they moved to Virginia and on to Kentucky. Son Grenvile was born in Frankford, Kentucky 2-7-1815, died 2-17-1877. He married Mary Ann Northcut, born 7-2-1809, died 2-12-1860. To them was born John C. Conely (my grandfather) who married Mary Davenport. They migrated from Missouri to Cowley County 1875 and purchased a small farm on the banks of the Arkansas River southeast of Gueda Springs.

John Clemence Conely purchased the Pruder Ferry Barge in 1878 and had it moved to his farm. He had the cross-river ferry boat in operation by July 3, 1879. A steel cable was stretched across the river and fastened to two huge cottonwood trees. The barge operated on pulleys attached to each end of the craft. The toll was 10 cents for team and wagon or rider and horse 5 cents. The river current propelled the craft by shortening one cable and lengthening the other putting the barge at an angle to the current. At that time the nearest bridge was at Wichita or Tulsa.

The following were born to John C. and Mary; Allen A. Canely, Oct. 13, 1874; Edith Conely Godfrey, June 15, 1876; John M. (father of Doyle K. Conely); Willis, Aug. 1, 1888; Gilbert Leroy, Aug. 31, 1892; Milton Dewey, July 7, 1898.

I car, remember my grandad had some real high strung horses. About 1907 a man named].L. Tuttle moved into the area, was quite wealthy, bought or built three hotels, soda pop bottling plant, and bath house. In fact, he ended up owning about everything in town that was worth owning. He had an architect named Crouse design a ten room house for him. My dad John M. and uncle Allen A. Conely contracted to build the house up on a hill southeast of town, overlooking Salt creek and the Arkansas River, It was to be the finest house this side of Wichita and Tulsa. It took about two years to accumulate the materials and build the house. It was completed in 1913. It was a beauty, buff brick with a porch 3/4 way around the house, an upstairs sleeping porch at the rear, a two car garage with quarters for the chauffeur above and a house for the family that farmed the land. The chauffeur was a young colored man named Roberts. His family lived south of Geuda about 2 1/2 miles, nice people. The Tuttle car was a Pierce Arrow with fold-down seats in the rear doors. My mother and two sisters were taken through the house on its completion but I was ill and it was 70 years later that I was invited through. The new owners had completely redone the inside of the house. It is beautiful. There are still roughly 300 acres with the place. Originally there were about 500 acres.

ALL THE MOVIE STARS LOOK ALIKE TO PRETTY M-G-M MANICURIST

BY DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 22. - Moviedom's foremost manicurist.

Pretty, red-headed Betty Sanford can claim this title any time she desires and nobody will dispute it.

However, Betty also has other distinctions. She is a screen actress and the mother of a 17-year old daughter, Doris, although she doesn't look a day over 23 herself.

Miss Sanford is manicurist for the entire Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio and is a member of that company's stock company. As yet she never has secured a really important role and we might add that she has just about given up hope of ever doing so.

"I don't care a great deal whether I ever do anything big myself," Betty told me. "I am mainly interested in my daughter now. She also is in stock here and I expect to see her do big things within the next few years.

"Between the money I earn as a manicurist and my salary as an actress I manage to get along pretty well. However, I realize that I never will be able to get anywhere in pictures until I can devote my whole time to acting. And right now I can't afford to do that. I don't think I ever would be able to get anywhere at this studio anyway. Everyone around the lot knows me too well. To them I'm just Betty and none of them would ever think of me when casting a big part."

Miss Sanford came to Hollywood about five years ago on a vacation--and she's still here. A short time after her arrival she saw an advertisement for a manicurist who also would spend part of her time working in pictures. She applied at the M-G-M studio for the job and after proving satisfactory to both the barber shop manager and casting director, got it.

"I could tell you many things about motion picture stars," Betty remarked. "But I won't," she added quickly. "Naturally, as manicurist, I come in close contact with most of the people on the lot at various times. But to me they aren't great stars, directors or executives. They are just ordinary persons like anybody else. I have seen many of them come and go since I have been here. Some have taken an extremely 'high hat' attitude, but most of them have been quite regular.

"However, I don't get any more of a kick out of manicuring a big movie star than I do out of someone who is entirely unknown. And very often the unknowns have the nicest hands."

(Note by RRC: Other sources show that Betty's daughter, Doris, married 1st about 1934 to Nicandro Aguilar and 2nd in 1939 to Herbert William Chambosse'.)

Biography of Hiram J. Cole, ID = 19a1

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in “Histoty of Dearborn and Ohio Counties, Indiana”, F. E. Weakley & Co., publishers, Chicago, IL, pages 669-670.)

HIRAM J. COLE, farmer, Clay Township, was born in that township, Dearborn Co., Ind., January 1, 1839. His parents were Isaac T. and Ann (Wintro) Cole, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, respectively; former born in Greene County, Penn., October 20, 1806, the latter in Warren County, Ohio, April 4, 1809. David and Polly Cole, and Adam and Mary Wintro were the grandparents. The parents were married in Warren County, Ohio, and from thence, in about the year 1834, moved to Dearborn County, Ind., and purchased and settled on the same farm on which our subject now lives, and afterward, resided there until their deaths, the mother passing away November 16, 1863, the father February 8, 1883. Their children were John, James E., Harvey T., Mary L., Martha, Hiram J., Rebecca A., Samuel, William H., David, Sarah J. and Laura E. Hiram J., our subject, was brought up a farmer, and he has engaged in that pursuit during the greater part of his life. He received a thorough common school education in the district schools, and then attended for some time the Moore's Hill College, after which he turned his attention to teaching school in winters, and working at the carpenter's trade in summers for a number of years. In 1858 he went to Boone County, Ky., where he was married December 23, 1860, to Margaret E., daughter of John A. C. and Martha (Connley) Adams. She was born in Boone County, Ky., January 8, 1843. After his marriage he settled near Verona, Ky., where he remained until 1864, engaging in farming and teaching school. From thence in that year he moved to Dearborn County, Ind., and settled on his father's farm, where he remained about three years, then removed to Boone County, Ky., residing there until December, 1883, at which time he removed to Dearborn County, Ind., and settled on his father's farm of 145 acres, which he at present owns. They had three children, viz.: Dora D. (deceased), Denton A. (deceased), and Nora E.

(Note by RRC: “Connley” is probably a typo, should be Connely. Hiram’s date of birth is 30 Dec 1839 in other sources; in the 1900 census (which asks for month and year of birth) it is Jan 1839 so I think 1 Jan 1839, as given in this bio, is correct.)

Biographical sketch of James William Connley, ID = 19b13

The following is what the Warsaw Independent has to say of James W. Connley, who was honored by the Democrats of Gallatin County, at the primary election, Dec. 15th, with the nomination for Sheriff:

"Mr. Connley was born in Boone county, Ky., Oct. 5th, 1874, and is the son of John T. and Mary (Ryle) Connley, who moved to this county from Boone in 1879, where they have since made their home, Mr. Connley, sr., having been the magistrate of the Napoleon district for several years. The subject of this sketch is-a handsome, manly fellow, and won his race for Sheriff on his merits. He is a genial, polite and companionable gentleman and in every way qualified for the office. When Gov. Bradley stated that no one from Gallatin County had taken service in the late Spanish-American war, young Connley unhitched his horses from the plow and at once responded, stating that Gallatin County could at least show that she had one patriotic son who was willing to serve his country. Mr. Connley became a member of Co. E 1st Ky. Regt. (Louisville Legion) May 29th, 1898, and served as a valiant soldier throughout. He is a. member of Napoleon Lodge, F. & A. M., as is his father, and the Connley family are all Baptists. Our young friend is one of a family of nine children, all but one (Bernice) living, and he felt it his duty to help his father, and his success in his race for Sheriff will enable him to do it. His late opponents do him the credit to say that he made a fair, square race, and all have extended him their congratulations and promised him their support at the election in November 1901. No one could appreciate the honor more than Mr. Connley and the office could not be conferred on a more deserving young man.

DANIEL McMILLAN STEWART.

Daniel McMillan Stewart, veteran of the Civil War, banker, former member of the city council and for many years actively identified with the various interests of his home town and of Greene county in general, and who is now living practically retired from the more active affairs of life in his pleasant home at Xenia, is one of Greene county's native sons and has maintained his home here all his life, though formerly and for some years his business interests required that he spend much of his time in the West. He was born on a farm on the Jamestown pike, just one mile east of the court house in Xenia, March 17, 1840, son of William H. and Esther (McMillan) Stewart, both of whom were born in South Carolina, members of families that became pioneers in Greene county.

Daniel McMillan Stewart spent his early youth on the home farm on the Cedarville pike and was fourteen years of age when his father moved to the Cedarville neighborhood in 1854, after which he attended the Cedarville schools, there coming under the instruction of Professor Orr and James Turnbull. He later attended a couple of terms at the Urbana Institute and in 1860 matriculated at Monmouth College, but was taken ill with diphtheria at the outset of his college career and was compelled to return home, where for some time afterward he was in a poor state of health. When the Civil War broke out he desired to enlist, but was unable to do so on account of the state of his health. He was able, however, later to enter the service with the hundred-day men and thus served as a member of Company F, One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry. Upon the completion of his military service Mr. Stewart returned home and became engaged in farming, his father giving him the old home place east of Xenia. He later became engaged in the real-estate and insurance business at Xenia, buying his grandfather's farms of three hundred and sixty-five acres, disposed of them and bought a farm in Champaign county and has ever since been more or less engaged in the real-estate business in and about Xenia. After his marriage in 1877 he established his home in Xenia, where his wife planned the erection of the brick house at 114 West Third street, where he still lives, and that has ever since been his established home, though for some years afterward much of his time was spent in the West. It was about the time of his marriage that Mr. Stewart became engaged as an agent for the sale of railroad lands along the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad and he was thus engaged for seven years, or until the lands were closed out. He then became engaged in the lead-mining business at Joplin, Missouri, and after operating with more or less success in that section for fifteen years "struck it rich" when he opened the "Get There" mine at Webb City, Missouri, which he developed and operated for three years, at the end of which time he leased the mine and later, in 1896, sold it. Since that time Mr. Stewart has devoted his time to his real-estate and other interests in and about Xenia. For years he has been a member of the board of directors of the Xenia National Bank, for the past fifteen years vice-president of the same. Mr.

Stewart is a Republican and for twelve years served as a member of the Xenia city council. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church and for the past thirty years has been a member of the board of trustees of the Xenia Theological Seminary. Air. Stewart is a member of the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

On January 1, 1877, Daniel M. Stewart was united in marriage to Harriet Bonner, who was born on a farm on the lower Bellbrook pike, in Xenia township, this county, and who died in April, 1908, at her home in Xenia. Mrs. Stewart was a daughter of the Rev. James R. and Martha (Gowdy) Bonner, the former of whom at the time of her birth was pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church at Xenia and the latter of whom was a member of the numerous Gowdy family which came up here from Kentucky in 1806. To Mr. and Mrs. Stewart one child was born, a daughter, Lunette Belle, who was graduated from the seminary at Washington, Pennsylvania, and who on December 24, 1906, was united in marriage to Charles Murdock Kelso, a consulting engineer and contractor, of Dayton. Mr. and Mrs. Kelso have one child, a daughter, Mary Stewart Kelso, born on September 5, 1909, whom Mr. Stewart regards as "the apple of his eye."

Upon the completion of his military service Mr. Stewart returned home and became engaged in farming, his father giving him the old home place east of Xenia. He later became engaged in the real-estate and insurance business at Xenia, buying his grandfather's farms of three hundred and sixty-five acres, disposed of them and bought a farm in Champaign county and has ever since been more or less engaged in the real-estate business in and about Xenia. After his marriage in 1877 he established his home in Xenia, where his wife planned the erection of the brick house at 114 West Third street, where he still lives, and that has ever since been his established home, though for some years afterward much of his time was spent in the West. It was about the time of his marriage that Mr. Stewart became engaged as an agent for the sale of railroad lands along the line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad and he was thus engaged for seven years, or until the lands were closed out. He then became engaged in the lead-mining business at Joplin, Missouri, and after operating with more or less success in that section for fifteen years "struck it rich" when he opened the "Get There" mine at Webb City, Missouri, which he developed and operated for three years, at the end of which time he leased the mine and later, in 1896, sold it. Since that time Mr. Stewart has devoted his time to his real-estate and other interests in and about Xenia. For years he has been a member of the board of directors of the Xenia National Bank, for the past fifteen years vice-president of the same. Mr. Stewart is a Republican and for twelve years served as a member of the Xenia city council. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church and for the past thirty years has been a member of the board of trustees of the Xenia Theological Seminary. Mr. Stewart is a member of the local post of the Grand Army of the Republic.

On January 1, 1877, Daniel M. Stewart was united in marriage to Harriet Bonner, who was born on a farm on the lower Bellbrook pike, in Xenia township, this county, and who died in April, 1908, at her home in Xenia. Mrs. Stewart was a daughter of the Rev. James R. and Martha (Gowdy) Bonner, the former of whom at the time of her birth was pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church at Xenia and the latter of whom was a member of the numerous Gowdy family which came up here from Kentucky in 1806. To Mr. and Mrs. Stewart one child was born, a daughter, Lunette Belle, who was graduated from the seminary at Washington, Pennsylvania, and who on December 24, 1906, was united in marriage to Charles Murdock Kelso, a consulting engineer and contractor, of Dayton. Mr. and Mrs. Kelso have one child, a daughter, Mary Stewart Kelso, born on September 5, 1909, whom Mr. Stewart regards as "the apple of his eye."

INTRODUCTION

My efforts in tracing the various ancestors of our Connelly family back, step-by-step, beyond the Revolutionary period have, so far, been largely unsuccessful, and I suspect that others have had similar results. However, we know the family names of many of them, and that several, or their ancestors, in addition to the Connellys -— the MacAlpins, the MacGregors, the Blairs, and (for some of us) the McCartys and possibly the Burkes -— came from Ireland and Scotland. Also, it so happens that most of these families are descendants of the ancient Milesian families of Ireland, and that a considerable amount of data is available on these Milesian families in general and on the lineage of the various tribes to which they belong. With the thought that others might find as much pride and pleasure in reading about these people as I did in finding and compiling the data, I am presenting here some of the results of my research on these Celtic clans.

The earliest known histories of Scotland and Ireland are so closely related that, to obtain a clear picture of one, it is necessary to consider both. In fact, long before Scotland was known as such, one of the successive names by which Ireland was known was Scotia, which is believed to have been bestowed upon the island in honor of Scota, the widow of Milesius, a Celtic king who died before 1700 B.C. in the land that is now Spain or Portugal. Some 22 centuries later, emigrants from a Milesian tribe in northeastern Ireland (or Scotia) known as the Dal Riada, crossed the relatively narrow north channel of the Irish Sea and settled in the northwestern area of the land later known as Scotland. At that time, according to Scottish history, the northern part of Alba (an early name of Scotland) was otherwise inhabited by native tribes called Picts, of which little is known except that they were warlike and, like the Dal Riadans, spoke Gaelic. However, from Irish history, we learn that, many centuries before, the Picts of Alba, at least some of them, had been conquered by the same Milesians that had settled in Ireland, and were probably thereafter a mixture of Milesian and Pictish stock, with possibly other racial strains, including the Dananns, who were inhabitants of Ireland when the Milesians arrived. In modern times, further confusion in regard to the inhabitants of the two countries has resulted from the use of the term "Scotch-Irish" to describe ancestors who originated in Scotland and later settled in northern Ireland. Actually, aside from other racial strains, almost any Scot is likely to have some Irish blood, and almost any Irishman is likely to be a wee bit Scotch. In our Connelly family, we of course have both Scotch and Irish in addition to any number of other racial strains, particularly Norman, Dutch and Anglo-Saxon, which have come into the family in successive generations. However, we are probably still predominantly Irish and Scotch in one way or another, of which we can be proud, because the basic Celtic stock, the Milesian Tribes of Ireland, from which we spring, have a known and illustrious history going back (according to O'Hart) almost 3700 years!

The Milesians, so named for their leader, Milesius (the previously noted Celtic king who died in what is now Spain or Portugal just prior to their immigration to Ireland) have a legendary and mythological history even farther back. However in that early history, it is difficult or impossible to separate fact from fiction, and hence it has been omitted here because we are concerned with genealogy which, to be of value, should have some factual basis. The story of the emigration of the Milesian tribes from Spain to Ireland, and their development over many centuries into the major component of the Irish race and nation is generally accepted by writers and historians as basically true and correct, although they disagree by centuries on the earlier dates. The following highly condensed version is based on information from "The Annals of the Four Masters" (1616-1856), "A Genealogical History of the Milesian Families of Ireland" by B. W. DeCourcy (1880), "Irish Pedigrees" by John O'Hart (1915), "The Story of the Irish Race" by Seumas MacManus (1921), "The Scottish Nation" by William Anderson (1880), "The Highland Clans" by Sir Iain Moncreiffe (1967), and other sources.

THE ANCIENT HISTORY

At some time around 1800 B.C. (according to O'Hart), a Celtic chieftain named Bragan led his wandering tribe into the Iberian Peninsula and established a settlement which eventually became the city of Braganza, first in Spain and much later in Portugal when the latter nation was formed. Bragan had ten sons, among them being two with which we are concerned; Ith and Bille. In due time, Billie had a son named Milesius, who eventually became king of the colony, which continued to grow and prosper. However, after about 30 years of peace and tranquility, a persistent drought set in and famine ensued. At a meeting of Milesius and his chieftains, it was agreed that, to survive, they must find a more favorable land and climate.

At that time, Christianity was of course far in the future. However, most races and nations had some sort of pagan religion. For the Milesians, it was Druidism, which appears to have been basically a worship of the sun and nature coupled with a belief in the immortality of the soul. For that time, the priests (Druids) were quite learned men, who were well versed in herbal medicine. They were also advisors to the king and next in power. Possibly as a result of a prophetic dream, Milesius was told by his chief Druid that his people should abandon their home in Spain and journey until they found a verdant island, the most westward off the coast, which would be Innisfail, meaning the Isle of Destiny, where they should settle and would flourish for ages.

Accordingly, an expedition, with Ith, the uncle of Milesius in command, was organized and sent on a voyage to find that fabulous island. After sailing up the coast of present-day Spain and France, and westward around what is now southwest England, they came at last to the sought-for island. With his son, Lughaidh, as second in command and an escort of about a hundred armed men, Ith landed and marched to the place later called Oileag Nead in Gaelic, the language of the Milesians, now Innis Owen. There they met the inhabitants, since known as the Tuatha de Dananns (the Tribe of the goddess Dana) and their leaders. After a short stay in apparent friendship, the Milesians were attacked during their departure by a large force. Ith was mortally wounded, and died on the return voyage. Also, when the fleet arrived in Spain, the voyagers found their countrymen mourning the death of Milesius, who had passed away peacefully after a reign of 36 years.

Lughaidh, seeking to avenge his father's death and also entranced by the beauty and fertility of the island they had found, exhorted the Milesians to abandon their drought-stricken land and sail with him to Innisfail. Drawing his sword, he swore that he would never rest until they had conquered the island for themselves and their descendants.

Thus, it came to pass that Scota, the widow of Milesius, his eight sons (Heber, Heremon, Ir, Donn, Aireach, Ambergin, Aranann and Colpa), Lughaidh and some thirty other chieftains and their families embarked in a large fleet for the Isle of Destiny. Abbe MacGeoghegan, in his account, infers but does not state that the settlement of Braganza was abandoned. However, it is possible that a substantial number of people remained behind, among them being the ancestors of the Braganza family that, centuries later, provided the first kings of Portugal.

According to the chronicles, the voyage of the Milesians to the vicinity of Innisfail was uneventful; but, once in sight of land, misfortune overtook them. A violent storm arose and claimed a large part of the fleet and the immigrants. Donn was lost with his vessels and followers on the coast at Teagh Duinn. Aranann was driven out to sea where his vessels sank with all on board. His body was washed ashore and later buried at Skeily Mihil, near Dingle, in the present county of Kerry. Heber, Ambergin, and their mother, Scota, escaped with their families and followers, including Lughaidh, the son of lth, and landed at Inver Skeiry, now Bantry, in the same county. The ships of Aireach, Colpa and Heremon were driven to the north along the eastern coast of the island. Aireach and Colpa perished with their followers; Colpa at Inver Colpa, near the mouth of the river Boyne. Heremon and his family rode out the storm and landed at the same place.

Shortly after landing and in what later became the Barony of Truchanaimy in Kerry County, Heber and his band fought the Battle of Slieve Mish against some of the Danann inhabitants who were led by the Princess Eire, and defeated them. However, in this battle, Scota was slain. She was buried at Glen Scoithin, where her grave may still be seen.

Heber and his followers now marched northeastward where they united with the forces of his brother Heremon. Together, they met and defeated the armies of the three Danann Princes, all of whom were slain. Upon completion of the conquest, the island was divided among the surviving leaders; the northern half generally to Heremon and the southern half to Heber, with small portions within these areas to Lugaidh and Heber Donn, the son of Ir. Either before or after this time, Heremon married Thea, a daughter of Lugaidh.

Thus began the Celtic nation now called Ireland, which grew and prospered beyond all expectations -— Innisfail, the Isle of Destiny.

THE GOLDEN AGE

Some historians believe that the Dananns were themselves of the Celtic race, possibly mixed with still earlier inhabitants of the island known as the Firbolgs, and were simply conquered and not exterminated by the Milesians. This is indicated by the fact that, shortly after the conquest, the Milesians decreed that only the descendants of Heremon, Heber, Ir and Ith should inherit any of the principalities, lordships or provincial thrones, or become Ard-Righ (High-King) of the nation. It was this regulation which resulted in so much Milesian genealogy being preserved. It required the creation in each major family of the office of Ollambh (pronounced Ollave and meaning antiquary or herald) whose duty was to record and keep all genealogies of the tribal families and the exploits of their heroes. There is no doubt that their records were very meticulous and complete; but, unfortunately, as a result of wars, fires, natural calamities and wanton destruction by invaders such as the Danes (ca.810), Henry II of England (1169), and Cromwell (1649), most of the detailed family genealogies have been lost. However, enough has been found and collected to allow antiquarians, historians, and genealogists to determine the family names of the Milesian descendants, the tribes or clans to which they belong, and the principal lines of descent from the ancient rulers. The most comprehensive collections of this data are given by B. W. DeCourcy and John O'Hart in their previously noted works from which most of the genealogy given in this article has been extracted. However, before proceeding to that data, it is but fitting that some of the highlights in the history of those remarkable Milesians, first in Scotia (Ireland) and later in Alba (Scotland), be given here since they were the direct ancestors of most of the families of both Ireland and Highland Scotland, and were also ancestors of all of the Scottish kings, including the Royal Stuarts.

THE FAMILIES

For those not familiar with the origin of Irish and Scotch surnames, an important feature which should be known to avoid confusion is that, in the beginning, the prefix "Mac" meant "the son of" the person whose basic surname followed; and the prefix "O‘" meant "the grandson of" or "the descendant of". In most cases, surnames with the "Mac" prefix have retained it; while the "O‘" prefix has been dropped from many of those names.

A few words are also in order here relative to Gaelic, the language of the Celts, which was also the basic language of Ireland and the Scottish Highlands until supplanted by English in recent times. The Gaelic alphabet contains fewer letters than the English; only 18. Also, many of the letters in a word or name may be silent, and the pronunciation may be and usually is much different from what it would appear to be in English. In addition, as anyone involved in genealogy knows, the name of a given person in old records may be spelled in any number of ways. Thus, there is some variation in the spelling of the names, and also of many words in general, among the various reference works, much of it due no doubt to the difficulty in reading and translating the ancient manuscripts. The language has gone through many changes from Old Gaelic to Middle Gaelic and finally to Modern Gaelic, or Irish. Also, to further confuse the situation, some names have, over the years, been Latinized or Anglicized as a result of general historic usage; as, for instance, Milesius and his sons, Heber and Heremon. To preserve as much as possible historic accuracy, and also to insure proper identification in other records or documents which might in the future be consulted, the names given in the following lineages have been spelled in what appeared to be the best form among the references consulted.

CONNELLY (CONNELLEY, CONNOLLY, CONLEY, O'CONNOLLY, ETC.)

In Ireland, the Connellys were members of the Northern Hy Nials and descendants of Eogan, founder of the Clan, which was a sept of the Hy Nial Clan that had been founded by his father, Nial Noy Giollach (Nial of the Nine Hostages) who became King of Ireland in 379 A.D. Nial was, in turn, a descendant of Heremon, eighth son of Milesius (see line of descent which follows). So far as can be determined, the ancient Gaelic spelling of the name Connelly was O'Conghalaigh, signifying "a light". Later spellings were O'Connally and O'Connolly; then with the "O" dropped, Connolly. In the early days, the possessions of the clan were mostly in the counties of Galway, Meath and Donegal. In later years, the Connellys spread all over Ireland. The "Annals of the Four Masters" note that Donnachadh O'Conghalaigh (Duncan O‘Connolly in modern English), royal heir to the Throne of Ireland, was slain in 1016 A.D.; that Patrick O'Connolly, son of Henry, who was Abbot of Clones, died in 1504 A.D.; and that Edmund O'Connolly was killed in battle in 1515 A.D.

(53) Eogan, one of the eight known sons of Nial Noy Giollach and ancestor of several families in the Northern Hy Nial Clan, including the Connelly family.

Note: All of the intervening Milesian ancestors omitted from the preceding line of descent, and also from the following lines of descent to the McCartys, the MacAlpins and the MacGregors, are given in O'Hart's "Irish Pedigrees", most of them were Kings of Ireland, but they have been omitted here to save space and also because such a long list of names, most of them unpronounceable, is of little interest and becomes tiresome to read.

(Note by RRC: Most descendants of Nial of the Nine Hostages are positive for M222, a SNP downstream from L21. My son, Roger R. Connelly, Jr., & I are both L21 positive but M222 negative. Roger's spit was tested by 23andMe, I was tested by ScotlandsDNA. Roger picked up the tab for both tests. Thanks again son.)

Western VA miltiamen at the battle of Point Pleasant, 10 October 1774

THE POINT PLEASANT CLAIMS

Transcribed and with an Introduction
by
Katherine G. Bushman

In January 1775 a court of claims was held for Augusta County according to statute to settle the accounts of the militia "lately drawn into actual service and for making provision to pay the same."[1] The statute referred to the service seen by the militia of western Virginia on October 10, 1774 at Point Pleasant, now generally considered the first battle of the American Revolution.

The historian Lyman Chalkley has the record from Augusta County Order Book No. 16, pages 33-48, January 17-19, 1775, but gives only a few of the names which appear in the Court of Clajms entries for those three days.[2] The transcription which follows is of those entries as set out in Augusta County Minute Book, 1775, pages 118-129. The letters "OCd" stand for ordered certified and is one of the abbreviations used in the minute book account. Original spelling, capitalization, and punctuation have been retained.

A student of the history of the Valley of Virginia and western Virginia will recognize the various present-day counties of western Virginia and West Virginia which are represented. They are: Botetourt, Greenbrier, and Montgomery, all counties of southwest Virginia; and Augusta County proper, Rockbridge, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Pendleton, Bath, Hardy, and Randolph. It must be remembered also that in 1775 Augusta County still included the counties of Rockbridge, part of Bath, Rockingham, Pendleton, and Randolph.

With the time approaching rapidly for the bicentennial celebration of the American Revolution, we feel that publication of the complete list of Point Pleasant claimants as it appears in the minute book will prove of value--especially to those lovers of the history of our country and more especially of the great Valley of Virginia and the Alleghany mountain areas.

The western Virginia militiamen served in many engagements in the American Revolution--from Point Pleasant to Brandywine and Monmouth, from King's Mountain to Yorktown. This is only one of many tributes we plan to make to the hardy members of the militia of the Valley and western and southwestern Virginia who served in the War of Independence.

(Note by RRC: Arthur Connely & Martha Connely were first cousins. That the family birth dates were taken from a Bible published in Edinburgh is a clue that the family was of Scottish origin. But I'm sure that Arthur's parents, Arthur & Jean (_____) Connely, and Martha's parents, Thomas & Margaret (Walker) Connely, were in America by 1767, the Bible's publication date. Who bought the Bible? Does it still exist? How I would love to see it or learn more about it.
Margaret Jane 'Peggy' (Connely) Black is said to be of Scottish descent in the biography of John W. Black (to quickly find that entry in this document, search on the word Scotch).

Frank Fryauf Marks 50th Anniversary in Harness Trade Here

Half a century in business in Iowa City is the record of Mr. Frank Fryauf, Sr., who celebrated Tuesday his 50th anniversary in the harness and luggage trade.

Mr. Fryauf was 70 years old this fall. Born in Czechoslovakia, he was brought to this country when six months old and has lived in Iowa City ever since. He was 20 when he began serving his apprenticeship to John Cerney, owner of one of the six harness shops that were doing a profitable business in Iowa City in 1889!

Three years later Mr. Fryauf went into business with his brother, John. The two set up a harness and luggage shop at 4 South Dubuque street, where the Fryauf Leather Goods store is still located. Mr. Frank Fryauf became sole owner of the store in 1900 and has devoted himself to the business ever since, although he turned the actual proprietorship over to his son, Frank Fryauf, Jr., some 10 years ago.

"No, the harness business is nothing like it used to be," Mr. Fryauf admits. But at least he has no competition to worry about since he has seen the number of Iowa City harness shops dwindle from six to one.

In Appreciation

Dear Editor: Our family has thought of Sitka as a special place because of its location. From the snowcapped mountains of Verstovia and the Sisters to the east, over to the mighty Pacific Ocean to the west. From the forested ridges of Gavan Hill and Harbor Mountain to the north, down to the scenic islands that dot Sitka Sound to the south, we been proud to call Sitka our home.

We have also thought of Sitka as special place because of its kind and caring residents. This has been proven to our family time and time again this year, through the illness and recent death of our beloved husband, father, grandfather and great-grandfather, Morton Barger.

There are so many special people who have touched our lives, not to care for Mort through the period of his illness and eventual peaceful passing, but, to care for our family through your prayers, kindness and thoughtfulness.

From the bottom of our hearts, we would like to say thank you to Dr. Donald Funk, Dr. Rita Seger and Dr. Debra Pohlrnan for making Mort feel as comfortable as possible through his illness.

To the nursing staff, occupational and physical therapists and other staff members at Sitka Community Hospital. You people are to be commended for your professionalism. Sitka is very fortunate to have you!

To LeVon and all the aides from the Sitka Community Hospital Home-Health Care Program. We couldn't have done it without your help and guidance.

To Trish and Dirk White and staff of Harry Race and White's Pharmacies; the Double-O Senior Citizen's Program of Sitka; the Sitka Volunteer Fire Deparmtent EMS team; John Litten and Gary Smith of Prewitt Enterprises; Thad and Sandy Poulson and staff of the Daily Sitka Sentinel; the many family friends who prayed for Mort and came to visit him in the hospital and at home; and to those of you who offered your condolences. Your kind and thoughtful words have been so comforting to all of us.

We would like to say a special thank you to Father Dave Elsensohn of St. Peter's By-the-Sea Episcopal Church for conducting the memorial service and for putting into words loving feelings we hold in our for Mort.

Thank you, and may God bless all of you, this holiday season and in the coming new year.

Marriage announcement of Floyd Charles Conley & Ethel Claire Berry, ID = 113147

LOVERS AS CHILDREN THEY GROW UP AND WED

Ethel C. Berry Becomes the Bride of Floyd C. Conley, Who Has Been Constant Since the Two Were Babes Together.

So confident is 19-year-old Ethel C. Berry, 1309 South Seventh street, that she-found her affinity when she was a toddling babe in knee dresses, she refused all her life to receive the attentions of any other beau, and married him New Year's day at noon.

So confident is Floyd C. Conley, chief elevator man at the Elliott hotel, that Ethel is his affinity, an angel sent to him in human form, that he also has never "went" with any other girl since he first saw the brown-haired, black-eyed little girl, and he married pretty Ethel at the same time she married him. He is also 19 years of age.

So unusual is this condition of affairs in a city like Des Moines, that it constituted one of the chief topics of conversation of the day over the city, where the news had quickly spread. W. T. Berry, father of the bride, came here from La Crosse, Wis., to attend the wedding. There were twenty-five relatives assembled, many of them from long distances, to witness the union.

The ceremony was pronounced by the Rev. Guy Sarvis, cousin of the bride. A bounteous wedding dinner was served the bride and groom and guests at the conclusion of the ceremony.

In recognition of the happy romance the Elliott hotel company made the couple a present of $25 and raised the salary of the groom.

The wedding was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. W. A. Penquit, 2818 Capitol avenue. The couple will make their home with the groom's widowed mother, Mrs. Conley, at 1208 East Walnut street. It was Mrs. Conley who first took her little son by the hand and taught him to kiss the baby girl. She has mothered both the sweethearts ever since that day.

Navy Identifies Pilot Hurt in Beeville Crash

Caller-Times News Service

BEEVILLE - The pilot of an A-F9J Cougar jet that crashed about a mile south of Chase Field last night has been identified as Marine Corps 1st Lt. Russell A. Chambers, 25, of Kansas City, Mo.

He is listed in serious condition at the Chase Field Naval Hospital.

Chambers rode his single seater plane down rather than attempting to parachute.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Chambers of Kansas City, Kan. His wife, Betty, is attending college in Virginia.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, "Russell" should be Russel.

As far as I know, I share no Connely genes with Russel. One of Russel's great-grandfathers was John Strickland (1837 – 1908). Russel is included in this genealogy because I do share Connely genes with Elizabeth Jane (Adams) Strickland (1850 – 1912), the stepmother of the 1st 5 children of John Strickland (1837 – 1908) and the mother of his last 5 children.)

The time was 2 hours and 30 minutes. The best previous record for the same distance end weight was 3 hours and 45 minutes, claimed by James Cahill.

The weight carrier alternated the sack of sand on his head and shoulders. He kept up a lively pace and occasionally broke into a trot. Despite a strong headwind from tho south, Bellnoe finished strong and says he could have continued longer.

MEET PETE BELLNOE, EX-PUG, HUMAN FLY, NOW HASTENING END OF HIS 2D WAR

By FRED GAMBOLD

Pete Bellnoe is now engaged in his second war — this time as an engineman in the Merchant Marine.

Bellnoe is an interesting character. He will do almost anything you ask of him. Maybe you have a church steeple that needs fixing. Pete can do it — for at one time he was a “human fly.” About 10 years ago he gained quite a local reputation repainting Justice a top the Couthhouse.

But right now your requests will have to await the end of the war and with Pete in it it shouldn't be long.

Bellnoe was here renewing acquaintanceships. He really wanted to see John Peri, Record sports editor. Peri was out, but it didn't take Pete long to reveal in convincing language that he had a story to tell. In fact, several stories.

“GOOD JAP”

Three months in the Aleutians is a lot to talk about. Pete showed part of a Jap skull — “the only good thing about a Jap that 1 ever knew. And here's a piece of a Jap helmet," he offered. The thinness of the bit of metal made one wonder. Then came postcards, coins, stamps and such. All property of former Japs.

“The Jap" — meaning the skull — “will make swell watch charms. I can do that, too. The coins I will make into rings."

"You can do that too, I answered for him.

“Sure," he said naively.

ENTERTAINMENT

“You know, to entertain those boys up there, I used to get out daily and run up and down the rigging," Pete said, then when he saw the look of doubt "That's right, run up and down. Not just climb. I'm in pretty good shape. I've always been."

"How old are you?" he was asked.

"Those boys up there used to love to watch me."

"Yeah, but how old are you?

"Too bad. John Peri isn't here. He would liked to have seen me. I sure wanted to see him."

Pete attributes his good physical condition to daily walks and rowing. The feet, he maintains, are a key to the whole problem of staying young. "Keep your feet in good condition and you can stay in good condition" is one of his mottoes.

FUTURE BUSINESS

Before he left Pete revealed that he's going to start a business mens gymnasium and conditioning retreat in Stockton after the war. He intends to have three handball courts, as well as punching bags, pulleys, rowing machines and other weight- reducing paraphernalia. Pete eyed this writer for possibilities as one of his first recruits.

A student of chiropody, Bellnoe says he will "hang out his shingle" at the gym. "I can fix up a lot of feet Make you glad to walk again — walk with a carefree swing. Walk, don't use your car. Walk, that's one of the best things in the world.

GOOD DOGS

Pete's feet are in good shape. He told of carrying beer kegs around St. Louis not so long ago. An ordinary mortal might talk of carrying home a loaf of bread.

Told of a picnic, he immediately volunteered to carry a keg from downtown Stockton to Louis Park. He doesn't know it, but maybe he will at that Married, the father of two daughters — Pearl, 3, and Dulcle Jo, 6 — Bellnoe is strictly all out for the younger generation.

A former boxer, Pete belies the claim that professional sports do one harm. They didn't harm Pete; nothing could.

(Note by RRC: I suspect a typo, "Couthhouse" should be Courthouse.)

"The Jap"—meaning the skull—"will make swell watch charms. I can do that, too. The coins I will make into rings."

"You can do that too," I answered for him.

"Sure," he said naively.

"You know, to entertain those boys up there, I used to get out daily and run up and down the rigging," Pete said, then when he saw the look of doubt, "That's right, 'run' up and down. Not just climb. I'm in pretty good shape. I've always been."

"How old are you?" he was asked.

"Those boys up there used to love to watch me."

"Yeah, but how old are you?"

"Too bad, John Peri isn't here. He would liked to have seen me. I sure wanted to see him."

Pete attributes his good physical condition to daily walks and rowing. The feet, he maintains, are a key to the whole problem of staying young. "Keep your feet in good condition and you can stay in good condition" is one of his mottoes.

FUTURE BUSINESS

Before he left Pete revealed that he's going to start a business men's gymnasium and conditioning retreat in Stockton after the war. He intends to have three handball courts, as well as punching bags, pulleys, rowing machines and other weight-reducing paraphernalia. Pete eyed this writer for possibilities as one of his first recruits.

A student of chiropody, Bellnoe says he will "hang out his shingle" at the gym. "I can fix up a lot of feet. Make you glad to walk again—walk with a carefree swing. Walk, don't use your car. Walk, that's one of the best things in the world."

GOOD DOGS

Pete's feet are in good shape. He told of carrying beer kegs around St. Louis not so long ago. An ordinary mortal might talk of carrying home a loaf of bread.

Told of a picnic, he immediately volunteered to carry a keg from downtown Stockton to Louis Park. He doesn't know it, but maybe he will at that.

Married, the father of two daughters—Pearl, 3, and Dulcie Jo, 6—Bellnoe is strictly all out for the younger generation.

A former boxer, Pete belies the claim that professional sports do one harm. They didn't harm Pete, nothing could.

Ex-Follower Tries to Change Adherents of 'Faith Healing'

FAY — The wind was blowing and the darkening sky threatened more rain as Keith Sutton walked slowly through the uncut grass and wild-flowers that dot the tiny hillside cemetery near Fay.

Sutton stopped and pointed to a small tombstone. Written on it was the name of a small boy, five days old when he died in 1975.

"There's a child who could have survived," Sutton said, shaking his head, the frown on his face reflecting the dark mood of the weather.

Not far away was the grave of another young boy, this one 10 years old when he died after being kicked in the stomach by a horse. Sutton remembers this death. He was there when the boy was kicked, and he remembers how the young boy suffered many days without medical treatment before finally dying.

A 7-year-old girl is buried nearby. She drank lye-water her mother used for washing and "literally starved to death because she couldn't swallow," Sutton said.

Everywhere in this small cemetery are the graves of infants and old men. So many of the women buried here died in childbirth.

These women and children are the people Sutton calls "the innocent victims." They are the victims, he says, of the teachings of The Church of the First Born that prohibit medical care.

Sutton's own headstone is in this cemetery. Already buried beneath it is his wife, Carolee, who died at 43 in March.

She, too, is "an innocent victim."

Sutton says it was her death that prompted him to tell about his personal ordeals caused by what he describes as "false teachings" of the church, particularly the congregation at Fay, west of Watonga, to which he once belonged.

Carolee Porter Sutton was 11 years old when infection began to eat away the bone of her left hip where an injury had left a bruise.

Neighbors remember hearing young Carolee screaming in pain at night as her hip socket slowly disintegrated, but her parents, devout members of The Church of the First Born, refused to call a doctor.

Eventually her condition stabilized and she was able to walk with crutches until she adjusted to having a left leg three inches shorter than the right and a stiff hip joint.

Thee infection flared up several times during Mrs. Sutton's life, the last time in March. This time, although the Suttons had long accepted medical treatment, it was too late, her husband said.

She died at the Thomas Hospital.

Keith Sutton didn't know his wife 32 years ago when the infection, later diagnosed as osteomylitis, began its fatal work although they lived in the same small community.

But he knows that he, too, refused medical treatment at that age, as did his parents.

He was reared, as his wife-to-be was, believing literally the- passage in James 5 that states: "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."

Sutton says he began to change his mind about the meaning of that passage at 18 when stricken with acute appendicitis. He drove himself to a hospital where emergency treatment saved his life.

Already he was beginning to question the scripture quoted by church leaders as a prohibition against medical care.

"It is the sickness of the soul, not of the flesh, the Bible is talking about." Sutton said. "People are dying because of the false teaching that the Scripture means the prayer of the faithful alone will cure the sick."

Sutton's belief in the traditional teachings of the 70-member congregation at Fay weakened again several years later after his marriage and while his wife was expecting their second child.

At one of the congregation's nightly "purgings," Sutton said a self-proclaimed prophet stood, pointed to Sutton's father and accused him of stealing.

The prophesy was backed by other "prophets" of the church, and Sutton's father was faced with the decision of admitting the theft and asking for forgiveness in order to remain in the congregation, or to deny the charge and be "separated" from the church until he repented. the church until he repented.

Sutton's father denied the accusation. He left the congregation and his wife and son followed. All three became outcasts.

Members of the church physically "separated" Carolee from Keith for several months until she decided to leave her mother's home and return to him.

Back at the small Fay cemetery, Sutton pointed to the grave of a man who was 22 when he died. Sutton said the man had been "separated" from the church and therefore (according to church teachings) from the love of God for some long-forgotten transgression.

Sutton said the young man's mother was forbidden by other church members from caring for him while he was ill or face the same "separation."

An old stone nearby marks the grave of Sutton's uncle. He was "separated" for chewing tobacco.

All around him as he turns and walks past another row of gravestones are more "innocent victims."

At one edge of the cemetery is a cluster of graves where an entire family is buried. Three of the stones mark the graves of infants. The date on one matches the date on the mother’s. The father lived to be an old man.

Sutton and his wife, before she died, continued to be members of the Church of the First Born, but in a new congregation in Watonga, one that doesn't teach separation and faith healing.

There are thousands of other members of the Church of the First Born like Sutton who gladly accept medical care. But there are more, he says, who refuse it and depend on prayer alone to cure their sicknesses.

"I'm going to try to change their minds," Sutton said. "I know it will be hard and probably won't come in my lifetime, but I'm going to try."

“A Star in Each Flag”, published in 2019, written by Amy Disparte, ID = 12313421

(OCR of a book review by Richard Weigel; this appeared in The Park City Daily News, Bowling Green, KY, Sunday, 15 March 2020, page C6.)

“A Star in Each Flag: The Civil War and Reconstruction in Bowling Green” by Amy Disparte. Louisville: Butler Books, 2019. 338 pages, $24.95 (paperback).

Local author Amy Disparte explains in her introduction that Riverview at Hobson Grove is the model for the main setting, which she calls Eagle Hill, in her novel about a Bowling Green family during the Civil War and Reconstruction. She also relates that the patriarch in her story, Granville Milton Connely, was her great-great-grandfather, a working-class farmer from Gallatin County in northern Kentucky.

Some of the incidents she includes in her novel are based on his experiences, and others are connected with the life of Riverview’s owner, Atwood Hobson. The main character in the novel is Zerilda Connely, daughter of Granville, who is forced to assume responsibility for Eagle Hill when her three brothers leave to fight in the Civil War and her father is imprisoned for concealing his injured and sick Confederate son when Union forces came after him. The Hobson family also raised thoroughbred horses for racing, something which will later become a major interest for Zerilda.

The Louisville and Nashville Railroad made Bowling Green a transportation center and the city was occupied by Confederate troops first in 1861 and early 1862, and then by Union soldiers for the rest of the war. “A Star in Each Flag” explores the impact of the war on the Connely family and on the slave family and other workers on their plantation.

Although Granville is proUnion just as with so many families in Kentucky, his sons split over their choice of sides to take and one joins the Confederate army and the other two enlist with the Union. The author is particularly interested in the close relationship between Zerilda and Milly, daughter of the slave couple on the plantation. Zerilda makes it very clear that she despises slavery and she advocates freeing the slaves and ultimately providing them with a house and land that they will own as freedmen. The occupation of Bowling Green by the Confederates and then by the Union forces makes life very difficult for the Connely family because produce and livestock are confiscated, their fencing is chopped up for firewood and their house is frequently violated by soldiers.

In addition, other town citizens criticize what they see as the Connely family’s coddling of its slaves and take violent and destructive actions to protest it. The end of the war in 1865 and even the passage of the 13th Amendment to the Constitution outlawing slavery did not change the situation very much or eliminate the vulnerability of the Connely family or its slave/freedmen workers on the plantation. Local Regulators would continue the violence and threats against them during Reconstruction despite the presence of the Freedmen’s Bureau in Bowling Green.

Zerilda and Milly’s love interests are also central to the story. The author uses letters to and from the soldiers in camp as an effective method to convey from one side to the other what events are shaping their individual lives. When the Confederates are occupying Bowling Green, letters from the Union troops are not delivered. Likewise, Zerilda's letters have to be saved for future delivery. I have often wondered if any envelopes still exist with Confederate stamps and a Bowling Green postmark. I once asked my colleague Lowell Harrison if he had ever seen any in his research for "The Civil War in Kentucky" and he assured me that he had not.

Early in the war, Zerilda takes the train to Smiths Grove to organize women there to write letters to petition Kentucky Gov. Beriah Magoffin to keep the commonwealth neutral. Zerilda and Milly both volunteer to help wounded and sick soldiers recuperate in the hospital set up in the Presbyterian Church. The two of them become skilled nurses who could attest to the devastating impact of a host of diseases and a variety of wounds that resulted in a heavy death toll from the soldier population. It is clear that many people in Bowling Green wanted to avoid war, but the war still changed their lives dramatically as they became the pawns of other players. The author includes references to military activities at regional sites including Perryville, Nashville and Camp Nelson, as well as along the Mississippi.

The title of the novel, "A Star in Each Flag," of course refers to the presence of a star representing Kentucky on both the American and Confederate flags and highlights the divergence of views within the commonwealth. The book follows the family chronologically through the war and into the Reconstruction period. The author does an excellent job of documenting the impact of the Civil War on people living in Kentucky. She also explores the position of women within society during the 19th century and attitudes toward racial differences in this slave state. Although the main family takes a Unionist position during the war, Confederates are also treated fairly. Both Granville and Zerilda have relatively positive interchanges with Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner when his troops are occupying Bowling Green.

Although the author explains in her notes that she has chosen modern language in some instances to avoid period terminology that might be offensive today, there are some modern expressions that jar the reader out of the 19th century setting and these do not appear to be used to replace offensive expressions. In addition, there are several typographical errors that should have been eliminated by more careful editing, but these are only minor points. Overall, I recommend "A Star in Each Flag" as a good read for anyone interested in life on the home front during the Civil War and Reconstruction and especially for those who would enjoy reading about the war's impact on family life in Bowling Green. Many of the characters are caring individuals to whom the reader can relate and the geographical references should be familiar. If you read "A Star in Each Flag," you will become attached to several characters as they experience the ups and mostly downs of wartime and you just may feel the need to take another trip to Hobson House/Eagle Hill to see where these people lived. –

Wedding of Harold Brown Connely & Thomas A. Weldon, ID = 123311

MRS. THOMAS A. WELDON.

Miss Harold Brown Connelly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spencer Connely of Warsaw, became the bride of Mr. Thomas A Weldon, son of Mrs. Laura Weldon of Aurora, Ind., at a ceremony performed at St. Joseph Church rectory last Saturday by the Rev. George Stier of Crescent Springs, formerly of Warsaw.

A reception at "Seven Pines," home of the parents of the bride, took place immediately following the ceremony.

Nylon marquisette over taffeta was fashioned into a becoming bridal gown for the bride. Of the long torso mode, it featured a sweetheart neckline, long pointed sleeves and a full skirt ending in a generous train.

Pearls and rhinestones effectively adorned the bodice. A tiara of tiny hearts studded with seed pearls formed a becoming headpiece from which hung a veil of imported illusion. A single strand of pearls encircled her neck. She carried a white orchid surrounded by white glamillas and stephanotis.

The bride's only sister, Mrs. Alexander D. Hall of Lexington, was her only attendant. She was gowned in marquisette of a raspberry ice shade styled along similar lines as the dress worn by the bride. A large picture hat of matching color completed her outfit. She carried glamillias of the same color as her dress.

Mr. Bernard Weldon of Aurora, Ind., was best man for his brother.

Mrs. Connely selected a blue crepe dress with a corsage of yellow roses for her daughter's betrothal. Mrs. Weldon was clad in plum crepe with a shoulder cluster of sweetheart roses.

The bride is a graduate of Gulf Park College, Gulfport, Miss., and received her A. B. degree at Northwestern University. Her master degree was obtained at the University of Kentucky.

After receiving his B. S. degree at Purdue University, Mr. Weldon received his master degree at Kansas State College at Manhattan, Kans. He served as a Major In the U. S. Army Airborne Field Artillery during World War II, and before returning home studied at the Sorbonne, Paris, France, and served as instructor at the Institute Agronomique at Versailles, France.

After his return to this country he enrolled for study at the University of Cincinnati and at the University of Indiana. He will enter Loyola Medical School in Chicago this fall.

Following a brief wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon will reside in Chicago.

Obituary of William H. Tiller - mentions Zerelda (Connely) Tiller, ID = 124

A Good Man Gone.

Elder William H. Tiller was pastor of the Christian church in Richmond in the early 80's. He was a truly good man, and the church prospered under his care. Everybody liked Mr. Tiller, and many will be pained to hear of his death. The Warsaw Independent, his home paper, under date of April 4th, says:

It is with great sadness that we chronicle the death of one of Gallatin county's best citizens, Elder Wm. H. Tiller, who died very suddenly at his home near Sparta, Tuesday evening. He had been visiting his sister-in-law Mrs. Mary Garvey at Erlanger, Kenton county, whose husband, J. P. Garvey, died last week, and returned home Tuesday morning, being met at Sparta by his wife. Rev. Tiller took sick at Walton, and had a fit of vomiting, He was very weak when he reached Sparta and had to rest before going home. After driving home in buggy he was compelled to go to bed and he had convulsions. He began to grow weaker, and his heart began to fail. Dr. Will bond, of Sparta, was called, but by the time he reached the bedside Rev. Tiller was beyond human aid. He retained consciousness up to nearly the time of his death, passing peacefully away to the better land about six o'clock. Rev. Tiller was one of the best men that ever lived. Of high christian character, his deeds of kindness were constant reminders of the goodness of the man; a kind word for everybody, and a sympathetic heart for all in affliction. Rev. Tiller was born in Warsaw, Ky., Dec. 17th, 1834, and was the son of Elder Benj. F. Tiller, deceased, one of the founders of the Christian church at this place, who married the mother of Rev. W. H. Tiller in Virginia, and emigrated to this place. Of the entire family but one child remains, Mrs. Alice Tiller Willis, of Ghent, a daughter of Eld. B. F. Tiller and his second wife Zerelda Connely Tiller. Rev. W. H. Tiller was married to Miss Sallie Hamilton, Sept 16th, 1861, who survives him. He was educated in Bethany College, West Virginia. He attended the college for three years but left at the beginning of the war on account of difficulties between Northern and Southern students. He afterwards continued his studies there and graduated. He was ordained to the ministry at the Warsaw Christian church in 1860, and since had charge of churches at Warsaw, Vincennes, Ind., Bedford, Ind., Charlestown, Ind., Augusta, Ky., Richmond, Ky., Sparta, Ky., Illinois and Missouri. He taught a private school in Warsaw, in 1860 61. In every walk of life he was the kind christian gentleman, loved and esteemed by everybody, and the suddeness of his demise brings sorrow to many hearts. The funeral took place Thursday from the Warsaw Christian church, Rev. S. M. Bernard preaching a very appropriate and touching sermon over the remains, taking the same text as was used at the funeral of the father of the deceased. II Samuel 3-38: "Know ye not that a prince and a great man is this day fallen." There were quite a number of beautiful floral tributes composed of lilies and Marechal Neil roses.

A Good Man Gone.

Elder William H. Tiller was pastor of the Christian church in Richmond in the early 80's. He was a truly good man, and the church prospered under his care. Everybody liked Mr. Tiller, and many will be pained to hear of his death. The Warsaw Independent, his home paper, under date of April 8th, says:

It is with great sadness that we chronicle the death of one of Gallatin county's best citizens, Elder Wm. H. Tiller, who died very suddenly at his home near Sparta, Tuesday evening. He had been visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Garvey, at Erlanger, Kenton county, whose husband, J. P. Garvey, died last week, and returned home Tuesday morning being met at Sparta by his wife. Rev. Tiller took sick at Walton, and had a fit of vomiting. He was very weak when he reached Sparta and had to rest before going home. After driving home in his buggy he was compelled to go to bed and he had convulsions. He began to grow weaker and his heart began to fail. Dr. Will Bond, of Sparta, was called, but by the time he reached the bedside Rev. Tiller was beyond human aid. He retained consciousness up to nearly the time of his death, passing peacefully away to the better land about six o'clock Rev. Tiller was one of the best men that ever lived. Of high christian character, his deeds of kindness were constant reminders of the goodness of the man; a kind word for everybody, and a sympathetic heart for all in affliction. Rev. Tiller was born in Warsaw, Ky., Dec. 17th 1836, and was the son of Elder Benj. F. Tiller, deceased, one of the founders of the Christian church at this place who married the mother of Rev. W. H. Tiller in Virginia, and emigrated to this place. Of the entire family but one child remains Mrs. Alice Tiller Willis, of Ghent, a daughter of Eld. B. F. Tiller and his second wife Zevella Connely Tiller. Rev. W. H. Tiller was married to Miss Sallie Hamilton, Sept. 16th, 1861, who survives him. He was educated in Bethany College, West Virginia. He attended the college for three years but left at the beginning of the war on account of difficulties between Northern and Southern students. He afterwards continued his studies there and graduated. He was ordained to the ministry at the Warsaw Christian church in 1860, and since had charge of churches at Warsaw, Vincennes, Ind., Bedford, Ind., Charlestown, Ind. WARREN TOWNSHIP.

Warren township... lies immediately south of Greencastle township, and is bounded on the east by Jefferson, on the south by Cloverdale, and on the west by Washington... It is drained by Deer creek, together with its tributaries, which traverse the township from northeast to southwest...

The early settlers of the township, who are deceased, were... Alexander Conley, Arthur Conley, Gilmore Conley...

Putnamville is the only postoffice town in the township...

Putnamville is situated on the National road, and was laid out by James Townsend in 1830...

The first grist mill was erected on Deer creek one half mile southeast of Putnamville, October 16, 1826, by Alexander Conley. Another was built on the same creek, one half mile southwest of the town, in 1834, by Samuel Steele and Dr. D. W. Layman.

During the building of the National road the township improved rapidly and business was quite brisk. In an early day Putnamville also rivaled Greencastle for the location of the county seat, and a little later made a very creditable effort to secure the location of Asbury University. To secure this end, her citizens agreed to give the university a donation of twenty five thousand dollars.

The Presbyterian church was organized at this place November 7, 1830... The following members constituted the first organization: ... Alexander Conley, Jane Conley... not one of whom remains among the living...

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, "Conley" should be Connely.)

The celebration of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Connelly on the West Side, January 15th, will be an event of more than ordinary interest, the venerable couple, whose whole life almost has been spent in Tippecanoe county, being beloved and esteemed on all sides. Robert Connelly is one of the counties honored citizen's, and his wife, "Aunt Kate," as she is familiarly known, being a universal favorite.

A Royal Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Connelly will be married fifty years on the 15th of January, and as the date falls on Sunday, they have arranged to have all their friends and neighbors call on them from 2 to 6 o'clock. There will be no cards or invitations, and all will be welcome.

I would like to see all the ladies and gentlemen who went to school to John E. Hale in 1842, who are now living, as that was the last school teacher who was my instructor. All come and renew old acquaintances. Home on Salisbury street, West Lafayette.

The Little Brown Church in the Vale, Nashua, IA.

(Extracted from the Church's website, www.littlebrownchurch.org.)

LOCATION:

We are just three miles from highway 27/218, the "Avenue of the Saints" connecting St. Louis with Minneapolis/St. Paul. We are only ten miles from Highway 63 which goes from Waterloo, Iowa to Rochester, Minnesota with new city bypass routes. Both of these are 4 lane highways.

WHO WE ARE:

The Little Brown Church was founded in 1855 as a frontier Congregational Church and was made famous by William Pitt's song "The Church in the Wildwood." We currently have a membership of 60+ people and host several hundred weddings each year. Our Annual Reunion Celebration in August draws over 500 people to renew their marriage commitment to each other. Over 72,300 weddings have been held at the church. Our bell tower still holds the 1860 bell, rung by almost everyone who enters. With recent renovation, we are completely handicap accessible and a 15+ acre park is maintained by the church. We have picnic tables, a shelter and a scenic setting with a rustic wooden church and an active congregation.

HISTORY:

The first settlers came to the Bradford area in 1848 and with an abundant water supply and virgin timber, the town grew. By 1855 the first members of the Puritan-Congregational Church had begun holding meetings. By 1856, Bradford had 500 residents and was the first town in this part of Iowa.

A young music teacher named William Pitts was traveling by stagecoach from Wisconsin to Iowa to visit his future wife. While waiting for the stagecoach horses to be changed, he walked down Cedar Street and saw the empty lot where the church now stands. Being a romantic young man, the thought came to him of what a charming setting the spot would make for a church. Returning home, he wrote the poem “Church in the Wildwood,” and later set it to music. He put it away in a drawer and forgot it.

Meanwhile, church members grew tired of meeting in places such as the lawyer’s office, abandoned stores and parishioners’ homes. They began making plans to build a church. A family in the parish gave them the property. When Rev. Nutting arrived, talk of building became serious. Limestone was quarried and by 1860 the foundation was laid. The Civil War slowed the work, but when one family gave trees and another donated the sawing of the lumber, the work never really ceased. By 1862 the building was enclosed and not a penny had been spent. When it came time to paint the building, the cheapest paint to be found was Ohio Mineral Paint, which would protect the wood but which was unhappily brown. With help from friends in the east, the building was finished, complete with bell, in 1864.

Mr. Pitts had married and was living in Wisconsin. In 1862 the couple moved to Fredericksburg to be near her elderly parents and Mr. Pitts was hired to teach singing class at the Bradford Academy. Imagine his surprise when he saw a little brown church nestled in the very trees where he had stood some years before. He went home and found the song and taught it to his class who sang it at the dedication service of the church. Pitts had written a song for a church that wasn't there. The congregation had painted their little church brown without ever hearing of the song.

History was hard on the Little Brown Church. The railroad by-passed the town and a flour mill moved to New Hampton to be on a bigger river. The railroad and other industry moved to Nashua. The town, once the county seat, slowly disappeared. In 1888, the church building was closed, although the congregation continued to hold Sunday School every week at the school. Occasional services were held at the building. In the early 1900's a Society For The Preservation of The Little Brown Church was started and by 1914, services were again held, as they are now.

History took another turn when the Weatherwax Quartet traveled throughout Canada and the United States between 1910 and 1921. Their theme song was "The Church in the Wildwood" and they talked about the little church. After World War I, highways were improved and cars brought many visitors. When a School superintendent and a merchants' daughter were married at the church, a new tradition was started. Over 40,000 visitors come to the Little Brown Church each year, and over 400 weddings are performed annually. In June of 2005, the 72,000 wedding was held at the church. The congregation is alive and well with an active Sunday School, youth groups, choirs, ladies' fellowship, Bible study, a prayer chain group, and weekly services at 10:30 on Sunday. They remain, as they were founded, a Congregational Church. The song continues to be sung in a little church that is painted brown and sits in the wildwood.

In 1998 the bell tower was completely restored. In 2000 with help from the State Historical Society of Iowa Site Preservation Grant Program, a new foundation was placed under the church. This project has enabled the church to be completely handicap accessible. Air conditioning has been added for the first time.

Worship services are held every Sunday at 10:30 a.m. starting with a sing a long at 10:15 a.m. Everyone is welcome to join us. For more information on the church, call 641-435-2027.

OPENING SOUTH FEDERAL PAVING TO NINTEENTH STREET

TRAFFIC ON NEW SURFACING WILL START TUESDAY

Remainder of Project Will Be Completed in Short Time.

A major part of the South Federal avenue repaving project, from Tenth to Nineteenth street, will be open for travel Tuesday morning, it was announced by F. K. Preston, assistant district engineer of the highway commission in charge of construction.

This will make it possible for traffic to reach the south Clear Lake road without the detour, which the past several weeks has been east to Carolina avenue.

Is 10 Feet Wider.

The new paving which is 40 feet wide, is 10 feet wider than the hard-surfacing that was dug up. Seven feet have been added on the west side, bringing the pavement almost up to the line of poles adjacent the streetcar tracks, and three feet on the east side. This helps considerably in straightening the swing immediately south of the Milwaukee viaduct.

The remainder of the pavement operations, from Nineteenth to Twenty-third street, is not expected to consume much time, Mr. Preston stated. The grading has been completed and the pouring of concrete was expected to get under way Monday. This part of the paving will be 34 feet wide.

Crossing Improved.

One of the big improvements on the new paving south of Nineteenth street will be at the crossing over the Chicago North Western railroad, on the south edge of Twenty-second street. The grade on the north side of the railroad has been raised, which will add to the comfort of driving when traffic gets to passing over it.

In this issue of the Globe-Gazette, a number of firms located on the new paving, and contractors who worked on the job are making special announcements with regard to the opening of the stretch of paving. These include: The Fireside Fuel company, the H. B. Farrer System, Lew and Ray Super Service, Corner Standard Service Station, Kemble's Greenhouse, Shell Service station, Henkel Construction company, Carl T. Holvick, general contractor, Star Oil company and Oasis, Northwestern States Portland Cement company. A feature of the opening will be a pavement dance Monday night, just opposite the fairgrounds.

Connelly Brothers,
Both Overseas Vets,
at Home in Mason City

Pvt. Ralph R. Connelly arrived home this week with an honorable discharge given at Fort Sheridan, Ill., on Oct. 1. His brother, Lt. Roy Connelly, was called here from Fort Benning, Ga., because of the illness of their mother, Mrs. Anna Connelly, 432 24th S. W., and the 2 brothers are seeing each other for the first time in 2 years.

Pvt. Connelly spent the past 9 months in Italy, his last assignment being with the 530th field artillery battalion. He holds 1 battle star in his Mediterranean theater ribbon and was awarded the good conduct medal. He is at home with his wife and 2 sons at 542 15th S. E.

Lt. Connelly, who was in Mason City a short time ago after returning from the ETO, has been at Fort Benning awaiting his discharge from the service.

The concession at the show will be operated by the Wemarco class of Wesley Methodist church with proceeds to go to scout troop 12's fund to send 2 boys to the National Jamboree at Valley Forge. The boys are Dick Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Peterson, 315 13th S. E., and Roger Connelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Connelly, 542 15th S. E. Glen Wilson is scoutmaster.

(Note by RRC: I had a wonderful time, especially at our destination, Valley Forge; got to see a lot of the country east of the Mississippi for the first time; learned a few more of life's lessons from folks other than my parents.

A typo - “Mr. and Mrs. Roger Connelly” should be Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Connelly.)

Genetic genealogy; Y - DNA analysis for my son, Roger, Jr., ID = 132525212

My son was genotyped by 23andMe in 2012; his paternal haplogroup is R1b1b2a1a2f*

My understanding of this is that he is R1b1b2a1a2f (no *) but not R1b1b2a1a2f1 or R1b1b2a1a2f2. He is positive for the L21 SNP on the Y chromosome, so that is why he is R1b1b2a1a2f. The chip in use by 23andMe in 2012 was v3 which tested for only 2 subclades of R1b1b2a1a2f, namely for the M37 SNP and for the M222 SNP. He was not positive for the M37 SNP so he is not R1b1b2a1a2f1 and he was not positive for the M222 SNP so he is not R1b1b2a1a2f2.

Based on my reading of the published Irish genealogies, most folks with the Connelly surname descend from Niall of the Nine Hostages. If Roger descended from Niall then he would probably be positive for the M222 SNP and be in the R1b1b2a1a2f2 haplogroup - but he wasn't positive for that SNP.

Some folks with the O'Connolly (Connolly) surname descend from Colla da Chrich (of the Three Collas who lived in Ireland in the 4th century AD). Called clan Colla, most have the DF21 SNP - a SNP downstream of L21 - and this is not matched in the DNA of the descendants of Niall of the Nine Hostages. Perhaps our Connelly ancestors come out of clan Colla. The v3 chip at 23andMe didn't test for this DF21 SNP.

If you are reading this and plan to get yourself genotyped - and I encourage you to do so - I would like to suggest that you check up front to see if the chip that will be used in the analysis of your DNA contains a call for the DF21 SNP and other SNPs downstream from L21. I'll let you know if I learn what 23andMe plans for its v4 chip. Also, the upfront cost of a kit at 23andMe recently increased to $299 - I'll let you know if I hear on any special pricing.

Dec. 2017 update:

My son’s Y chromosome DNA was tested for short tandem repeats (STRs) by FTDNA in late Nov. or early Dec. 2017 - results reported to him on 19 Dec. - he was null at DYS425 and 9 at DYS511; that is more evidence that we descend from clan Colla!

Dec. 2019 update:

As his Christmas present to me, Roger Jr. upgraded to the Big Y DNA test at FTDNA. He was found to have all of the STRs and SNPs that define a Colla descendant.

RRC Jr.’s Big Y results as of Jan. 2020 also show that his haplogroup is R-FT115576.

In the Clan Colla 425 Null Project he and Robert E. Connely IV are both categorized as R-Z3000>Z3006>Z3008>S953>BY2869>Y101995>Y95947>FT115576 Connolly 442=11

Roger R. Connelly Jr., ID = 132525212, and Robert E. Connely IV, ID = 166b7211, are 6th cousins, once removed based on my research. They have a genetic distance of 6 based on a comparison of their first 111 markers at FTDNA. Their patrilineal most recent common ancestor is Thomas Connely, ID =1; Roger Jr. descends from Thomas through his 3rd child, Arthur Connely, ID = 13; Robert IV descends from Thomas through his 6th child, Alexander Connely, ID = 16. Thomas had 2 other sons - Thomas Connely, ID = 12 and Robert Connely, ID = 19. I hope I live long enough to see the results of DNA tests for many other descendants of Thomas Connely, ID = 1, especially Y-DNA tests of men who carry the Connely surname. I want to thank Roger Jr. and Robert IV for leading our family into the exciting field of genetic genealogy and for making me an extremely happy old man.

Below I'll post extracts from a few of the more interesting articles I have found online. These are not always easy to read - this is a young field and the terminology is in a state of flux.

(Extraction by RRC from info about the naming of haplogroups found online at 23andMe.com)

The naming of haplogroups is somewhat arbitrary. There are, however, a few rules. Most haplogroup names start with a capital letter (or two). Additional numbers and lower-case letters indicate haplogroups that are subgroups of the major haplogroup.

All lineages of a subgroup share one or more mutations. Sometimes there are a few lineages that don't fit into any subgroup of a haplogroup. Since there isn't a mutation that links these lineages, they don't get their own subgroup. Instead, these lineages are given the main haplogroup label plus a star (*) to indicate that they are part of the main haplogroup but don't fit into any of the known subgroups.

"Star" lineages sometimes arise when a population grows rapidly. If your paternal haplogroup assignment ends with a *, your paternal lineage may have participated in such a population expansion. The age of the haplogroup indicates, roughly, when that rapid population growth happened.

Sometimes research leads to the discovery of mutations that link several of the "star" lineages. When that happens the lineages get a new name—and lose their "star" designation.

Haplogroup R1

R1 is the dominant in Europe today, accounting for well over half of all men. After being confined to the continent's southern fringes during the Ice Age, it expanded rapidly in the wake of the receding glaciers about 12,000 years ago. Various branches of R1 also trace the many migrations that have shaped Europe since then, from the arrival of farmers between about 10,000 and 7,000 years ago to the movements of ethnic groups such as the Anglo-Saxons and Vikings.

Haplogroup R1b

R1b was confined during the Ice Age to pockets of territory in Mediterranean Europe. The largest was in the Iberian peninsula and southern France, where men bearing the haplogroup created the famous cave paintings at Lascaux and Altamira. They also hunted mammoth, bison and other large game in a climate that was more like present-day Siberia's than the mild conditions prevailing in southern Europe today.
Some men bearing R1b Y-chromosomes also seem to have spent the Ice Age in the Balkans and Anatolia, where the haplogroup is still present today.
After the Ice Age, the haplogroup expanded rapidly in the wake of the retreating glaciers. Today R1b is by far the most common haplogroup in the western half of the continent.

Haplogroup R1b1b2

R1b1b2 is the most common in western Europe, where it is found in more than 50% of men. Ancient representatives of the haplogroup were among the first people to repopulate the western part of Europe after the Ice Age ended about 12,000 years ago. In the process the haplogroup differentiated into even more distinct groups that can trace the details of the post-Ice Age migrations.

(Extraction by RRC from the FTDNA "R - L21 Plus Project" at familytreedna.com)

L21 is a Single Nucleotide Polymorphism that characterizes a major R1 haplogroup. There are a number of subclades downstream of L21. An "SNP" - Single Nucleotide Polymorphism - represents a change at a single nucleotide (A=adenine, C=cytosine, G=guanine, T=thymine) on the y chromosome. In the case of L21, that change occurred at the position known as rs11799226, where we have a change to "G" from the "C" most everyone else has. The ancestry of all L21+ men, in terms of SNPs, runs like this:

M207+ . . M173+ . . M343+ . . P25+ . . P297+ . . M269+ . . L23+ . . L150+ . . L51+ . . L11+ . . P312+ . . L21+

L21 at FTDNA & aka S145 at Ethnoancestry: This SNP has been widely tested since it was noted to be derived (+) in the 23andMe databases for several men who are also derived (+) for rs34276300, aka P312 by FTDNA & aka S116 by Ethnoancestry. In FTDNA's phylogenetic tree it is labeled R1b1b2a1b5 & in the ISOGG tree it is labeled R1b1b2a1a2f.

R1b1b2a1a2f2

This subclade within R-L21 is defined by the presence of the marker M222. It is particularly associated with male lines which are Irish or Scottish, but especially northern Irish. In this case, the relatively high frequency of this specific subclade among the population of certain counties in northwestern Ireland may be due to positive social selection, as it is suggested to have been the Y-chromosome haplogroup of the Uí Néill dynastic kindred of ancient Ireland.[30] However it is not restricted to the Uí Néill as it is also associated with the closely related Connachta dynasties, called the Uí Briúin and Uí Fiachrach.[51] M222 is also found as a substantial proportion of the population of Scotland which may indicate substantial settlement from northern Ireland or at least links to it.[30][52] Those areas settled by large numbers of Irish and Scottish emigrants such as North America have a substantial percentage of M222.[30]

(Extaction by RRC from the "Moffat DNA Project" at familytreedna.com)

Irish 1 - Members of this cluster are descendants of the semi-mythical Irish King, Niall of the Nine Hostages or one of his male relatives. Niall is thought to have lived in the late 4th and early 5th centuries. His prolific descendants ruled Ulster and Leinster between the 6th and 10th centuries A.D. This cluster shares a common ancestor with the Irish 2 cluster between 4,500 and 1,500 years ago. Members of this cluster share a single nucleotide polymorphism (SNP) marker at M222. The subclade is formally known as R1b1b2a1a2f2 and is especially associated with Scottish and Irish populations. It is likely to have entered Scotland through the Dalriadic migrations of the 6th to 8th Centuries A.D. (see Irish 2 below). Both clusters share the L21 SNP mutation that defines their common subclade.

Irish 2 – A member of this cluster completed extensive SNP testing of his haplotype in late 2009 confirming that members of this cluster have the R-L21 mutation that characterises haplogroup R1b1b2a1a2f. Members of this cluster share a common ancestor with the Ui Neill and Dalcassian Royal Families between 1,500 and 4,500 years ago in northwest Ireland, where these haplotypes are most prevalent. By ancient times, these Irish tribes had become a distinctly Celtic cluster of Iron Age farmers. They were known by Ptolemy, in the 2nd Century A.D. as the Voluntii. Modern scholars call them the Ulaid. By the 5th Century A.D., they had merged with surrounding tribes into a cluster called the Scotti, the people who gave their name to the modern nation of Scotland. Between the 6th and 8th Centuries A.D., this tribe established a kingdom on the west coast of Scotland called Dalriada. They eventually merged with the Picts to form the Kingdom of Alba, the precursor to medieval Scotland. It is very likely that members of this cluster came to Scotland between 500 and 700 A.D. from the region of Ulster, Ireland.

DNA of the Three Collas

(Exracted from "DNA of the Three Collas" by Peter Biggins, with Josiah McGuire, Patrick McMahon, and Thomas Roderick, online.)

The Three Collas lived in Ireland in the 4th century A.D. Their descendants have been kings, lords, chiefs, and saints. Their history survived through oral tradition and eventually written histories. Recent Y-chromosome DNA tests of men with surnames mentioned in these histories confirm their common ancestry. The names include Biggins/Beggan, Boylan, Calkins/Colcan, Carroll, Connolly, Devine, Duffy, Hart, Higgins, Hughes, Kelly, MacDougall, McAuley, McClain, McDonald, McGinnis, McGuire, McKenna, McMahon, Neal, Newell, Paden, Pate, Roberts, Roderick, etc. Most Irish names are found in multiple septs, so not all people with these names are descendants of the Three Collas. And, some names of people with Clan Colla DNA are not included in the Clan Colla histories due to adoption and other reasons.

Genetics

The Clan Colla Null 425 Project stems from the discovery that in haplogroup R1b1a2a1a1b4 there is a single subset carrying a null at DYS 425 and probably unique or nearly unique values at 2 or 3 other loci. What is important is that this haplotype clearly is associated with only one grouping of Irish clans and surnames, each of which by historical records emanates from The Three Collas a successful aggressive clan flourishing 300-400 AD. We are looking for evidence that this null is associated with other families with different ancestry and as yet have not definitively found it. This gives us an estimate of the time of the mutation to the null a little before 300 AD.

DNA has confirmed ancient Irish history, but it has also shown that the history is wrong in some areas. For example, the Three Collas were said to be related to Niall of the Nine Hostages. The DNA of the descendants of the Collas, however, does not match the DNA of the descendants of Niall.

Annals of the Four Masters. The Annals of the Four Masters were composed from 1632 to 1636 in the Franciscan Monastery of Donegal chiefly by Michael O'Clery (1580-1643). In 1845, Irish historiographer Owen Connellan translated the book from Irish to English. In May 2007, Google digitized a copy of the translation from the Library at Oxford University: Annals of the Four Masters. A long footnote that starts on page 2 describes the ancient kingdom of Oriel and includes the descendants of the Three Collas. "The posterity of the three Collas, called clan Colla, founded many powerful clans and noble families in Ulster and other parts of Ireland.

From Colla Uais were descended the MacDonnells, earls of Antrim in Ireland, and lords of the Isles in Scotland; also the MacRorys, a great clan in the Hebrides, and also many families of that name in Ulster, anglicised to Rogers.
From Colla da Chrich, were descended the MacMahons, princes of Monaghan, lords of Ferney, and barons of Dartree, at Conagh, where they had their chief seat. The MacMahons were sometimes styled princes of Orgiall. An interesting account of the Mac Mahons, of Monaghan, is given by sir John Davis, who wrote in the reign of James the First. It may be observed that several of the MacMahons in former times changed the name to Mathews. The other chief clans of Monaghan were the MacKennas, chiefs of Truagh; the MacCabes; the MacNeneys, anglicised to Bird; the MacArdells; MacCassidys; O'Duffys, and O'Corrys; the O'Cosgras, MacCuskers or MacOscars, changed to Cosgraves, who possessed, according to O'Dugan, a territory called Fearra Rois, which comprised the district about Carrickmacross in Monaghan, with the parish of Clonkeen, adjoining, in the county of Louth; the Boylans of Dartree; the MacGilMichaels, changed to Mitchell; the MacDonnells; the O'Connellys, and others.
From Colla-da-Chrich were also descended the MacGuires, lords of Fermanagh, and barons of Enniskillen; the O'Flanagans of Fermanagh; the O'Hanlons, chiefs of Hy-Meith-Tire, now the barony of Orior in Armagh, who held the office of hereditary regal standard-bearers of Ulster; the MacCathans or MacCanns of Clan Breasail, in Armagh; the O'Kellys, princes of Hy Maine, in the counties of Galway and Roscommon; and the O'Madagans or O'Maddens, chiefs of Siol Anmchadha or Silanchia, now the barony of Longford, in the county of Galway."

Clan Colla DNA Study
Summary Report

This story and study of the DNA of the Three Collas was started in May 2009. A rudimentary modal Colla DNA was established from a group of people with Colla surnames such as Biggins, Carroll, Maguire, McMahon, McDonald, and McDaniel, who had similar DNA. This was facilitated by the fact that these people all had an unusual feature in their DNA: one of the 67 markers, number 425, had a null value. It was relatively easy to search among the DNA of these people for the ones that had the null value for marker 425. Not all of the people with these surnames had the null value but the ones that did all seemed to match up fairly closely. The ones that did not have the null value did not match up closely. The next step was to search for all the people, regardless of surname, who matched up fairly closely with the developing modal DNA. This has resulted in a list of people with Colla DNA--some with Colla surnames and some without. There were plausible reasons for the existence of this latter group: adoption, name change, genealogical omissions, and distant cousins.

A Reference Group was put together of people who do not have the Colla DNA. This group helps to understand how close the people are who have the Colla DNA. It also helps make predictions about closeness to Colla DNA based on markers other than the null 425.

The ancient genealogies and DNA test results seem to be confirming each other. A pattern or "signature" DNA has emerged for Colla descendants identified long ago by John O'Hart and his predecessors. And the ancient genealogies have given us a clue as to which people have Colla DNA.

DNA Testing. By testing the Y-chromosome DNA, males can determine the origin of their paternal line. Note that the Y DNA strictly checks the paternal line, with no influence of any females along that line. Females do not receive the Y-chromosome, and therefore females cannot be tested for the paternal line. If you are a female and would like to know about your paternal line, you would need to have a male relative from that line to be tested.

The test results evaluated here all came from Family Tree DNA. Only 67 or 111 markers tested are included here because those tests include the 48th marker, 425, which is crucial to the analysis. The cost of this test varies from time to time, but the average is approximately $250. More advanced "deep-clade testing" provides more specific information about origin but is not essential to this study.

The DNA of Clan Colla is part of a haplogroup called L21 (also called R1b1a2a1a1b4). Of the 232 participants, 55 have done "deep-clade testing" for the L21 SNP (single-nucleotide polymorphism). All have tested positive. Clan Colla respresents a small part of the L21 haplogroup--perhaps 3%. Other groups have been identified within L21 besides Clan Colla. The major ones are: Northwest Irish (Niall of the Nine Hostages), Irish Type II (South Irish), Irish Type III (Brian Boru), Airghialla 2, Ely Carroll, Dalriada (Scots). For more information on these groups, see L21 DNA.

Most of the participants, 80%, have surnames that the ancient genealogies say are descended from the Three Collas. The surnames are related to both Colla Uais and Colla da Crioch. There are none related to Colla Menn, but relatively few surnames are attributed to him.

Many people do not know where their patronymic ancestor came from, which is not uncommon. Only a small number of those tested live in Ireland or Scotland. Most live in America. Many of those have resorted to DNA testing for the very reason that they do not know where there ancestors came from when the emigrated to America.

The Colla Group includes some people with non-Irish sounding names. It includes some people who are related to each other. It includes surnames where there is only one representative.

Historical Surnames. Within the Colla group, 146 have been assigned to Muredach Colla da Crioch and 54 have been assigned to Carrell Colla Uais. None have been assigned to Aedh Colla Menn.

Assignment to a brother is based on the tester's surname appearing in O'Hart's Irish Pedigrees. O'Hart indicates which brother the ancient histories say the name is descended from. In the case of McDonald, however, the name is descended from both Crioch and Uais.

Those assigned to a brother have 35 different Colla surnames. Only 30 percent of O'Hart's list of Colla Surnames are included in the study. There are a number of good reasons.

Many Colla names are uncommon.
Only a small number of people have had their DNA tested thus far.
Many who have had their DNA tested have tested only 12, 25, or 37 markers rather than the 67 required for this study.
Some people have been tested by an organization other than Family Tree DNA.
Some people may have lost their name because an ancestor changed his name or was adopted. These people would show up in the Unassigned Group.
O'Hart probably included some surnames of people who were not really Colla descendants.
There are 32 people in the Colla Group (14% of the total) that do not have actual Colla descendant surnames and cannot be assigned to one one of the Colla brothers. There are several possible reasons why they are not listed by O'Hart and other sources.
There was a name change by an ancestor.
They or an ancestor were adopted. Seven are known to be adopted or have an adopted ancestor.
The historical lists of Colla descendants were incomplete.
The name is on an historical list of Colla descendants but we have not found it yet.
Their ancestors were descended from cousins of the Three Collas; and their surnames, therefore, evolved differently.
In early Irish history there was the concept of “fostering,” where two powerful tribal leaders would place their infant son with the other family to seal a defensive alliance. It is likely that some of these sons took on the tribal name of the family with whom they were placed.
The genetic distance for the Unassigned people in the Colla Group is essentially the same as those who have Colla surnames.

First sketch of the deoxyribonucleic acid double-helix pattern in 1953 by Francis Crick.
Table of Contents

Null Value for Marker 425. All Colla participants by study design have taken the 67-marker test conducted by FTDNA. One of the markers in the 67-marker test that is not in lesser tests is marker 425. A null value for marker 425 separates the Colla Group from the Reference Group, but it only accounts for a genetic distance of 1. The remaining distance between the mean of 6 for the Colla group and 23 for Reference Group is due to differences in other markers.

A special test, called the DYF371X test, is offered for those who have the null value for marker 425, and a Null 425 DNA project. The DYF371X test has been done for 35 Clan Colla descendants: 34 have subvalues of 10c-12c-13c-14c and one has subvalues of 10c-12c-14c-14c.

As indicated by the Null 425 DNA project, there are people with the null value for marker 425 other than Colla people. These people do not match the Clan Colla modal. Only one of them has the L21 SNP.

There are 7 people who match the Colla Group but do not have a null value for marker 425. Their genetic distances from the Clan Colla modal range from 3 to 10. It is very unlikely that a null value would ever be reversed. So, these 7 people may be descended from ancestors who existed sometime before the null value first occurred. See No Null 425 Detail.

Colla Versus Reference DNA. Each DNA marker of the 232 Clan Colla participants was compared the corresponding DNA marker of a reference group of 2,710 other people. The people in the reference group have the same L-21 haplotype as the Colla people. The reference group people were obtained from the database maintained by Mike Walsh as of June 2011. Mike is administrator of the R-L21 project and recognized as the major source of L21 data.

The percentage distribution of marker values was determined for each group. The eight markers with the largest differences in the distribution of values were 385b, 439, 449, 570, 511, 425, 413a, and 534. For the source data and frequencies for all 67 markers for the Colla and the reference group, see: Reference Source Data.

L21 and DF21 SNPs

All Clan Colla participants who have done "deep-clade testing" for the L21 SNP (single-nucleotide polymorphism) have tested positive. L21 was discovered in October 2008. People with the L21 SNP are said to be members of the R1b1a2a1a1b4 haplogroup. As groups of scientists discover SNPs, they are named for the research lab and the order in which they are found. The L in L21 indicates that it was found at the Family Tree DNA Genomic Research Center in Houston, Texas. The L stands for Leo Little who did much pioneering work in genetic genealogy and who died in 2008. He kept enormous Excel spreadsheets of results – before they all got sub-divided into what the various Haplogroups are today. (L21 is known as S145 in some testing organizations.)

The L21 SNP is estimated to be 4,000 years old. It is sometimes referred to as a "Celtic" SNP. In their 2011 book The Scots, A Genetic Journey, Alistair Moffat and James F. Wilson say L21 "could be said to be the most emphatic signal of the Celtic language speakers of the British Isles. It is found in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland and it is almost certainly characteristic of those farming communities who may have spoken early forms of Celtic languages in the centuries around 2,000 BC."

Clan Colla participants also have tested positive for the DF21 SNP, which is downstream of L21. The first Clan Colla member tested positive for DF21 in August 2011. As of April 2012, 19 Clan Colla members have tested for DF21 all have tested positive. This further narrows the haplogroup for Clan Colla descendants. All Clan Colla descendants are expected to have the DF21 SNP. Other groups also have the DF21 SNP--perhaps 10 percent of all those with the L21 SNP. The DF21 SNP is estimated to be 2,500 to 3,000 years old, compared with 4,000 for the L21 SNP. (DF21 is known as S192 in some testing organizations.)

Clan Colla participants are urged to join the DF21 project at FTDNA and order the DF21 SNP test. The DF21 project has been set up by David Reynolds for people who have tested positive for the DF21 SNP or are interested in ordering the test.

The DF21 SNP is not yet part of deep clade testing and it may be a few months before FTDNA creates a new haplogroup designation. To order the DF21 test from your FTDNA home page, go to ORDER ADVANCED TESTS (not ORDER ADVANCED SNP TESTS nor ORDER DEEP CLADE TEST). The cost is $29.

There are four SNPs downstream of DF21: S190, P314.2, Z246, and L720. Clan Colla members have tested negative for all except S190. There is no test available yet at FTDNA for S190, but the DNA of people with this SNP is quite different from Clan Colla DNA. As of April 2012, 22 Clan Colla members had tested negative for P314.2 (part of "deep-clade testing"), 6 members had tested negative for Z246, and 1 had tested negative for L720.

A R-L21 project and R-L21 Walk Through the Y project have been set up for people whose DNA haplogroup is L21. This type includes other subgroups as well as Clan Colla. The purpose of the project is to find a special identifying a SNP for subgroups of L21. SNPs are very difficult to find. This effort is being directed and managed by Dr. Thomas Krahn, Technical Laboratory Manager of FTDNA's Genomics Research Center in Houston, Texas.

A Discussion Group has been set up for the R-L21 project at Yahoo Groups. Included is a spreadsheet compiled by Michael Walsh that identifies Clan Colla members. The discussion includes the DF21 SNP.

Robert Casey has a website for L21 Private SNPs. It is aimed at testing new SNPs, but includes information on established SNPs as well. The site also is a good place to find educational information about Y-DNA testing.

Several subgroups within L21 have been identified and are outlined below.

South Irish - Also referred to as Irish Type II. Probably descendants of the Eoghanachta, an Irish dynasty centered around Cashel which dominated southern Ireland from the 7th to the 10th centuries. No special SNP has been found thus far.

Brian Boru - Also referred to as Irish Type III. The SNP L226 has been found under the R-L21 project for Irish Type III, descendants of Brian Boru. This haplogroup originated in the counties of Clare, Tipperary and Limerick around the time of Brian Boru, who was born in circa 940 and died in 1014. This type also is called Dalcassian.

Leinster - SNP Z255 SNP L159.2 - Also known as Beatty-Byrnes. This profile is called the Leinster Modal, because early research showed that many families in Leinster in Ireland are members of the group. The group also appears to be plentiful in other parts of Ireland and Scotland, and there seem to be a number of English matches to the modal as well.

Scottish Cluster - Also referred to by some as Dalriada. This group is referred to as str47 'Pictish' by Alistair Moffat and James F. Wilson in their 2011 book The Scots, A Genetic Journey. It is referred to as the R1b-L21 Red-Black subgroup by Clan Donald. This is a very common L21+ group in Scotland. This group had previously been thought of by some as related to Clan Colla. It includes many McDonalds but few other Colla names and many names not associated with Clan Colla. No special SNP has been found thus far.

Hy Maine - Modal based on FTDNA kits for 8 people with surnames that Irish history says are descended from Maine Mor who lived in Galway and Roscommon. This subgroup had previously been thought of by some as related to Clan Colla. DNA testing has proven otherwise, as evidenced by the genetic distance of 18 between the modals for the two subgroups. One Kelly has tested positive for SNP DF23 and negative for the downstream SNP M222. No other persons have been so tested.

Irish Sea - SNP L513 SNP L193 - Scottish and Irish located near the Irish Sea.

Niall - SNP DF23 SNP M222 - Also referred to as Niall of the Nine Hostages and Northwest Irish. It had previously been identified in a Trinity College Study by a SNP called M222. This subgroup had previously been thought of by some as related to Clan Colla. DNA testing has proven otherwise, as evidenced by the genetic distance of 23 between the modals for the two subgroups. This was the original Irish type, so it should be called Irish Type I; but no one calls it that.

Airghialla 2 - SNP L513 SNP L69 - The Airghialla 2 subgroup ... consists of McGuires from the same general area as the McGuires of Clan Colla, but with different DNA. There is no historical record of two separate groups of McGuires. While this group has many McGuires, it does not have the large variety of other historical Colla surnames that Clan Colla has. A number of people have been found to have the L69 SNP. L69 is a sublclade of L513, which in turn is a subclade of L21.

DNA testing has contradicted genetic connections that had historically been thought to exist between some of the subgroups in the foregoing section.

South Irish, Brian Boru, and Ely Carroll had previously been thought by some as descended from a common ancestor, Olioll Olum. DNA testing has proven otherwise ... Hy Maine and Clan Colla had previously been thought by some to be descended from a common ancestor, but they have different SNPs and there is a genetic distance of 17 between their modals.

Northwest Irish (Niall) and Clan Colla had previously been thought by some to be descended from a common ancestor, but they have different SNP and there is a genetic distance of 20 between their modals.
All McGuires had previously been thought by some to be descended from Clan Colla, but there is a significant group of McGuires and descendants in Airghialla 2 that have different SNPs from Clan Colla and a genetic distance of 21 from Clan Colla.
The fact that some historic connections are contradicted by DNA should not be taken as a denunciation of all history.

Deep Ancestry
Patrick McMahon analyzed the geographic distribution of the members of the L21 project at FTDNA in January 2011 and made the following observation.

Assuming today's testers are a random sample, these results support the views put forward by many that the L21 SNP occurred somewhere north of the Alps (about 4,000 years ago) and the L21 population drifted Northwest over time concentrating in the western fringes of the British Isles mainly in Ireland. North of the Alps would most likely be Germany or France where the original (presumed) high numbers would over time be replaced by further waves of migrants or simply driven North by more advanced civilisations.
How they made their way to Ireland is open to conjecture. The shortest sea journey then (3,000 to 4,000 years ago) as now would be from France to Southern England. However, they could have made their way directly to Ireland from Brittany (or via Cornwall or Wales). The figures support the view that there was no significant migration towards the Eastern parts of Europe and only minor ones to Scandinavia and Spain with the main thrust through Northern France to Britain and Ireland. Archaeologists have termed these peoples (and the proto-Collas are part of this population) as 'Bronze-age' Britons.

The descendants of the Three Collas share a common pattern of DNA markers, and many have surnames mentioned in ancient genealogies as descending from the Three Collas.

The people with Colla DNA, however, do not have to be the majority of those with their surname. In fact, the majority of people with Colla DNA are a minority of those with their surname. And, therefore, most people with Colla surnames do not have Colla DNA. The reason is that most Irish surnames appear in mutiple septs. For example, as shown above, there are McDonalds descended from Clan Colla, but there are also McDonalds descended from Niall of the Nine Hostages (Northwest Irish) and Dalriada Scots. There are many McDonalds with a R1b haplotype for whom a sept has not been identified. There are 61 McDonalds with a R1a haplotype descended from Norse invaders. There are McGuires descended from Clan Colla, but there are also many Maguires descended from a sept of unknown origin in the Fermanagh area, called Airghialla 2.

There are several explanations for this phenomenon of multiple-sept surnames.

The same surname developed independently in different geographic areas.

At the time surnames came into being around a thousand years ago, many surnames were based on relatively common given names.
A male was adopted by a clan other than the one he was born in.
A male married a woman from another clan and took her surname, perhaps because it was a more respected name.
A male changed his surname when he was ennobled or otherwise came into possession of territory, perhaps adopting the name of a respected prior holder of that territory.
A male was a subordinate (vassal, servant, slave, etc) of a member of another clan and took his master's surname when he became free.
A male took the surname of another clan without any connection to the clan, simply because it was a respected name.
Most of the septs shown above are part of the R1b haplogroup called the L21 haplogroup (also called R1b1a2a1a1b4). For more information on these septs, see L21 DNA.

Origin of the Three Collas

There are several theories as to the origin Carrell Colla Uais, Muredach Colla da Crioch, and Aedh Colla Menn.

1. Cousins of Niall. The traditional explanation is that the Three Collas are descended from the kings of Ireland and are cousins, twice removed of Niall of the Nine Hostages. The Three Collas were the sons of Eochaid Dublein, who was the younger son of Cairbre Lificar, the 117th King of Ireland. The older son, Fiacha Sraibtine, was the 120th King of Ireland. The Three Collas waged war against their uncle Fiacha Sraibhtine and slew him in the battle of Dubhcomar, AD 322. Colla Uais then ascended the throne as the 121st King of Ireland. In AD 326, he was deposed by Muredach Tirech, son of Fiacha Sraibtine. Muredach Tirech then banished to Scotland the Three Collas and their principal chiefs, to the number of three hundred; but through the influence of the King of Alba, and the mediation of the Druids, they were afterwards pardoned by the Irish King, who cordially invited them to return to Ireland, and received them into great favor.

2. Romanized Trinovantes. In 1998, Donald M. Schlegel, suggested in his article "The Origin of the Three Collas and the Fall of Emain" in the Clogher Record that the Three Collas were Romanized Britons from the Trinovantes, a celtic tribe from Colchester, the oldest recorded Roman town in England. They received military training from the Romans and eventually went to Ireland as mercenaries in the service of the King of Ireland. The Three Collas were not descended from the kings of Ireland and were not related to Niall of the Nine Hostages. This is consistent with recent DNA findings.

3. Tribal Drift. In 2010, Patrick McMahon, a geneticist and a contributor to this study, cited a westward and north westward movement of bronze-age Celts through Europe, including the L21 line which started north of the Alps about 4,000 years ago. He estimates that L21 Celts started to populate Ireland about 3,000 years ago. By the time the Romans came to Britain, these Celtic people would have subsumed earlier cultures and diverged from one another over the 30 or so generations. There arose in one L21 tribe, Clan Colla, the relatively rare and stable null mutation at marker 425 shortly before the Roman invasion of Britain. In addition to names representing Wales, there is an equally strong contingent of Scottish names. This, in conjunction with the occurrence of the null mutation at the beginning of the first milennium, is strongly suggestive that the Colla tribe was well established and had branched in northwest Britain before coming to Ireland. The three Colla brothers arrived in Ireland about A.D. 300, allegedly as mercenaries to the High King. Based on his analysis of the DNA data, Patrick sees no confirmation that specific surnames descended from specific brothers.

Your paternal haplogroup assignment has been changed to reflect an improvement to our algorithm and naming convention. Roger, your paternal haplogroup is R-M529. R-M529 is a subgroup of R-M269.

Haplogroup R-M269 origin: R-M269 is the most common haplogroup in western Europe, where its branches are clustered in various national populations, including in the Basque, in Ireland, and on the fringes of the North Sea.

Genetic genealogy; Y - DNA analysis for me, RRC, ID = 13252521

My spit was genotyped by ScotlandsDNA. Extracting from their report to me:

Your YDNA Markers are M269+S145+M222-S190-S168-S169-
These are the key markers defining your group.

S192+S253-S299-S190-S424-

Your genetic signature:

Your S192 subtype was recently discovered in an Orcadian and a Cornishman, it accounts for about a quarter of British S145, but only 10% of the S145 in Continental Europe.

(Note by RRC: Since S145 is also known as L21, my son and I are both L21+ and M222-. Downstream from L21, I tested positive for S192 (Roger Jr. was not tested for this SNP). S192 is also known as DF21, so I say that I belong to the R1b-DF21/ S192 haplogroup,)

Genetic genealogy: Y - DNA of Robert Emmitt Connely IV, ID = 166b7211

RRC:

Robert & I both descend from Thomas Connely, ID = 1 in this genealogy, he through Thomas' son Alexander (ID = 16), me through Thomas' son Arthur (ID = 13). Thomas is our patrilineal most recent common ancestor, a 5th great-grandfather to both of us.

Robert recently had his DNA analyzed at FTDNA. The following email he sent to me on 6 June 2019 was easily one of the best I have ever received - it contained marvelous news regarding our connection to Clan Colla!

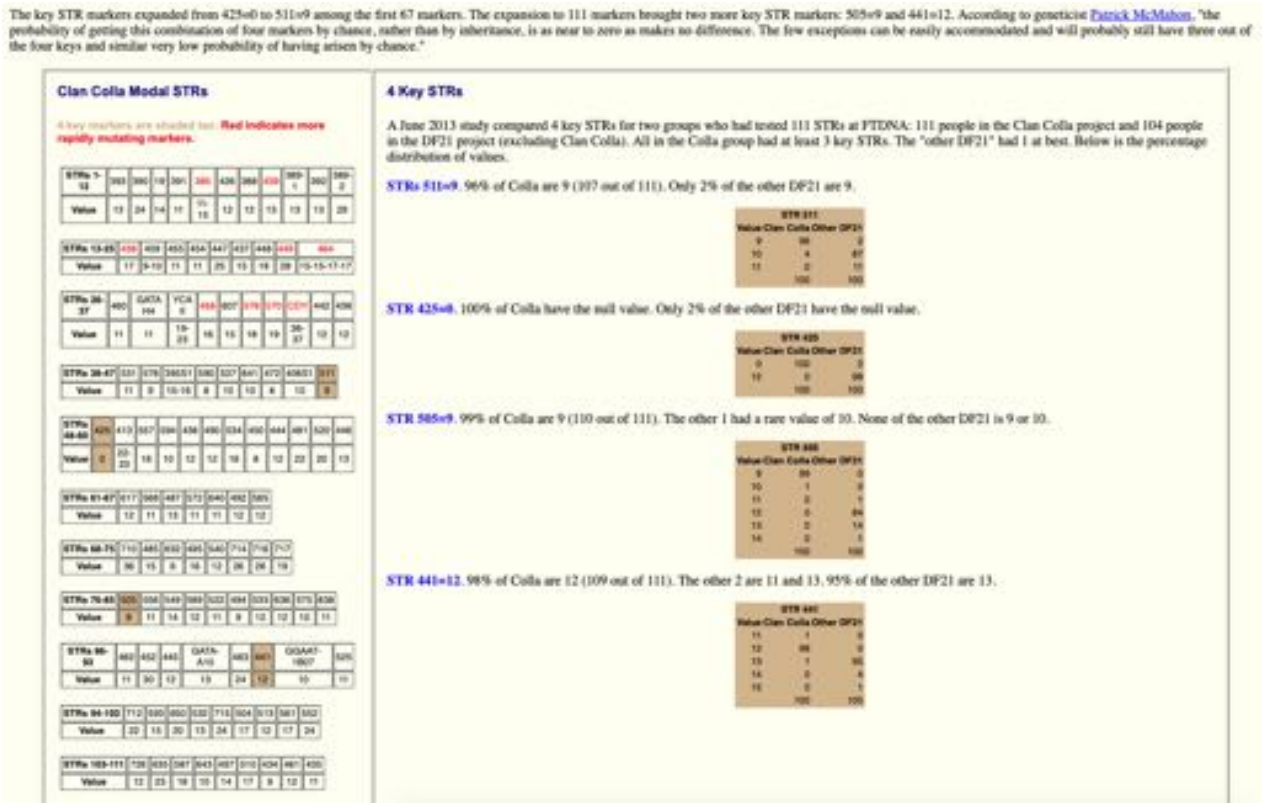
Roger,
Today, I received my BigY-700 DNA test results. I would like to confirm for you that we are in fact 100% verified as DNA match to the Clann Colla Model STR DNA sequence for Y DNA that has passed from father to son with a null 425 STR value. I have attached my results below. I will call you later to discuss.

Congratulations to all of us. And THANK YOU for calling me to get this process started.

Best,
Robert Emmitt Connely IV ;-)



The key STR markers expanded from 425=0 to 511=9 among the first 67 markers. The expansion to 111 markers brought two more key STR markers: 505=9 and 441=12. According to geneticist Patrick McMahon, "the probability of getting this combination of four markers by chance, rather than by inheritance, is as near to zero as makes no difference. The few exceptions can be easily accommodated and will probably still have three out of the four keys and similar very low probability of having arisen by chance."

Clan Colla Modal STRs

4 key markers are shaded red. Red indicates more rapidly mutating markers.

4 Key STRs

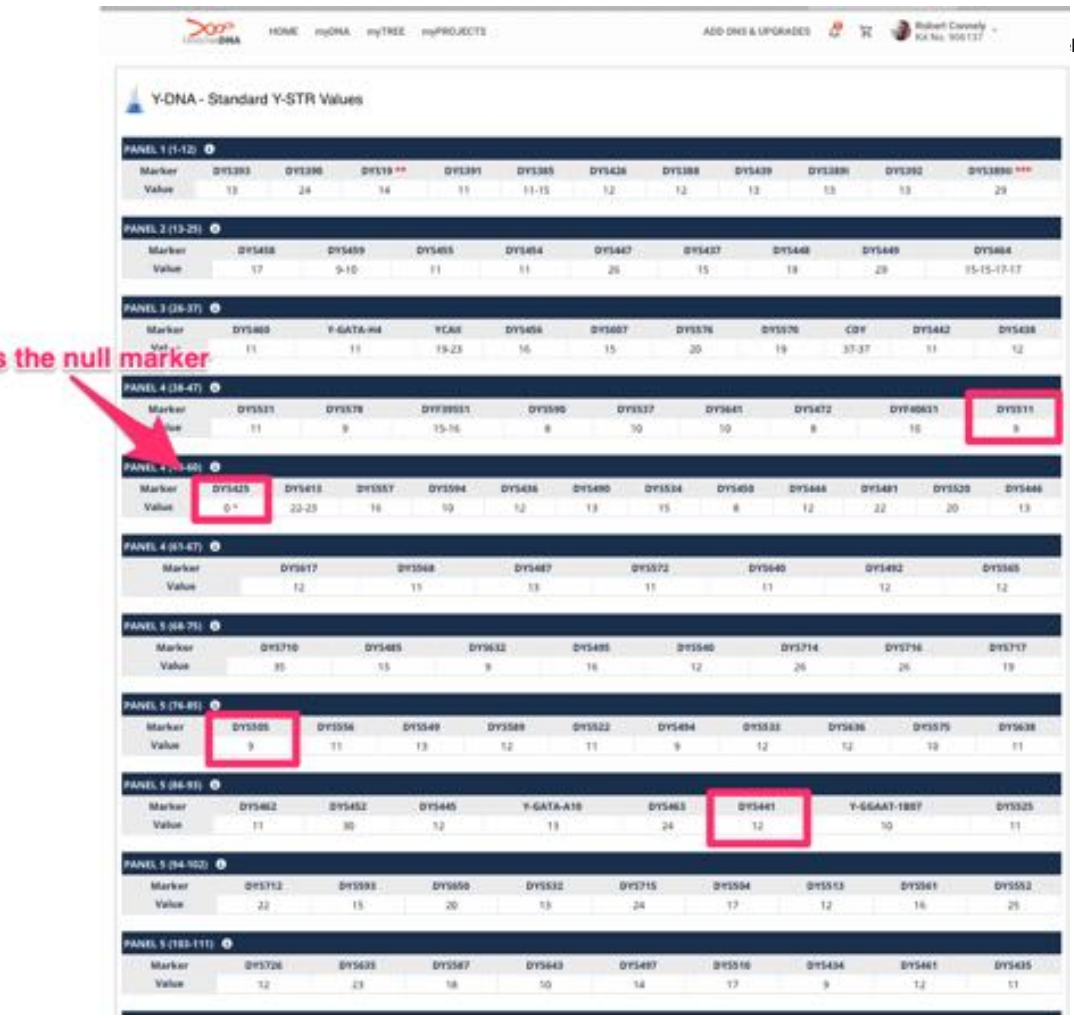
A June 2013 study compared 4 key STRs for two groups who had tested 111 STRs at FTDNA: 111 people in the Clan Colla project and 104 people in the DF21 project (excluding Clan Colla). All in the Colla group had at least 3 key STRs. The "other DF21" had 1 at best. Below is the percentage distribution of values.

STRs 511=9. 96% of Colla are 9 (107 out of 111). Only 2% of the other DF21 are 9.

STR 425=0. 100% of Colla have the null value. Only 2% of the other DF21 have the null value.

STR 505=9. 99% of Colla are 9 (110 out of 111). The other 1 had a rare value of 10. None of the other DF21 is 9 or 10.

STR 441=12. 98% of Colla are 12 (109 out of 111). The other 2 are 11 and 13. 95% of the other DF21 are 13.



RRC:

I'm hoping more of the patrilineal descendants of Thomas get their Y-DNA sequenced; if you do, please let me know your results. I recommend the Y-67 test or the Y-117 test (even better), or the Big Y-700 test (best of all) at FTDNA. I especially encourage male descendants of Thomas (who have the Connely surname - or spellings such as Connelly, Conley, …), especially descendants through his sons Thomas (ID = 12) and Robert (ID = 19), to get tested.

Thomas (ID = 1) had a brother Arthur (ID = 2) whose genealogy is contained in other files at this website. This Arthur Connely also had several sons; I hope their patrilineal descendants also get their Y-DNA tested.

It has taken some time but we now have complete won-lost records with the coaches listed for 41 years of Mohawk basketball, 1921 through 1961. . . During this time, there have been eight head coaches . . . The late J. A. (Judge) Grimsley was at the helm much of this time, from 1926 through 1953, 18 seasons. . . . All three state titles were under his coaching, 1935, 1940 and 1943 with the '40 and '43 clubs both being undefeated.

The collective winning percentage for the 41 seasons stands at .707 and you can't have many losers and come up with something like that. . . Matter of fact, there haven't been many losers. . . . The only seasons on the minus side were in 1927, 1937, 1953 and 1954.

Grimsley's teams, thanks to the pair of unbeaten clubs, averaged only an even six defeats per season during his 18 seasons as boss man. . . They won 315 games and dropped 104.

Here is the breakdown of coaches, their combined won-lost records, years coached and percentages:

	W	L	Pct.
F. H. Waters (1921-23)	51	21	.708
Ray Allen (1924-25)	37	7	.841
J. A. Grimsley (1926-43)	315	104	.752
Bud Suter (1944-46)	55	22	.714
Elmer Starr (1947-50)	72	26	.727
Bob Heston (1951)	15	8	.652
Bill Steneker (1952-60)	109	82	.571
Herb Thompson (1961)	17	8	.680

(Note by RRC: A typo - "1926 through 1953" should be 1926 through 1943.

I loved basketball. Went out for sophomore basketball my 1st year in high school. Elmer Starr was our coach. I got to suit up for a preseason game. It was at home, against Nora Springs if I recall correctly. All week during practice, Coach told us it would be a tough game to win. But it turned out to be no contest, we ran up a big lead. I rode the bench the entire game, but with about a minute to play Coach said "Connelly, go in for Belseth". The next opportunity for a substitution, I jumped off the bench, ready to enter the game, perhaps score a few points and at least get to know first hand what it feels like to be a Mason City Mohawk basketball player. But no, Belseth had been fouled, had to shoot free throws, he was not coming out then, and I never got into the game. I got cut from the team the next day.
I did letter in golf. My brother, Barr, 5 years younger than me, would excel in several sports.)

As I looked over the high school stuff I have, I see where I was selected to the first team all big six team as a forward my senior year -- and I was a second team all big six selection as a forward my junior year.
I scored 427 points my senior year breaking Joe Mentinks record of 395 in 1956.

The article says the 427 points were 98 more than Connelly scored as a junior (329).

Roger -- the irony is Joe Calahan scored 433 points that senior year and set the new MCHS record -- also breaking Joe Mentinks record!!!!
It says the '58 - '59 team topped the team scoring mark for a season, tallied 1,555 total points -- the previous high was 1,432 points set in '55 - '56.
Mason City averaged 67.6 points a game, while their opponents averaged 55.2

Joe was a 1st team all-stater and I was a 4th team all-state selection in the coaches poll.

I received " honorable mention " as a forward in Jack Norths basketball poll.

BARR CONNELLY
—Record setter

Barr Connelly scores record 40 points as Mason City J. C. beats Austin J. C. 109-69

By DICK SULLIVAN

One record fell, two were tied and another nearly fell at Roosevelt Fieldhouse Thursday night when Mason City J. C. turned in a 109-69 victory over Austin J. C.

Barr Connelly set an individual scoring record for the Trojans with 40 points. The previous high in this department was 39 and was held by two players. His 40 points tied the individual record for junior college players at Roosevelt Fieldhouse. Merlin Peter scored 40 for Eagle Grove J. C. against the Trojans in 1954.

Connelly was near sensational in racking up his record 40 points. He scored 10 fieldgoals and three free throws in the first half for 23 points and ran that total to 38 with about six minutes left in the game. He then sat out about three minutes of the contest but returned long enough to dump in one more two-plyer. It went in the bucket with 50 seconds remaining on the clock.

ALL-TIME SCORER - We feel that some college team could use Barr Connelly, the scoring star for the strong Mason City Junior College basketball team of this past season . . . He was on the Iowa State frosh squad last year, then transferred to Mason City J. C. . . . Connelly does not plan to return to Iowa State but probably will continue his college studies.

This was the highest scoring Mason City J. C. basketball team of all time and Connelly, with deft fakes and a big variety of shots, was the main reason for the big scores . . . Only five times in 24 games were the Trojans held to fewer than 80 points . . . Seven times the club was in the 90s and four times the team surpassed the 100 mark.

In most cases, Connelly was at the top of the point making business . . For the season, he scored 595 points and that's the most ever posted for a player representing any Mason City school...

ECKHOFF, CONNELLY HONORED - Two of the prize players in Iowa Junior College basketball this past season have been honored on the All-America selections of the National Junior College Athletic Association . . . They are Al Eckhoff of Webster City and Barr Connelly of Mason City.

Eckhoff was named to the third team and Connelly was ranked 10th on the honorable mention list, which included 25 players. . . Three teams of five players each were picked. . . Both stars boasted scoring averages of better than 24 points per game to rank among the top 10 in the nation.

His WWII 87th chemical battalion commended - Roy Elmo Connelly, ID = 1325254

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in the Mason City Globe-Gazette, Mason City, IA, Wednesday, 24 Jan. 1945, page 14.)

LT. ROY E. CONNELLY

Lt. Connelly Now in Germany Writes of His Command Post

Lt. Roy E. Connelly as a member of the 87th chemical battalion in Germany is participant of a letter of commendation from the major general in command, which says in part:

"As we continue our drive to the Rhine, I salute the officers and men of the 87th chemical battalion for your splendid record of the past 6 months and wish you continued success and good luck in the future operations of the VII corps."

Lt. Connelly has been in combat with the 87th chemical battalion attached to the U. S. first army in France, Belgium and Germany since June 7, 1944, and was recently in Achen, according to word received here.

In the past few months Lt. Connelly's command post has been in various surroundings, he had written in a letter received here. While in France it was supplied by a French woman, who turned over a couple of rooms of her home to the Americans. Her husband was a prisoner of Germany and she was all for the Americans.

In Germany the command post was first in a German pillbox, then in a large old chateau which was once a castle. It was built entirely of stone with walls at least 5 feet thick. The entire building extended around 3 sides of a courtyard, with the living quarter, stables, dungeons, etc., underground.

Around the outside was a moat bed, and to enter the building the American boys had to cross a bridge through an archway. The building was heated by German artificial coal and lighted by kerosene lamps.

Next the command post was in an air raid shelter in Germany, which like everything else in Germany had taken quite a beating from the air forces.

"All I've seen of Germany thus far is endless destruction of roads, cities, towns and houses and it will be many years before the marks of warfare are obliterated from this country," Lt. Connelly had written.

"For a peaceful place I would nominate some of these Belgium villages that the war passed over," he stated, having spent Christmas and New Year's in one. "The people are very devout church goers, very neat and clean and the stone houses and old chateaus make an interesting picture. Most of the houses consist of a kitchen, living room and work room, with cow barns and such built right on to the house. For their chores the Belgian wear wooden shoes but otherwise their dress is much like ours. They are fine people and like the American army."

Lt. Connelly is the son of Mrs. Anna Connelly, 432 24th St. S. W., and has been in the service since August, 1942. A brother. Pvt. Ralph Connelly, landed in Italy in December.

His Battalion Commended by Commanding General

Lt. Connelly Now in Germany Writes of His Command Post

Lt. Roy E. Connelly as a member of the 87th chemical battalion in Germany is participant of a letter of commendation from the major general in command, which says in part:

"As we continue our drive to the Rhine, I salute the officers and men of the 87th chemical battalion for your splendid record of the past 6 months and wish you continued success and good luck in the future operations of the VII corps."

Lt. Connelly has been in combat with the 87th chemical battalion attached to the U. S. first army in France, Belgium and Germany since June 7, 1944, and was recently in Achen, according to word received here.

In the past few months Lt. Connelly's command post has been in various surroundings, he had written in a letter received here. While in France it was supplied by a French woman, who turned over a couple of rooms of her home to the Americans. Her husband was a prisoner of Germany and she was all for the Americans.

In Germany the command post was first in a German pillbox, then in a large old chateau which was once a castle. It was built entirely of stone with walls at least 5 feet thick. The entire building extended around 3 sides of a courtyard, with the living quarter, stables, dungeons, etc., underground.

Around the outside was a moat bed, and to enter the building the American boys had to cross a bridge through an archway. The building was heated by German artificial coal and lighted by kerosene lamps.

Next the command post was in an air raid shelter in Germany, which like everything else in Germany had taken quite a beating from the air forces.

AMUSING STORY GIVEN LIONS ON "BELGIAN BULGE"

Lt. Roy Connelly Tells of Means Used to Comb
Out Nazis Behind Lines

The amusing story of how the 250 Germans parachuted down back of the American lines at the time of the "Belgian bulge" last winter was related to the Mason City Lions club Wednesday noon by Lt. Roy Connelly of the chemical warfare branch.

"Hundreds of road blocks were thrown up through the entire area and GIs set about stopping every vehicle for a questioning of the occupants," the Mason City officer recalled. "The queries would run something like this:

"What state are you from? What's the capital city of your state? Does the Mississippi river run east and west or north and south? Are Bing Crosby's children boys or girls? What words follow 'Mairsy Doats?'"

Most of the Germans in American uniforms, with identification tags and everything else looking genuine, had been coached on their geography, according to the lieutenant. But when it came to American slang and American songs, they were stymied.

Large credit for stopping the Germans in their final breakthrough gamble was accorded by the speaker to the army supply department's success in keeping gasoline stocks out of the nazis' clutches.

His talk opened with a concise recalling of the 1sţ army's activities on the Normandy beachheads, at St. Lo, on the spectacular march across France and its defensive stand before the Siegfried line while supply lines were being established.

High compliment was paid to the fighting attributes of the GI and to the homefront for its magnificent job of keeping the fighting men supplied with the tools of war.

"This fact," he said, "undoubtedly saved thousands of lives. Our boys were seldom called upon to enter a battle at a mechanical disadvantage."

Most devastated of all the cities viewed by him in his tour of duty in the European theater, he said, was Duren, Germany, with Aachen a close second. St. Lo in Normandy was placed in the same class.

German psychological warfare was more effective on the homefront than against the American forces, he pointed out. Radio programs designed to convince the GIs that they weren't appreciated at home and that they were fighting for Jewish capitalists brought only smiles.

But the homefront broadcasts completely sold the Germans on the idea that the American enemy was made up of gangsters who had qualified for membership in Patton's armored divisions by murdering one of their own relatives.

While nazi troops excelled in discipline, the lieutenant pointed out, they were hopelessly outclassed by the American fighting men when it came to initiative and ingenuity. It was this that led one German general to observe:

"Germans can beat any organized army in the world—but those American soldiers don't seem to know the rules."

Under any and all conditions, the GIs insisted on having their joke, the speaker observed.

In this connection he recalled a horse-drawn hearse being driven down the streets of an only partly-captured town by 2 American soldiers who had donned long-tailed coats and pin-striped trousers for the occasion.

D-DAY REMEMBERED

June 1, 2014

On June 6, 2014 it will be seventy years since my father, 1Lt. Roy Connelly, landed on Utah Beach with the other brave men of the 87th Chemical Mortar Battalion. My father died in 1987, but in 2005 as I was finishing up my book about the unit, I had the honor of attending the battalion's final reunion, and meeting with eleven of these remarkable men.

After their banquet, they all sat down with me at a big table in the hotel lounge and I put a small tape recorder in the center of the table and let them talk about their experiences. Now I knew the story of these men through my extensive research of not only the day to day history of the battalion, but each of the four companies.

I also knew the history of the men at the table. I knew which ones had won medals for heroism and which ones had received one or more purple hearts for wounds received in combat. I heard a lot of stories that night and had collected many more through telephone interviews, questionnaires filled out by the unit veterans, and the diaries some of them sent to me. Yet, none of these men would allow me to call them heroes. They would refer to their buddies as heroes, but not themselves, regardless of the facts that I knew about them.

To hear them talk, they were just average GIs who did the job they were told to do. I knew better because as I chronicle in my book "The Mortarmen" these men who fired the 4.2" mortars, the heaviest in the U.S. military were in combat for 326 straight days. They fought on the Cherbourg Peninsula, in the Hurtgen Forest, and in the Battle of the Bulge. They captured the key German City of Cologne, and they liberated the Nazi death camp at Nordhausen.

They fired their mortars in support of the 3rd, 4th, and 75th Infantry divisions, the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, the 2nd and 5th Armored Divisions, and many other units. Almost every original member of the 87th was killed, wounded, or captured at some point. These men fought for their country and their unit, but mostly they fought for each other. Their loyalty to their fellow warriors was so strong that many hid minor wounds or had more serious wounds treated by the unit medics and refused to be shipped back to a field hospital. Their fear was that they might be reassigned to a unit other than the 87th.

Now, seventy years later only a few of the men of this distinguished unit are still alive and the same is true of the thousands of other soldiers who landed on the beaches of Normandy. These are the men of the "Longest Day" and they must never be forgotten.

December 15, 2014

This has become a Christmas tradition for me and some of you have seen this post before, but it is that time of year when I start thinking about the importance of friends and family and why I should be thankful for the country I live in. It is also the time when I think about those fellow Americans who have stepped forward in the past and the present to place their lives on the line so that the rest of us can celebrate this holy season in freedom and peace.

The true story below is about my father and a Christmas seventy ago. I wrote it many years ago and it has been reprinted and put on websites around the world. You can read the full story in my book "The Mortarmen" I offer this story once again to honor our heroes of yesterday, today, and tomorrow. Come to think of it, this story is really about all of them because it epitomizes who and what they are.

The frigid night air cut through the Lieutenant's army issue coat as the stopped in the knee deep snow to survey the perimeter. A heavy snow continued to fall on this Christmas Eve 1944, but it was not a silent night. The flashes of artillery lit the sky and generated a rumble like distant thunder as the young officer finished his tour of the unit's outposts. He was an officer in Company B, 87th Chemical Mortar Battalion, the men who fired the big 4.2 mortars which were so critical to the effort of the infantry to advance. They were someplace in Belgium, he really had no clue where, and for the first time in a while the battalion was together again. All four companies had been brought in to help stop the German breakthrough. They didn't know it, but the 87th was about to be thrown right into the heart of the Battle of the Bulge.

As the Lieutenant finished his rounds he wearily dragged himself into the monastery where the command had taken refuge for the night. The warmth that enveloped him as he entered the large community room was certainly welcomed. He glanced around and saw his comrades sprawled in every available space. They were bedraggled and exhausted after 201 days of almost continuous combat, and by the looks on their faces you could tell that it was only going to get worse. Despite the thickness of the monastery walls, a new sound intruded, the quick crack of tank gunfire.

Everyone knew what that meant, American tankers were making a last ditch stand against the German armored columns in the area. They were outnumbered and outgunned and their Sherman tanks stood no chance against the awesome German Tiger tanks, but they fought anyway. When the battle ended, and it would before dawn, then the 87th became part of the last American line of defense. The war hung in the balance, and so did the lives of everyone in the ancient house of God.

The Lieutenant found a place to sit against one wall and sank down in exhaustion, gratefully accepting the wine, bread and cheese being offered by the monks. In the corner of the room, a soldier fiddled with the dial of a radio, finally picking up the armed forces station. Christmas carols filled the room, but only added to the loneliness. Then as, the sound of the tank battle increased in intensity, a new song started on the radio, Bing Crosby singing "White Christmas."

For the Lieutenant the song immediately invoked memories of the sights, sounds and smells of Christmas on the farm in Mason City, Iowa and of how far away he was from those he loved. He could not help himself, the tears began to flow and embarrassed, he glanced around the room to see if anyone had noticed. His eyes fell first on the Company Commander, Captain J.J. Marshall, one of the toughest men the Lieutenant had ever known. The Captain sat ramrod straight, unashamed, as tears streamed down his stubbly cheeks. It was universal that night, strong men, the bravest of the brave, cried over a Christmas carol, and over the homes many would never see again.

As dawn broke the next morning, Christmas Day, the battalion was again split up with Company B assigned to take up mortar positions in support of what was left of the 289th infantry, 75th Division, and defend a Belgium village called Sadzot, a key location in the thin American defense line. For three days they fired their mortars in support of the hastily assembled defense units, and then disaster struck. Early in the predawn hours of Dec. 28th enemy elements of the 12 SS Panzer Division, the infamous Hitler Jugend, broke through the infantry lines and overran the mortar position.

They hastily assembled all of the men they could, and the mortarmen fought a delaying action, fighting hand to hand and house to house against overwhelming numbers. As the fighting retreat continued, they men of company B were joined by remaining elements of the 509th Parachute Battalion which had formed a new defensive position north of the village. There they held until reinforced and then joined a counterattack which retook the village, and recaptured six of their nine mortars and most of their vehicles.

It was later learned that this makeshift force of Americans had successfully stopped a major attack by German troops designed to capture a major highway intersection which would have broken the American line. No one has ever been able to tell me how they won. History recorded it as a classic situation where the attacking enemy held all of the advantages, yet was stopped by the cold determination of a hand full of defenders on the verge of physical and mental collapse. Somehow, they emerged victorious, with Company B reporting almost half of its men killed, wounded, or missing.

For his actions during the defense of Sadzot the Lieutenant and the other men of the company received both the French and Belgium Croix de Guerre medals. I know the story of that lonely Christmas Eve and the ensuing days from my Father’s diary. He was the young Lieutenant, Roy E. Connelly, Co. B. 87th Chemical Mortar Battalion. He would read that story to us on Christmas Eve every year until his death in 1987, and then I took over the job with my children.

He never read it without crying over the friends he lost during that Christmas season of 1944, and to this day, I can not read it or even write about it without the same reaction. What was done during that six day period by the men of Co. B and the other companies of the 87th, who also held the line, surpasses the ability of most of us to comprehend. They fought for each other, and they fought for us. We must never forget.

February 14th was Valentine's day and also Lt. Roy Connelly’s birthday, but it wasn't a very happy one. He remembers the Luftwaffe being very annoying that day, bombing and strafing him everywhere he went. After dark he returned to the house he and S/Sgt Robert Murphy were occupying. He and "Murph" had become good friends and Connelly particularly enjoyed the dry humor of the Irish sergeant. As they sat talking at a small table in the blacked out house the unmistakable sound of German bombers overhead intruded on their conversation. The lieutenant blew out the small candle on the table and opened the door. It had become his habit to stand in the doorway and try to determine where the bombs were hitting. That way he could decide if he and Murph needed to head for the basement.

The enemy bomber crews usually followed the same pattern with the lead plane dropping a flare to illuminate the target area and the following planes dropping their loads into the lit area. Connelly watched as the inevitable flare appeared and commented to the Sergeant that the Krauts had just dropped a flare. He barely had the words out of his mouth when the roof of the house caved in on them as a bomb exploded right next to the building. The young officer found himself laying in the shattered doorway with debris and choking dust all around him. It took him a few minutes to clear his head and as he sat up he thought of Murphy.

The far wall of the house was down and small fires were burning. They provided just enough light for him to see that the table where his friend had been sitting was now buried in a pile of rubble. He tried to keep the panic from his voice as he called out "Murph, are you okay?" He frankly didn't expect a reply and was somewhat stunned when the gruff admonishing voice of the non-com was heard coming from the rubble. "Lieutenant, that was no damned flare!" he said. Murph would obviously live to fight another day.

The next day Connelly had recovered from his rather loud Birthday present from the Luftwaffe and received a piece of good news. He had finally gotten a letter from his brother, Pvt. Ralph Connelly. The Lieutenant knew from his mother's letters that Ralph had turned over the operation of his gas station in Mason City, Iowa to someone else and gone into the army in the fall of 1944. After that, information had been hard to come by. Now Roy learned that his older brother was somewhere in Italy. The letter was heavily censored so he didn't know exactly where he was, or what unit he was with, but he knew he was in the infantry and that he was still alive. It was a great relief.

Sometime after their children left home and the bills became easier to manage, 65-year-olds Michael and Johanna Connelly began to notice they were spending a lot of time on Interstate 390 — the road from their home in Livonia, Livingston County, to Rochester.

The city, after all, is where their interests are. Michael Connelly is a member of the Rochester Chess Club, and Johanna is constantly taking one course or another — such as tai chi or Russian — in the city.

They're both vegetarians, so they're big fans of city restaurants that cater to their diet. And then there are their favorite cultural institutions, such as the Little Theatre.

SHAWN DOWD staff photographer

Michael and Johanna Connelly, with Buddy, one of their dogs, wanted to move to the city but knew little about the neighborhoods. They used City Living bus tours as a way to start learning more.

"We started making yellow marks on the calendar every time we went to the city," Johanna Connelly said. "After a while, we realized we were going to the city four or five times a week."

So the Connellys decided to start looking for a house in Rochester. But though they knew how to get to places in the city, they didn't necessarily know how to get around the city.

"We didn't have any idea what might be a good place to live in the city," Connelly said.

The Connellys found a solution through a series of neighborhood bus tours the Landmark Society of Western New York offers in conjunction with City Living Sundays, an annual event that starts next week.

Every March, the city government sponsors a series of Sunday workshops designed to help potential buyers find a home in the city and learn about the financial programs that can help them pay for it.

Each workshop highlights a different area of the city and is held inside a school, with representatives from area lenders, real estate agencies and city neighborhoods to answer questions. Open houses are held on properties for sale in that area.

On the Saturday before each workshop, the Landmark Society offers a free bus tour of the city area that's being highlighted. Each tour takes about three hours.

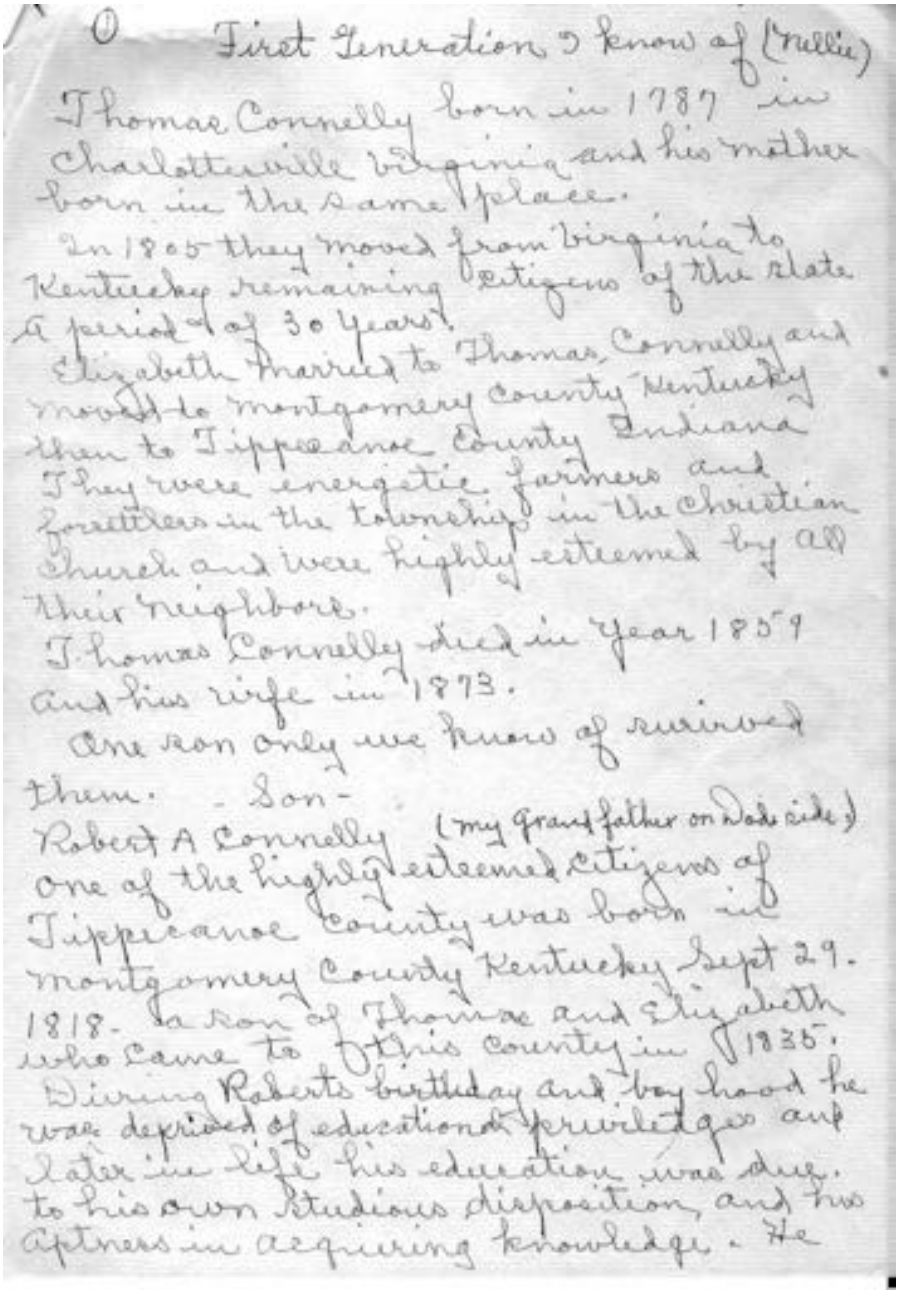
Connelly genealogy by Nellie Olive (Connelly) Rubins Wilkinson Fugate Hurlbut Vail, ID = 13252a

(Photocopies of the first two handwritten pages that Nellie - my great-grandfather's sister - wrote in 1973 (my estimate of the year). I have been able to confirm nearly all of this - I mentioned those few instances where I didn't confirm her work in a note at the bottom of each page. What joy I felt when I got a copy of Nellie's excellent work in the late 1970s. All genealogist should be so lucky as to have a great-aunt who had an interest in their family history & put what they knew down on paper !)



First Generation I know of (Nellie)

Thomas Connelly born in 1787 in Charlottesville Virginia and his mother born in the same place.

In 1805 they moved from Virginia to Kentucky remaining citizens of the state a period of of 30 years.

Elizabeth married to Thomas Connelly and moved to Montgomery County Kentucky then to Tippecanoe County Indiana They were energetic farmers and settlers in the township in the Christian Church and were highly esteemed by all their neighbors.

Thomas Connelly died in year 1859 and his wife in 1873.

One son only we know of survived them. - Son -

Robert A Connelly (my grandfather on Dad's side) one of the highly esteemed citizens of Tippecanoe County was born in Montgomery County Kentucky Sept 29. 1818. a son of Thomas and Elizabeth who came to this county in 1835.

During Roberts birthday and boy hood he was deprived of educational privileges and later in life his education was due to his own studious disposition, and his aptness in acquiring knowledge. He (Note by RRC: I suspect Thomas (ID = 132 in my genealogy) was born in Augusta Co., VA, not Charlottesville; based on his birth entry in the Gilmore Franklin Connely Bible, his surname was spelled Connely in his early life; based on his gravestone, it was spelled Conley later in life - as far as I know, he never spelled his surname Connelly - but his sons Thomas (ID = 1324) & Robert (ID = 1325) did.

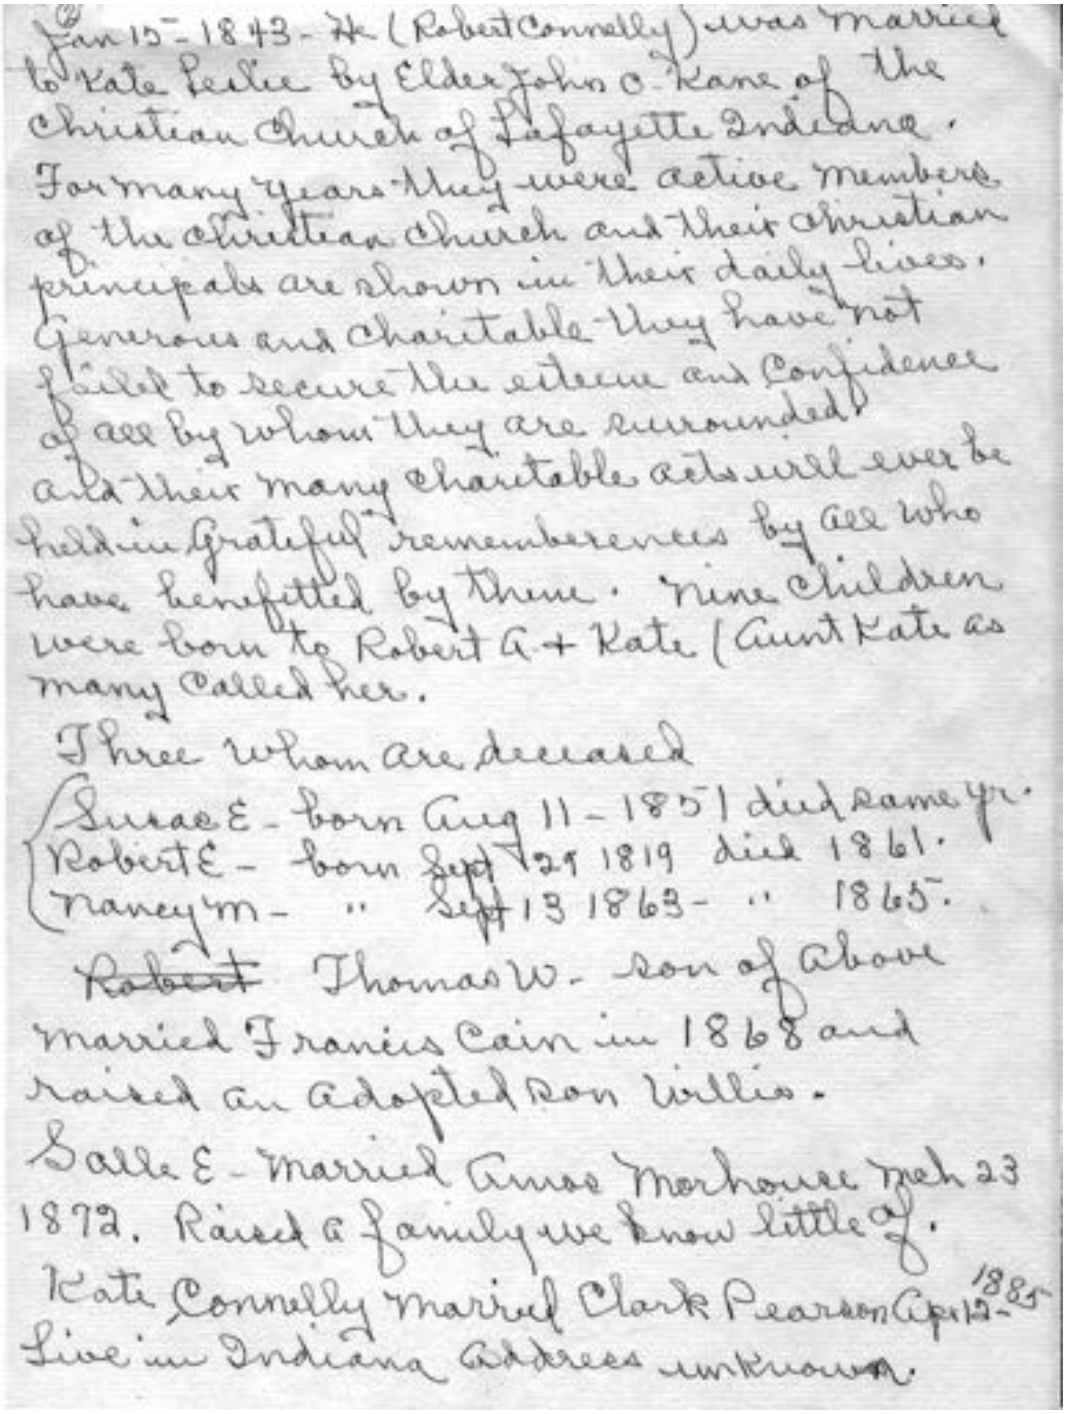
Based on other sources, Elizabeth (ID = 132) died in 1872, not 1873, and Robert (ID = 1325) was born in 1819, not 1818.)



Jan 15 - 1873 - H (Robert Connelly) was married to Kate Leslie By Elder John O. Kane of the Christian Church of Lafayette Indiana. For many years they were active members of the Christian Church and their christian principals are shown in their daily lives. Generous and Charitable they have not failed to secure the esteem and confidence of all by whom they are surrounded and their many charitable acts will ever be held in Grateful remembereness by all who have benefitted by them. Nine children were born to Robert A + Kate (Aunt Kate as many called her.

RANCHO MIRAGE - The newest homeowners in the Em Mirage community of Pacific Coast Builders on San Juan Drive, just of Gerald Ford Drive here, are raising flowers that will live for ages and be seen around the world.

Nationally known artist Emily Burns and her husband, "Skeeter" Rubins spent several months seeking a home in the Cove communities when the decision was made to move from Northern California.

The artist's eye sought the sense of the aesthetic in the Em Mirage community and an appreciation for the lifestyle led to the couple being the first home buyers in the builder's Phase II of development.

Ms. Burns, who has her studio in the new home, says the Em Mirage homes were designed for artists.

“The window system brings in wonderful light and the large yard gives me the opportunity to grow my own still life scenes," she says.

Ms. Burns is a native of Northern California where her family spent five generations in the same home surrounded by majestic trees and colorful flowers.

Her artistic skills were inherited from her parents, artists in their own right. The skills of the artist were perfected with study at the Dominican College in San Rafael where she earned a degree in fine arts.

After graduation, Ms. Burns traveled throughout Europe for additional study under a program designed by Professor Stuart Hyde of San Francisco State College.

Ms. Burns says she has a great love for the Southwest and from her Rancho Mirage home intends to travel the territory painting scenes dear to her heart -flowers, birds butterflies and even the "awesome color and form of the Grand Canyon."

The artist says most of her works are inspired by reflections of nature and feels the desert area contains enough of these reflections to last a lifetime of work.

Ms. Burns has had frequent exhibits of her art in the Zantman Galleries, Ltd., in Palm Desert and Carmel by the Sea showrooms. She has also exhibited in eastern galleries; the de Young Museum in San Francisco; the Springville Museum of Art in Springville, Utah; the Fine Arts Gallery in San Diego and the Laguna Gloria Museum of Art in Austin, Texas.

Studying in the Serengeti: George Frame & Lory (Herbison) Frame, ID = 13252a31

Wild Dogs, Cheetahs Studied By U.S. Couple In Tanzania

PHILADELPRIA - Lory Herbison Frame, 29, and her husband George, frequently spend two weeks at a time alone together, miles from other humans, in Tanzania's vast Serengeti National Park.

Just the two of them, alone in their long wheelbase landcruiser around them stretches the vast, flat Serengeti Plain. Above them, this night, is the vast, clear southern sky.

So what is going on in George and Lory's landcruiser?

Well, George is asleep in the back while Lory sits in the driver's seat, intently watching a pack of wild dogs, ready to start up and pursue should the dogs begin to move out.

Or Lory is asleep and George is watching the dogs. Or one of them is watching cheetahs instead of dogs. They have day watches and night watches, Lory says, because otherwise, "you are liable to wake up and find your animals are gone."

The Frames are naturalists. For the last three years they have been in Africa studying the population dynamics of cheetahs and wild dogs.

At first they were both studying cheetahs and dogs, but they found that that didn't work too well. They found that each was depending on the other to fill in research gaps and that sloppy work was the result.

So now she specializes in dogs and he concentrates on cheetahs and everything works out beautifully.

The Frames are graduate students at Utah State University.

Their research in Africa is financed by a number of grants and by articles the two write for nature and wildlife magazines.

Even that lacks some of the comforts of home. The nearest grocery store that carries a full line of canned goods is 250 miles away, in Nairobi, Kenya.

So is the nearest real hospital.

And when the Frames set out from the research institute, they are on their own, although Lory concedes that neighbors usually have a rough idea of when to expect them back.

Once, when she and George were watching a pack of dogs, two females left the group and struck out on their own seeking mates, something scientists had never seen.

The Frames took off after them, following them at a 25-mile-an-hour clip into a remote unfamiliar section of the park. "It was," Lory said, "The most exciting thing that has ever happened to us."

Lory's dogs have a bad reputation, particularly in what she calls the "white hunter literature." This, she says, is because men don't like the way the dogs kill their prey.

They hunt in packs, cooperating rather than competing, and they literally eat their prey to death. Victims usually are gazelles and young wildebeests.

The kill isn't pretty, but Lory insists that it is fast - that a gazelle is dead 30 seconds after being attacked and even a large wildebeest dies after a couple of minutes.

What impresses her about the dogs - which she says are actually less closely related to domestic dogs than are wolves and coyotes - is their altruism.

Altruism? In animals that can disembowel a gazelle in 30 seconds?

Yes, Lory said, it is evident in the way they treat their young. In fact, after a kill, the adult dogs in the pack will step back and wait patiently while the younger dogs eat their fill.

And although only one dog - the dominant female - is permitted to have puppies all dogs share in the care and feeding of the litter, which can number up to 16.

The dominant female and the dominant male do all the breeding, Lory said. And although subordinate females will leave the pack in search of mates, Lory suspects that subordinate males, who are "so scared of the dominant male that they don't get near a female" remain lifetime celibates.

The wild dogs range over a large part of Africa, Lory said, but are rare everywhere, with a population of only 200 per 10,000 square miles, compared with 4,000 for hyenas, 3,000 for lions and 500 to 1,000 for cheetahs.

Location & history of Mackinac Bridge; mentions James H. Cissel, ID = 132591
(Extracts by RRC from mackinaxbridge.org, online.)

The Mackinac Bridge is located on Interstate 75 in northern Michigan at the Straits of Mackinac. The bridge connects Michigan's upper and lower peninsulas. Mackinaw City is located at the south end of the bridge. St. Ignace is located at the north end of the Mackinac Bridge.

On July 1, 1888, the board of directors of the famous Grand Hotel at Mackinac Island held their first meeting and the minutes show that Cornelius Vanderbilt said: "We now have the largest, well-equipped hotel of its kind in the world for a short season business. Now what we need is a bridge across the Straits."

In 1923 the Legislature ordered the State Highway Department to establish a ferry service at the Straits. Within five years traffic on this facility became so heavy that the late Governor Fred Green ordered the same agency to make a study of bridge feasibility. The report was favorable and its cost was estimated at 30 million dollars. Some strides to get the project underway were taken but it was eventually dropped.

Writing in the Michigan Alumnus-Quarterly Review, spring 1937, the late James H. Cissel, Secretary of the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority, said:

"Early in 1934 the matter was again revived and proposed as a suitable P.W.A. project. In the extra session of 1934 the Legislature created the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority of Michigan and empowered it to investigate the feasibility of such construction and to finance the work by issuance of revenue bonds. The Authority began its studies in May 1934 and has been continuously active since that date.

Although limited funds precluded full and complete preliminary studies, the Authority was able to reach the conclusion that it was feasible to construct a bridge directly across the Straits at an estimated cost of not more than $32,400,000 for a combined two lane highway and one-track railway bridge. In its studies the Authority utilized soundings made by the War Department Engineers and was aided by the gratuitous counsel and advice of engineers and contractors experienced in work of this magnitude."

The Authority made two attempts between 1934 and 1936 to obtain loans and grants from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, but P.W.A. refused both applications despite endorsement by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the report that the late President Roosevelt favored the bridge.

Notwithstanding these setbacks, bridge backers resumed their efforts with their usual vigor. From 1936 to 1940 a new direct route was selected, borings were made, traffic, geologic, ice and water current studies of a very comprehensive nature were completed. A mole or causeway jutting 4,200 feet into the Straits from St. Ignace south was constructed. Preliminary plans for a double suspension span were drawn and the possibility of a bridge became very real. But the Armies of Europe began to march and bridge progress came to a halt. Finally, in 1947, the State Legislature abolished the Mackinac Straits Bridge Authority.

The five-mile bridge, including approaches, and the world's longest suspension bridge between cable anchorages, had been designed by the great engineer Dr. David B. Steinman.

The bridge was officially begun amid proper ceremonies on May 7 & 8, 1954, at St. Ignace and Mackinaw City.

The bridge opened to traffic on November 1, 1957 according to schedule, despite the many hazards of marine construction over the turbulent Straits of Mackinac.

I was told by Edith Moyne (Lancet) Mitchell (1898 IN - 1994 IN), ID = 133732, a granddaughter of Mary, that Mary's brothers George & Arthur came to Brazil, IN, in 1911; I think Edith was off by one year and the sibs got together in 1910. Edith was not looking at any of her records when we met at her home in IN. PINEVILLE VISITED BY FIRE THIS MORNING

Barrett Residence and Other Houses
Burned

Losses Will Aggregate About $7,000
It Is Estimated - Fire Started By a Negro Child Playing With a Match.

(From Thursday's Daily.)

Fire this morning between 9 and 10 o'clock destroyed the handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Barrett in Main street, Pineville, and also a large stable and two other small houses. The fire originated in a small house belonging to Mrs. R. Ferguson, and which was occupied by Stella Adkins, or Stella Wesley, a negro woman. This house, although a smal lone, was very close to the Barrett residence, and the flames were soon communicated to the larger house.

The lack of a waterworks system in Pineville was the cause of the destruction of this property, which was valued at about $7,000. A bucket brigade, which was quickly organized by the citizens of Pineville, packed water from wells and cisterns in the vicinity of the fire and saved the store and dwelling of Mrs. R. Ferguson, which was on the adjoining lot, and the store and dwelling of Mrs. M. McMain, which was on the opposite side of the street.

In the work of saving the McMain residence and store, there was no more active worker than Mrs. McMain's daughter, Mrs. Sunshine McMain Hoffman. This young lady soon had her shirts arranged so that they would not be in her way, and climbed to the top of the building and did her part, and more than her part in packing water from the rear end of the roof to the front end, where she handed it to the men who were keeping the front of the building wet.

Special Deputy Fire Marshall Frank W. Smith, of New Orleans, who was at the fire, investigated right away the cause of the blaze, and ascertained that Eleanor Wesley, the 4-year-old child of the negro woman who occupied the small house in which the fire originated, was playing with a match in the absence of her mother, and threw the burning match into a pile of clothes.

Mr. Barrett and his family have moved their furniture, which was saved from the burning house, into the rooms in the rear of the store, where Mr. and Mrs. Barrett lived many years before they erected their residence.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "smal lone" should be small one.)

Fire this morning between 9 and 10 o'clock destroyed the handsome residence of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Barrett in Main street, Pineville, and also a large stable and two other small houses. The fire originated in a small house belonging to Mrs. R. Ferguson, and which was occupied by Stelia Adkins, or Stella Wesley, a negro woman. This house, although a smal lone, was very close to the Barrett residence, and the flames were soon communicated to the larger house.

The lack of a waterworks system in Pineville was the cause of the destruction of this property, which was valued at about $7,000. A bucket brigade, which was quickly organized by the citizens of Pineville, packed water from wells and cisterns in the vicinity of the fire and saved the store and dwelling of Mrs. R. Ferguson, which was on the adjoining lot, and the store and dwelling of Mrs. M. McMain, which was on the opposite side of the street.

The bucket brigade also held the fire in check from reaching the double stores of Mr. Barrett, on the north side of the burning residence, until the arrival of the large chemical truck from the Alexandria fire department. Chief R. Neff and his boys worked under disadvantage until the arrival of the hook and ladder truck and the chemical apparatus. After this, they had the fire under control in a short time.

After the Barrett residence had fallen in, the large stable in the rear caught on fire and made a very hot blaze, and also a large pile of wood to the rear of the Barrett stores, made the work of saving the stores difficult for a time.

Ben Hall, a colored citizen, who owns two buildings on the opposite side of Main street, saved his houses from burning by using buckets of water.

For a time it seemed that the Ferguson residence and store would be burned from the excessive heat, although the wind was not blowing in that direction—in fact, the blaze from the Barrett building was going straight up in the air. The large oak trees in the Barrett yard and the china trees in the Ferguson yard protected other houses from the heat, but the trees were ruined.

The Barrett residence was a ten-room house, and one of the best built houses in Rapides parish, and for this reason it was burning for a great length of time before the frame work fell in, and this was the reason that the danger to other houses was of such long duration. Mr. Barrett had recently spent nearly a thousand dollars on repairs and repainting and papering the interior of the house. It was insured for about three thousand dollars, and the furniture for about $500, which does not cover one-third of the loss. Most of the furniture was saved from the building.

Mr. Barrett and family and his daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. James Dowdell, resided in the house. Mrs. Dowdell lost most of her belnogings, as they were in the second story rooms.

In the work of saving the McMain residence and store, there was no more active worker than Mrs. McMain's daughter, Mrs. Sunshine McMain Hoffman. This young lady soon had her skirts arranged so that they would not be in her way, and climbed to the top of the building and did her part, and more than her part in packing water from the rear end of the roof to the front end, where she handed it to the men who were keeping the front of the building wet.

Graduates from Louisiana College - Thomas Louis McMain, ID = 1331658

(Copy of a photocopy of the original article in The Town Talk, Alexandria, LA, Thursday, 28 May 1964, page 29.)

In Hospital Ceremony

Paralyzed Student Receives L. C. Diploma After 14 Years

None of the 115 members of Louisiana College's 1968 graduating class is prouder of his degree than Thomas L. McMain.

The 43-year-old McMain was unable to attend the college's convocation Tuesday night at Alumni Stadium.

However, he was presented the diploma in his room at the Alexandria Baptist Hospital Wednesday afternoon.

McMain, paralyzed from the waist down, received the degree from Dr. Edward L. McMillan, L. C. dean.

This climaxed McMain's collegiate career which started nearly 14 years ago.

Pollock High Graduate

McMain graduated from Pollock High School in 1946. Then followed four years in the U. S. Army Medical Corps. Twenty-eight months of this were spent overseas during World War II. He was in combat in five major campaigns.

While stationed in England just prior to the invasion of Europe, he suffered a spinal injury. As a result, he has been on crutches or confined to a wheel chair since 1955.

The Elmer native entered Louisiana College in the fall of 1950 intent on becoming a minister. However, he was forced to leave school three and a half years later. He lacked only three hours in mathematics qualifying for a bachelor's degree.

At that time, he accepted a position here with the state welfare department as a case worker. That was in 1954. He still holds this job, although currently working only half-time.

His Wife Insisted

Upon the insistence of his wife, McMain enrolled in the spring-semester evening school at L. C. He successfully completed the three - hour math course that he needed for the B. A. degree.

His professor in the math course was Roy Bernard, a former L. C. classmate.

On May 19, McMain was forced to enter Baptist hospital because of a vascular condition and was unable to attend the Louisiana College commencement exercises.

"I don't know when I'll be released from the hospital," the bright-eyed patient observed Wednesday. "I hope it will be soon. I'm anxious to get back to my job. And I hope to begin working full-time again soon."

"I believe all things work for good for those who love the Lord. I used to feel awfully sorry for myself, but I don't any more. For I believe my affliction and tough luck will help me render better service in my welfare work. This especially applies to the handicapped people that I will counsel."

McMain's bachelor's degree was in social studies.

Parents Deceased

He is the son of the late Thomas L. McMain Sr. and the late Alice Carruth McMain of Elmer. His first three years in high school were spent at Oak Hill.

His wife is the former Mary Maxine Sanderson, daughter of Mrs. Leona Sanderson, also of Elmer. She is an Oak Hill High graduate.

"I'd like to thank the Louisiana College students and faculty members, especially Prof. Bernard, for helping me during the last semester. The students were especially wonderful in helping me get around in my wheel chair. I'll never forget them," the new L. C. graduate commented. McMain and his wife live in Alexandria.

Archeologist and historian Irving Reade Eyster, ID = 13321321

(Article entitled EXPLORING OLD FLORIDA WITH 'MR. HISTORY', by Julie Botteri, found online at the Florida Keys Tourism website.)

Archeologist and historian Irving Reade Eyster, active and enthusiastic even at age 90, tells the history of the Keys and Key West — the way old-time residents dream the islands should remain.

His thousands of artifacts, and lectures such as “Fortunes Made and Lost in the Florida Keys,” represent valuable materials chronicling Keys history, enough to fill a much-anticipated museum that locals hope will open at an Islamorada location.

Eyster’s interest in the Keys started at a young age after his grandfather, Dr. Jeremiah Reade, planted the seed with a story about an isolated island called Indian Key, Indian lore and shipwreck salvagers.

The 11-acre island’s town, complete with first-class hotel, bowling alley and warehouses, was burned to the ground by raiding Seminole Indians on Aug. 7, 1840, after they discovered the island’s owner, Jacob Housman, had offered to hunt them for bounty.

Rebuilt 30 years after the raid, Indian Key was part of the old Florida Dr. Reade traversed in 1883, a place now indelibly marked in Irving Eyster’s memory.

Eyster eventually would become known as “Mr. Indian Key.”

In 1947, a one-day visit to Key West after the Miami Air Show cemented Irving and his wife Jeane’s adventurous interest in the islands. In 1952 the couple, both pilots, relocated by car from Indiana.

Irving and Jeane determinedly walked the length of the Keys from Key Largo to Key West. One drove while the other ambled, “beach-seeking” and pursuing archeological interests. At that that time, the few tourists were weekend anglers from Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

In a later article, “Keys Remembered: Tales of Islamorada and the Old Florida,” Eyster recollected the 1950s Keys much like his journalist grandfather had done in the 1880s. “The Keys were in a wild state, jungles with birds and lots of critters, and only a few houses, separated by dense woods,” Eyster wrote.

“The road (U.S. Highway 1) went through a tunnel of trees in many places. A house would show up every few miles, or maybe a boat and bait shop at a bridge end, sometimes with a restaurant next door.”

In fact, he said, when he and Jeane came to Lower Matecumbe 56 years ago, they were the eighth family to build there.

Eyster recalled schools of bonefish numbering in the hundreds, 30-foot-long whale sharks in the waters outside their home and their fears during the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis: missile launchers dangerously close and, offshore, flags atop Soviet ships headed to Cuba visible on the busy southbound shipping lanes.

During his years in the Keys, Eyster became a driving force in the restoration and preservation of valuable historic properties and sites, including the San Pedro memorial, the tiny railroad camp on Pigeon Key and the San Carlos Institute in Key West.

In addition, he taught archeology and anthropology at Florida International University, the University of Miami and Miami-Dade Community College, and was a Dade County archeologist for two years. A member of the Society of Professional Archeologists, Eyster served on the Historic Florida Keys Preservation Board for 16 years and was president of the Matecumbe Historical Board.

On Dec. 12, 2005, Key West's San Carlos Institute celebrated "Irving Eyster Day" in recognition of his 30 years on the board, and presented him their highest award.

Eyster also wrote a number of books including "Indian Key," "Handbook of South Florida Archaeology," "Islamorada and More" and, in honor of the man who inspired his passion for Keys history, "Dr. Jeremiah Reade Explores Florida in 1882-1883."

Despite these many accomplishments, Eyster's work on Indian Key remains his proudest archeological accomplishment. Between 1968 and 1970 he led the state's excavation of the site and later inaugurated the Indian Key Festival, forging trails and tours of the island. He focused on the island's historical significance and awakened the state's interest in designating it a park, thereby earning the nickname "Mr. Indian Key."

With daughter Barbara Edgar, Irving and Jeane Eyster created The Matecumbe Historical Trust Inc., a nonprofit organization dedicated to the education, history and preservation of the Florida Keys for future generations and visitors to discover.

"The past belongs to the future, but only the present can preserve it," Eyster said.

Guy was sent to Iceland, where he remained for 16 months, going from there to England, where he was stationed for five months and on to Ireland for three months. While in Ireland he contracted rheumatic fever and was confined to a base hospital there. He is now receiving treatment at a government hospital at Galesburg, Ill.

Clarence was sent overseas in 1941, being stationed in England and Ireland where he is still on duty. The brothers were able to visit each other three times, while Guy was in England and Ireland.

Both boys are former carrier salesmen for the Indianapolis News and the Linton Daily Citizen, Guy having eight years to his credit and Clarence ten years.

Biography of Alfred R. Ellithorp, father of Viola Amanda (Ellithorp) Connelly, ID = 13388

(Found online; probably transcribed by Tom & Carolyn Ward, Columbus, KS; from “A Standard History of Kansas and Kansans”, written and compiled by William E. Connelley, Secretary of the Kansas State Historical Society, Topeka. [Revised ed.] Chicago: Lewis Publishing Co., 1919, c1918. 5 v. Alfred R. Ellithorp

ALFRED R. ELLITHORP. Many opinions have been expressed that farming in Western Kansas is a very uncertain proposition. Considered from the standpoint of any individual year this is true. But taking a period of twenty-five years and considering the results, it is doubtful if any farming district has made better returns for the labor and money expended, considering all conditions, and it was the settlers who refused to become discouraged, who stuck to their posts in spite of several crop failures, and continued until they could realize the aggregate results rather than the returns from any one year, who have shared in and now enjoy the magnificent prosperity of that district.

Among the many who have had this pleasant experience none are better known in Lane County than Mr. and Mrs. Alfred R. Ellithorp of Healy. They have been Kansans for nearly half a century, have lived in Lane County thirty-one years, and their lives have run side by side as husband and wife for more than half a century. They went through the early trials and hardships, they have seen their children grow up, receive liberal advantages in schools, and establish themselves in their own homes, and Mr. and Mrs. Ellithorp now have leisure and ample means for the full enjoyment of life. In 1893 they made an extended visit to the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and in 1915 they went west and attended the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Diego and San Francisco, had an ocean voyage from San Francisco to Seattle, saw a great deal of the Northwest, and then returned by rail across the Rocky Mountains to their Kansas home.

Before taking up Mr. Ellithorp's career in Kansas, it will be well to go back and note his birth and his family relationship. He was born in Ottawa County, Ohio, not far from the shore of Lake Erie, on October 3, 1842. His paternal ancestors were of French origin, though for many generations residents in America. His mother was a Dyer, of the Mohawk Dutch-stock of New York, her mother being a Bouk. Asa Ellithorp, father of Alfred R., was born in New York, and on reaching his majority moved to Ohio, and was married in Ottawa County to Olive Dyer. He spent his career chiefly as a farmer, was a whig and later a republican in politics, and while living in New York he served as a member of the State Militia. In 1847 he moved with his family to a farm near Elburn, Illinois, where he died in 1880, at the age of sixty-four. His widow survived him and died in Miami County, Kansas, November 18, 1903, when past eighty-two years of age. Their children were: Owen, who died at Gainesville, Texas, leaving a family; Alfred R.; Alice, who married Oscar Gardner, of Miami County, Kansas; Orren, of Chicago; and Minta, who while a victim of dementia cremated herself with gasoline at Oakley, Kansas, and by her marriage to Denton Miller left four children.

Alfred R. Ellithorp was five years of age when his parents moved to Kane County, Illinois, and he grew up on a farm there and obtained a common school education. He was married in Kane County, Illinois, November 29, 1866, to Miss Louisa Pike. Mrs. Ellithorp was born June 23, 1841, a daughter of Adam and Amanda (Chase) Pike. Her father was born in Vermont of old English-Scotch stock and her mother was a native of New Hampshire of English parentage. Adam Pike and wife spent their lives in St. Lawrence County, New York, where they died. Their children who grew up were: Adam, who spent most of his life in New York but died in Texas; George, who lived in New York State; Mrs. Ellithorp; Solon and Sarah, twins, the former of whom died in St. Lawrence County, New York, and Sarah died unmarried; Amanda, who died at the age of fifteen.

Mrs. Ellithorp completed her education in the Gouverneur Wesleyan Seminary of St. Lawrence County, New York. She taught several schools in her native state, being paid wages of two dollars a week and boarding around among the pupils. In 1865 she went to Illinois, was hired as a teacher at Elburn in Kane County, and was given twenty-four dollars a month for her services. She was promised an increase if she would take the school again, but in the meantime she had met Mr. Ellithorp and they determined to get married, a decision which terminated her work as a school teacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellithorp had three children, Theron Solon, Viola Amanda and Walton Asa. Theron S. now conducts a garage at Everett, Washington, and by his marriage to Carrie Franklin, of Evanston, Illinois, has a daughter, Viola May. Viola Amanda graduated with the degree A. B. from the Salina Normal College, was a teacher in Lane County, and finally married William A. Connelly. She died at Kelley, New Mexico, in May, 1896. The son, Walton A., is connected with the Grand Union Tea Company at Mount Vernon, Washington, He married Emma Langley.

In 1869, a few years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Ellithorp came out to Kansas and settled on a farm near Louisburg. They lived there enjoying moderate prosperity for nearly twenty years. In the meantime Mr. Ellithorp was looking out for a location in Western Kansas, and about 1886 entered land in Lane County, his homestead being at the east half of section 22, township 17, range 30. He brought his family to that locality in February, 1887, and that became his permanent home in the county.

His first house or shelter was a dugout of a single room. It was impossible to ventilate the dwelling, and the fleas were so numerous that the conditions kept Mrs. Ellithorp in a state of illness all the time they lived in the dugout. In the course of the same year they built a soddy of two rooms. This was plastered and floored, but the roof was also of sod, and it generally leaked for a day or two after a big rain. Notwithstanding that, it was a comfortable dwelling both winter and summer. In 1888 they built a frame house, though they were so much attached to the old sod residence that they did not abandon it for several years afterward.

When he came to Lane County Mr. Ellithorp's experience as a farmer had been chiefly identified with corn as a crop. He started planting corn but soon found it did not pay. He then turned his attention to wheat. Almost from the first he had a considerable stock of cattle and was one of the pioneer dairymen in Lane County. The milk from their cows was sold to the cheese factory at Dighton, where the cheese was made up for the Ellithorps and sold abroad through commission men. As a result of chicanery which too often has marked the dealings of the producer with commission men, Mr. Ellithorp usually failed to get his money and the cheese factory soon became bankrupt. From about 1891 the Ellithorps sowed wheat as a regular crop. The first harvest proved the worth of the soil as a grain producer. Occasionally they failed to get back their seed during the early nineties but in the years following they more than made up this loss. Thus with the general improvement of conditions in recent years the Ellithorps were on the ground, had the land, had the experience and were ready to share generously in the prosperity.

Besides his homestead Mr. Ellithorp took up a timber claim, and those two quarter sections composed the nucleus of his farming interests. With the proceeds of the property which he sold in Miami County and with the results of his homestead in Lane County he was able to buy other land. When he finally sold out his farming interests in 1905 he owned a section and a half. He had bought a few quarter sections at a very low cost, but for one improved quarter he paid $8,000. When he sold his land he moved to Healy, and while his means would enable him to live retired, he has shown no disposition to rest altogether and has occupied himself with various interests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellithorp aided in the organization of school district No. 30, which is now consolidated with the Healy District. While it existed as an independent district Mr. Ellithorp was a member of the board and a part of the time his wife was also a director. Their pioneer school was held in Mr. Anderson's barn near the Ellithorp farm, and its teacher was Jennie Collier, who came from Kentucky. The Ellithorps helped build both the Christian and the Methodist churches near Healy, but have membership in neither denomination. As to his political experience Mr. Ellithorp is a republican, having cast his maiden vote for President Grant in 1868. Besides service on the board of Cheyenne Township he was county commissioner one term, succeeding Theodore Messick. The important work of this heard was the refunding of the railroad bonds. The board also did a good deal of opening and laying out of roads, and Mr. Ellithorp was so active in that work that he has often been referred to as the "road commissioner."

Skillet Springs: Is Dalton Treasure Buried There?

Velma Nieberding

It's been a long time since the Dalton gang of gunslingers rode through the blackjack hills and up the brushy river bottoms of Northeastern Oklahoma, dodging bullets and streaking to the safety of a hideout.

It's been a long time - 74 years ago last week (Oct 5) to be exact - since the Daltons were cut down in Coffeyvi1le trying to rob two banks at once. Two of the Dalton brothers, Grat and Bob, died there. Emmett, the one who tried to emulate his hero, Jesse James, the one who loved (and stole), good horses, was so critically wounded that he was thought to be dying, or the indignant citizens of Coffeyvi11e would have helped him through the pearly gates then and there. But Emmett, bullet-punctured as he was, recovered, served time in prison, and in 1908 was released. From then until he died in 1937 he was a person of considerable interest, a colorful but essentially a model citizen.

After 74 years Ottawa county can't forget the Da1tons. Part of this is because the family lived on Horse Creek, near Afton, before the boys "went bad," and the Dalton family was liked by many early settlers. For instance, Mrs. Blanche Doty, now a resident of a Miami nursing home, remembers that her husband, the late George Doty, worked with Emmett Dalton. The two had the job of training the race horses owned by the Dotys. Emmett once raced a horse for Scott Audrain, Cherokee pioneer of Fairland.

But it is not these things that intrigue those who study the Da1tons and their ways today. The apocryphal stories that get better with each telling often deal with money the Daltons supposedly hid when some posse was hot on their trail. It has been established that Skillet Springs, located in the sandy hills west of Stepp's Ford, was a Dalton hideout. Those who study such things say the carvings on the big gray rocks, the natural fireplace, and chipped-out steps leading to a lookout are all Dalton signs. The turkey foot sign, said to be a Dalton mark, is found in this area and on trees and rocks as far north as Chetopa, Kan.

Claude Ray, a farmer who lives west of Stepp's Ford, agrees that Skillet Springs has a cave where it was said that money was hidden by outlaws (first the Daltons and later other gangs) until they had time to retrieve it.

Bob Creech of Commerce, now 92 years old, knew the Daltons and arrived in Coffeyville about 15 minutes after the shoot-out there. Creech was a deputy marshall who served under Judge Isaac Parker. He said that several times he chased characters wanted by the law into the region of Skillet Springs. They seemed to melt into the bushes, and he invariable lost the trail.

So during World War I, when a man calling himself Albert Hilton, but whose wife confided to certain people that he was in reality Emmett Dalton, began to work in the mines, he was a person of considerable interest to Commerce. Particularly so because the Hiltons, always carrying a map, spent a lot of time digging for money supposedly hidden in the vicinity of Commerce and at Skillet Springs.

Whether they found the money they sought is not known. Gene Davis, who now lives in California, and Charles Smith of Commerce, were young boys then. Mrs. Hilton frequently hired them to dig for her at designated spots and once paid them with a gallon jug filled with Indian-head pennies.

Smith, a nephew of the late Hal Michelson, Commerce undertaker, recalled that when Hilton died in 1950 the widow paid funeral expenses with silver coins that apparently had been buried. Another account says these coins would "have filled a good-sized milk bucket." Smith also revealed that Mrs. Hilton often had told the two boys that her husband, living the life of an ordinary miner, was in fact Emmett Dalton. Smith said he saw his body and that it was scarred with knife and bullet wounds.

The most persistent researcher into this story of whether Hilton was a Dalton has been James Minson, Commerce grocer. It took him several years to locate the Skillet Springs hideout. On his first visit to that area he unearthed two iron tomahawks. Since then he has visited the spot often, studying the strange markings on the rocks, searching for a cave where the Da1tons reputedly hid their loot.

But some time during the years, the cave has been covered up, perhaps deliberately. Those who found it once have been unable to relocate it. Recently a morden treasure hunter somehow got some mechanized equipment into the almost inaccessible area and dug several deep holes near the old hideout. The deepest is near the rock bearing the letters AOUW and three arrows. The operation was carried out so secretly that the people who own the land knew nothing about it.

Harold Preece, writer of western books, is an authority on the Daltons. His book "The Dalton Gang," published by Hastings House in 1964, is considered the most definitive work ever done on the gang and its doings. Preece, who is a Texan transplanted to New York, worked for years gathering information for his book. He states that Emmett died in California in 1937, was cremated, and his ashes returned to Coffeyville.

As long as there are people to tell stories or to speculate on the mysteries of other people's lives, as long as there is the hope of finding buried treasure, the Daltons will keep on riding. Old-timers who actually knew Emmett Dalton scoff at the idea that he ever worked in the district mines under an assumed name. That Hilton was looking for money, possibly buried by some gang is a fact. Ray, who worked with Emmett in Tulsa in 1924, and Creech, who knew him as a young man, both state emphatically when they see his picture, "Hilton was not Emmett Dalton."

But hideouts like Skillet Springs, where the water drips into a skillet-shaped rock and trickles through the sandy soil to a crude dam to water cattle and perhaps an occasional deer, will continue to fascinate those who know the story. Was Hilton perhaps a member of the old Dalton crowd, or did he possibly belong to a band of late outlaws? Did his wife tell the tale to two eager boys to keep them digging for money she thought was hidden in the area. Did the Hiltons actually find a saddle-bag filled with gold under a flat rock near Skillet Springs? History is silent-probably forever.

Bob Creech, as a young deputy in Judge Isaac Parker's court at Fort Smith, knew the Daltons. He chased outlaws into the Skillet Springs area but always lost them.

for twenty-one years. There, Mr. and Mrs. Upchurch endured hardships, that only a pioneer can imagine, as this country was new, and there were no conveniences.

In March 1909, they moved to Meriden, and bought a farm known as the "Geer Farm"- later moving to their present home. Mr. and Mrs. Upchurch have lived in and near Meriden for twenty-seven years.

"The happiest time of my life," Mrs. Upchurch explained, "is my Fiftieth and my Fifty-ninth Anniversary; to be spared to reach this climax of life; and I am especially thankful to have my children, grandchildren, and great grandchildren to help us celebrate another "Milestone in Life".

Mr. and Mrs. Upchurch were always kind and loving to their children and especially to their grandchildren. Mrs. Upchurch has always been a true "grandmother". She loved her

ARTHUR LEE CONNELY (1849-1933)

A family member included in the condensed history presented in the last issue of the newsletter (Vol. 2, Nos. 3 & 4) participated in one of the most difficult and trying military marches in western history, the one made by the 19th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry from Topeka, Kansas, to Camp Supply, Oklahoma, in November of 1868. His ordeal was probably worse than any other member of this unit. This issue of the newsletter describes his trials and tribulations and presents a brief account of related people, places and events.

Arthur Lee Connely was born in Putnam County, Indiana, on 19 December 1849, the third child of Robert and Merelda Connely. At the age of five he moved with his family to what is now Atchison County, Kansas, near the northeast corner of the state and just north of Fort Leavenworth. On 19 October 1868, he joined the U.S. Army at Atchison, enlisting in Company B of the 19th Kansas Cavalry for six months. His enlistment papers (at the National Archives) show he was 19 years old, a farmer, had blue eyes, dark brown hair, light complexion, and was five feet eight inches tall.

Although the Civil War was over, the nation was still at war with the Indians. The Union Army had been reorganized into an Indian-fighting force. The Division of the Missouri was established under Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman and comprised four departments. One of these, the Department of the Missouri, covered the whole state of Kansas. This department launched a military campaign against the tribes in Kansas and the Indian Territory (present day Oklahoma) that resulted in the decimation of a Cheyenne Indian village on November 27, 1868. Since the misfortunes of Arthur Connely were indirectly related to that Indian massacre, known to history as "The Battle of the Washita", I would like to first go back to 1866 and examine the major events leading up to that fateful day in 1868. In so doing, I will draw heavily from the excellent book by Stan Hoig entitled "The Battle of the Washita", Doubleday, Garden City, New York, 1976. All quotes are from this book.

Copyright 1980 Roger R. Connelly

One of the leading military figures of those days was Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer. He arrived at Fort Riley, Kansas, in October of 1866 for post Civil War service on the prairies of the West, and was made field commander of the 7th Regiment of the U.S. Cavalry. "Custer was... responsible for training of a mostly green enlisted force. Cavalry drills and tactics were based upon Civil War experience; no one yet knew a thing about fighting Plains Indians."

He commanded an unsuccessful campaign against the Plains Indians in western Kansas for six months and was eventually court-martialed and suspended from command, work, and pay for one full year in Nov 1867. The Indians "were riding the prairies of western Kansas like angry hornets, and the ineptness of Custer in finding and striking them only increased their contempt for the Army. Custer ... spent the fall and winter at Fort Leavenworth, then he returned... to Monroe, Michigan, where he wrote self praisingly of his adventures in the plains."

"A multitude of forces called for a solution to the Indian problem in Kansas in 1867; the nation debated the question of how to do it. Both the Army and the frontier whites believed the only solution was to soundly punish the tribes and force them to remain on isolated reserves, if not to kill them off outright. The Indian Bureau and many citizens not living on the frontier sought a peaceful and humane solution. Accordingly, Congress approved a bill.. establishing a peace commission to work out new treaties with the various tribes of the central plains."

In Oct 1867 a peace commission met with the tribes at Medicine Lodge Creek, some sixty miles south of Fort Larned and treaties duly signed. It was said the Chiefs signed it merely as a matter of form; not one word of the treaty was read to them. "The misleading promise that the tribes would be free to roam and hunt in western Kansas just as always would seriously strain the peace in days ahead."

"During the winter of 1867-68, the Indian situation in Kansas enjoyed a quiet, post-Medicine Lodge interlude with only a few disturbances. However, the Cheyennes felt that they were being cheated because the government had not fulfilled any of its treaty promises. The chiefs said they were still holding on to the peace made at Medicine Lodge, but the young warriors exhibited the same angry contempt for the government and white soldiers as before."

"During the early spring of 1868 an important change of command had been made in the military department of the Missouri. Major General Phil Sheridan, the general under whom Custer had served through the Civil War, was transferred to command at Fort Leavenworth. "In order to keep himself informed on the Indian situation, Sheridan moved his headquarters from Leavenworth to Fort Hays."

On August 10, 1868, on Spellman's Creek about 16 to 18 miles above Ellsworth, a predominately Cheyenne war party had entered the house of a settler, beaten the man, and committed repeated acts of rape upon his wife and her sister. This was only the first of numerous depredations that the war party would commit along the Saline and the Solomon rivers during three days of brutal strikes at the white settlements."

"Sheridan reported that thirteen settlers had been killed by Indians during the attacks... General Sherman, then in Omaha, received Sheridan's reports on the Cheyenne depredations and responded with an immediate call for their removal south of the Kansas line, and if pursuing, to kill if necessary. Both Sheridan and Sherman, knowing the inadequacy of the Army to catch the Indian warrior on the plains, were convinced that the only way to effectively punish the warring tribes was to find their villages and hit them."

Indian-hunting expeditions led by Forsyth and Sully in the fall of 1868 were both failures." Sheridan was angry and disgusted. He discussed the idea of a winter campaign with officers and others at Fort Hayes, asking if they thought an army could be sustained on the open plains in winter. Many thought so, but some did not."

"But Sheridan already had his mind made up and made his proposal to Sherman and General of the Army Ulysses S. Grant, who was then campaigning for the presidency, and was given approval. He now set about making his plans and accumulating men and supplies for a three-pronged drive into Indian Territory. One prong, comprising eleven companies of the 7th Cavalry, a battalion of five companies of infantry, and twelve companies of 19th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, would march due south into the Territory and, within a hundred miles of Fort Dodge, established a supply base from which a strike against the Indians could be launched."

"Sheridan was in dire need of a field commander in whom he had confidence, and that could mean only Custer, long a favorite with him. A request to Sherman was all that was required to get Custer's court-martial sentence remitted. Custer joined the 7th Regiment at camp on Bluff Creek thirty miles south of Fort Dodge in early October."

On November 12, 1868, he broke camp on the Arkansas River below Fort Dodge and began for the Indian Territory with a huge supply train of several hundred army wagons containing materials and implements for constructing a new fort. "The command reached Wolf Creek three miles above its juncture with the Beaver at noon on Nov 18 and went into camp. A site just above the confluence of the two streams was selected for the new post, now named Camp Supply."

The 7th Cavalry departed from Camp Supply on Nov 23. Sheridan's orders to Custer were simple and direct: "To proceed south, in the direction of the Antelope Hills, thence towards the Washita River, the supposed winter seat of the hostile tribes; to destroy their villages and ponies; to kill or hang all warriors, and bring back all women and children."

"...at daybreak on November 27, 1868, the 7th Regiment of United States Cavalry, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer, attacked and massacred the village of Cheyenne Indians under Black Kettle on the Washita River in Indian Territory. Black Kettle and Chief Little Rock were killed, along with more than a hundred other men, women, and children of the tribe. The village was burned and nearly eight hundred horses were shot."

But where was the 19th Kansas Cavalry and Arthur Connely of Company K? As we have seen, they were supposed to be part of the prong that marched south through Kansas into the Indian Territory to establish Camp Supply. But their march, which began from Topeka and was longer than that of Custer's 7th Cavalry, was also more difficult and trying. Let us now go back to just prior to the formation of the 19th Kansas Cavalry and then follow their march towards Camp Supply, again drawing heavily on the description provided by Stan Hoig.

In the fall of 1868, the Governor of Kansas, Samuel J. Crawford, "wired to Sheridan offering to raise a battalion of picked men if the Army would furnish carbines. Sheridan immediately accepted the proposition, and on September 14 Crawford issued a proclamation calling for troops to be organized into militia for service on the frontier." Thus the 19th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry was born; enlistment would be for six months.

"On November 4, with orders from Sheridan to march immediately for the Indian Territory, Crawford resigned his governor's office to become commanding colonel of the new regiment. On the morning of the fifth, the handsomely uniformed 19th Kansas, a thousand strong, rode proudly and confidently Southwest out of Topeka."

"The first camp was made that afternoon on the Wakarusa. It rained most of the next day. The last signs of civilization quickly disappeared as the Kansas volunteers rode mile after mile, eventually striking the rutted Santa Fe Trail, which led them to Burlingame and on to the Neosho River."

"Now came the nemesis of armies throughout history - mud! It virtually pulled the shoes from the horses as they passed through it. Nor was there any relief when the unit reached Emporia. On the evening of November 7, camp was made near Cottonwood Falls, and on the 9th the regiment passed a man who was at work building a cabin. The man told the troops that he was starting a town, which he planned to name ElDorado. Later they encamped near a homestead settlement to the west which was called Towanda."

"The small settlement of Wichita, with some two hundred inhabitants, stood at the juncture of the little Arkansas with the Arkansas. Some two miles distant was Camp Beecher. The 19th went in to camp between the two rivers."

"From here on, the country was virtually unknown, and the maps were extremely vague. To proceed into uncharted territory with grossly inadequate supplies, unseasoned horses, and only partially disciplined troops, during winter, was a hazardous undertaking. On the other hand, Sheridan had given orders and was waiting."

"After a couple of days' rest, the 19th began crossing the Arkansas on the morning of November 14. On the evening of the eighteenth, the regiment reached the Chikaskia. Medicine Lodge Creek was reached on the eighteenth, and it was there that a near disaster struck the regiment (when about eighty horses were lost). The regiment moved out on the nineteenth. The men without horses were put in the rear and the mounted men would trade off with them a few miles at a time."

"Since leaving the Arkansas River, the troops had been supplementing their meager rations with fresh buffalo meat killed for them by hunting parties. On the twenty-second, just north of the Cimarron, the hunters were unsuccessful in finding any game. The only food in camp that night was sugar cubes counted out three to the man."

"It had begun to snow on the twenty-first, and by dark there was over five inches of snow on the ground, eighteen by morning. Orders were given not to ride the horses without permission, though the men with frozen feet had to do so anyway. Some of them wept in regret that they had ever come on this expedition, others muttered threats of desertion. When several men had deserted earlier, no one went after them, as hardly anyone could bring himself to really blame them."

"Crawford decided to send a force on ahead to contact Sheridan, if possible, and have supplies sent back. They rode off into the snowstorm on the evening of the twenty-second, the same storm in which Custer and the 7th Cavalry would march toward the Washita on the following morning. The rest of Crawford's command lay in camp on the twenty-third, the snow falling so heavily that it was impossible to move."

"Finally the morning of November 24 broke clear, and the company moved out. Camp was made that night near some high hills that were covered with hackberry trees. The men climbed through the trees devouring the hackberries by handfuls. Though the name of this camp was officially designated as 'Camp Hackberry Point', it became famous to the men of the 19th as 'Camp Starvation'."

"Another decision was now made. Close to five hundred men were selected to push on to join Sheridan, while some six hundred were left behind. The latter group was to remain at Camp Starvation until they could be rescued."

Arthur Connely was one of the six hundred members of the 19th who remained at Camp Starvation. The nearly five hundred who left Camp Starvation on November 25 reached Camp Supply on Nov 28. Men with supplies went back to Camp Starvation and rescued all those left behind. All, that is, except for Arthur! Just before the rescue party reached Camp Starvation, Arthur and several other men were sent out from camp to hunt for buffalo. Arthur became lost in a snowstorm and could not find his way back to camp. He finally decided to head towards civilization and some twelve days later reached Towando, Kansas. He caught cold and was sick all this time. Some details regarding this ordeal are provided in an affidavit he signed over 24 years later when he applied for an invalid pension:

Affidavit of Claimant, Arthur L Connely
State of Kansas, County of Labette

Arthur L Connely, being duly sworn on oath says that he was a member of Company "B", 19th Regiment Kansas Cavalry Volunteers and is an applicant for invalid pension No. 1026.709.

That on or about the 1st of December 1868, his command was in the Indian Territory, south of Wichita Kansas, over he believes 200 miles. That his command became short of provisions, so much so, that a detail made up of men from all the companies were sent out to kill buffalo. That he was one of the men detailed from his company. That the weather was very inclement, the snow was about one foot deep. That the detail went out east from the camp, started early in the morning, and went probably ten miles. The men scattered all over the prairies in hunt of buffalo. Claimant went with two others, and we killed a buffalo. The two men claimed they had killed the buffalo and I started after a buffalo calf. I know not how far I traveled, when I got it killed and got ready to start back, the snow was blowing so hard, had covered up my tracks. I got lost. It snowed and was cloudy for three other days. I wandered around all the time, hunting for the trail or for the camp. When night would come I would lie down behind some bank. I took cold the first night, and remained sick all the time. I spent three days in searching for trail or camp, never met any person during that time. On the fourth day it cleared up, then I made up my mind it was useless to search for the trail or camp, and started for settlements in Kansas. I traveled as near as I could north by north east. I was out nine days and nights till I got to Towando, now in Butler Kansas, during this I saw not a person or any signs of persons. I lived on the piece of calf I started, and a jackrabbit and an owl, and my horse on brush and some places where dry grass could be found. That I suffered all this time with a deep cold on my lungs, pain in left side. At Towando I was provided for by a Mr. Mead, staged there all night, and from there to Eldorado, and from there to Topeka. There I reported to the Adjutant General of Kansas. That he furnished me transportation to Fort Riley, but my health was so poor that I went to my home, but stayed only one night. I then went on to Fort Riley, from there to Fort Harker and from there to Fort Hays and from there to Fort Dodge and from there to Camp Supply, and remained there till all the detachments came in and the regiment was ready to be mustered out. During all this time I was suffering with the cold on my lungs. I did not desire to remain away from my regiment for the purpose of treatment. I desired to be with my command so as to have an honorable service.

Arthur L Connely
February 9, 1892

Arthur did have an honorable service and was mustered out of the 19th Kansas Cavalry at Fort Hays, Kansas, on April 18, 1869. Although he had been charged with desertion on December 1, 1868, when he did not return to Camp Starvation with the rest of his hunting party, this charge was later dropped:

Orders: Headqts Dept. of the Missouri, Fort Hays, Kansas, March 15, 1869.
Special Order No. 32.

Corporal Arthur I Connelly, Troop B, 19th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, charged with desertion, is hereby relieved from that charge and restored to duty without trial and without loss of pay and allowance.

By command of Lieut. General Sheridan:

Channey M. Reeves
Asst. Adj. General

One wonders if Arthur ever had close contact with either Custer or Sheridan. If so, it was probably not until just prior to when the 19th Kansas was mustered out, in April of 1869. As we have seen from the prior affidavit, Arthur became lost near Camp Starvation on 1 Dec 1868 but found his way back to civilization in Kansas, and was eventually transported back to Camp Supply via the many Kansas forts of that period. Another affidavit in Arthur's pension file shows he arrived at Camp Supply in early January of 1869. But Custer and Sheridan and most of the 19th Kansas were still marching through other regions of the Indian Territory then and they would not return to their base for several months.

Custer had returned to Camp Supply (where Sheridan was waiting) after the Battle of the Washita on November 27, 1868. Soon after, on December 7, 1868, Sheridan and Custer led about seventeen hundred men from the 7th Regiment and the 19th Kansas out of Camp Supply and headed deeper into Indian Territory in search of further conquests. They met a large band of Kiowas under Chief Satanta, but these Indians had been promised protection by General Hazen at Fort Cobb, so no fight ensued. Sheridan and Custer spent the rest of December at Fort Cobb and held council with the chiefs of the Apaches, Kiowas, Comanches, Cheyennes, and Arapahoes, during which the tribes agreed to maintain peaceful relations with the government. On January 6, 1869, Sheridan and Custer left Fort Cobb to establish a new base of operations some forty miles to the south and just east of the Wichita Mountains. Sheridan eventually designated the new post as Fort Sill and from here Custer went out to visit the surrounding Indian camps during the months of January and February, 1869. Sheridan decided to return to Kansas and on February 23, he set out for Camp Supply. On March 2, 1869, Custer led the 7th and 19th back to Camp Supply on a different route, conducting an Indian-hunting expedition on the way. Driving westward out of Fort Sill, Custer led his troops across the Texas border, then southwestward to the Red River, and finally northward along the one hundredth meridian, on the Texas side, heading for the Washita River. On March 15, as the command approached the Sweetwater River, Custer encountered a large band of Cheyenne, the village of Medicine Arrow. He explained to the chief that the purpose of his march was to get the Cheyennes to proceed to Camp Supply and remain on the reservation there. He secured the release of two white women captives and on March 23 put his army in motion again, arriving at Camp Supply on March 28. Arthur Connely undoubtedly accompanied the 19th Kansas and Custer on the remainder of the trip into Kansas. They arrived at Fort Dodge early in April and at Fort Hays about a week later. Most of the 19th Kansas Volunteer Cavalry was mustered out at Fort Hays in mid April; it then ceased to exist. (Arthur's military records give April 18, 1869, as the date he mustered out). Custer, now sporting his new reputation as an Indian fighter, would continue to conduct forays against the Indians of the plains until that fateful day of June 25, 1876, at the Little Bighorn.

After his service in the Indian War, Arthur lived most of his life in Missouri, initially in Jasper County and later in Newton County. Affidavits in his pension file show that he cut timber in Colorado for three months sometime before his marriage in 1874; he probably lived in Cherokee County, Kansas, for a short time just after his marriage. He also lived in Butler County, Kansas, from November 1878 to October 1882 and in Labette County, Kansas, from November 1890 to June 1892.

Arthur was a farmer most of his life although he tried several different jobs at one time or another. As noted in the following deposition made by his brother, he probably had some difficulty working due to pleurisy he developed following his military experience: "3 November 1893, James N. Connely, age 43, miner, residence Zincite, Jasper County, Missouri. I am a brother of the claimant. I have worked with him at various kinds of manual labor such as mining, threshing, saw mill work and farm work and he has never in the last 24 years been able to do half as much work as I can." He was also a private detective as evidenced by the following business card (supplied by his granddaughter, Velma (Connely) Burress):

Despite his illness (for which he did receive a military pension), Arthur lived to be 83 years old. He died of broncho-pneumonia on 20 March 1933 and is buried in the IOOF cemetery just outside of Newtonia, Newton County, Missouri. The inscription on his gravestone reads: Arthur L. Connely/Co.B./19 Kans.Cav./Dec. 19, 1850/Mar. 20, 1933/. The date of birth on his gravestone agrees with that on his death certificate but I seriously doubt that he was born in December of 1850, primarily because he was enumerated in the 1850 Federal Census when the census-taker came to his parents home 23 August 1850. I have considered his date of birth to be 19 December 1849 since his age was recorded as 5/12 of a year by the 1850 census-taker. Age was supposed to be recorded as of June 1, 1850, which is consistent with his being born on 19 December 1849. Arthur is mentioned in a biographical sketch of his father published in an 1883 history of Jasper County, Missouri, but the information in this sketch is inaccurate in many respects. I look forward to learning more about Arthur Leo Connely in the years ahead, perhaps from a reader of this newsletter.

Fractured skull; later judged insane - Fred Connely, ID = 134712

TO THE INSANE ASYLUM.

Fred Connely, son of Alfred Connely, carpenter, residing at 418 South Ninth street, was taken to the state insane asylum at Topeka yesterday by Sheriff Everhardy. The young man was adjudged insane in the probate court last week.

Young Connely was thrown out of a wagon near Monrovia, Kan., about 12 years ago and alighted on the side of his head on a large rock. He suffered a fracture of the skull, but recovered and was thought to be all right until about two years ago when he suffered a similar accident and the same place on his skull was injured. Since that time he has been unable to do anything. He sits around in a lifeless manner and cannot concentrate his thoughts. It is thought he will recover his mind after an operation is performed on the skull to remove the pressure on the brain.

Army nurse in WW II was POW; Blanche Kimball, ID = 1347222

Army nurse spent time as POW

By Steve Fry

The Capital-Journal

In June 1941, Blanche Kimball shipped out for Manila in the Philippine Islands, a plum assignment for the veteran U.S. Army nurse from Kansas.

Assigned to the Sternberg General Hospital, Kimball sailed from San Francisco and was en route to a dream posting, the glamour of working in the tropics. Within months, World War II exploded in the Pacific, and Kimball would eventually return to Topeka after suffering years of hardship in a Japanese intern camp.

She had lost 60 pounds, and her life was changed, said Harriet Ochs, Kimball's niece.

Joining the Army Nurse Corps in 1929 was a spur-of-the-moment decision for Kimball, said Ochs, 80, Springfield, Mo. Kimball studied at Bethany Hospital in Kansas City, Kan., to become a nurse in 1922 and did post graduate work at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore. She had been a registered nurse for seven years when someone mentioned becoming an Army nurse, and Kimball joined, Ochs said.

Kimball worked stints at the Presidio in San Francisco, Fitzsimmons General Hospital in Denver, Fort Francis E. Warren at Cheyenne, Wyo., and Fort Leavenworth before she got her orders to go to the Philippines.

By the time she arrived in Manila, Kimball was 39, one of the older nurses serving in the group. Her family got letters about how she liked the Philippines.

"We just knew she was happy there," said Ochs.

That happiness ended just before 8 a.m. on Dec. 7, 1941, when Japanese planes attacked U.S. military installations at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, killing thousands of sailors and soldiers. Only two hours later, Japanese planes targeted Clark Field, the primary U.S. base in the Philippines.

Arthur and Hattie Kimball, of Topeka, worried whether their daughter was safe after the Japanese attacks.

For days after Pearl Harbor, The Topeka Daily Capital ran stories alerting readers what had happened to local men and women assigned to posts in the Pacific. On Dec. 16, the Daily Capital published a story saying Kimball had notified her parents that she was OK. A day later, a photo of her was published, again saying she was well.

After the initial attacks, the Japanese landed 43,000 troops and steadily steamrolled over the Philippines. Within weeks, Japanese forces had pushed American and Filipino troops back onto the Bataan peninsula and the nearby tiny island of Corregidor. Food rations for Allied troops and Kimball and the nurses were cut and cut again as supplies of dwindled. The nurses cared for Allied wounded in outdoor wards.

Thousands of American and Filipino troops surrendered on Bataan on April 7, 1942, and Corregidor fell on May 6. Kimball and other nurses, minus a few who escaped aboard a plane and a submarine, fell into Japanese hands.

In Topeka, Kimball's letters to her family ended, and her parents received a telegram from the government informing them she had been captured.

"It was pretty bad," Ochs said. "It was a constant worry."

Kimball was among the 94 who were Army and U.S. Navy nurses and civilians captured by the Japanese, author Elizabeth M. Norman writes in "We Band of Angels: The Untold Story of American Nurses Trapped on Bataan by the Japanese." Kimball was housed at the Santo Tomas Internment Center.

The nurses cared for American prisoners of war. After the war, one of the few stories Kimball would tell her family about the ordeal was how many American soldiers died day after day, how many dead men had to be carried out of the hospital, men who died because there were few supplies to aid them.

While the Japanese didn't physically or sexually assault the nurses, they belittled the American women at times, Ochs said.

"You wouldn't ever dare stand on a rock that make you stand taller than a Japanese," Ochs said. That would draw a tongue-lashing from a Japanese guard, she said. Inadequate rations and hardship ground down some of the nurses, physically and mentally.

"She lost a lot of weight. (The Japanese) practically starved them," Ochs said. "About all they had was rice. (The nurses) had cold cream and put it on lettuce to make them feel like they were eating salad dressing."

"Mentally, I don't think it harmed her at all," Ochs said. "Aunt Blanche was pretty strong. I think she accepted (the experience) better than some of the others."

Art Kimball, a nephew of Kimball's, agreed, describing her as a "tough lady."

When not working, the nurses did what they could to pass the time. In "Angels," Norman gave a snapshot of Kimball.

"Blanche Kimball from Topeka, Kan., had a flair for telling fortunes with playing cards and soon had her friends engrossed in reading the future," Norman wrote. "Everyone it seemed, wanted Blanche to turn over the eight of hearts, the card that signaled what many missed and most longed for --- a love affair."

Meanwhile, Blanche's family heard nothing from her for 33 months. They didn't know if she was dead or alive.

Finally early in 1945, the Kimballs got another telegram, but this one said she was free, that she and the other nurses had been liberated in February. Art Kimball, of Boulder Junction, Wis., remembers that his aunt said that American troops crashed through the prison gates with tanks.

The family was "elated, excited and anxious to see her," Ochs said. The nurses were evacuated to Honolulu. Kimball was awarded the Bronze Star, and the nurses received the Presidential Unit Citation.

She returned to Topeka and Winter Veterans Administration Hospital, where she spent a long time trying to get her health back. Her father, Arthur, 70, had been ill with heart problems. She arrived home before he died in July 1945.

"We felt that he fought to stay alive just to see her," Ochs said.

Kimball regained the lost weight, but the captivity had damaged her health. Before going overseas, she had lost hearing in one ear, and she had problems with hearing in the other ear while a prisoner, Ochs said.

Kimball tried to return to nursing, but she was physically unable and was forced to retire in the 1940s at the rank of a first lieutenant. In retirement, she volunteered a lot at Winter, circulating the book cart among the patients.

Kimball moved into her parents' home at 121 N.W. Menninger, living there until after her mother, Hattie Kimball, died in April 1952 at age 70. She sold the home in the mid-1950s, then moved into the Kansas Towers, where she lived for a long time. Eventually, she became ill and moved into a nursing home in Alma, where she died on Dec. 1, 1978, at age 77. Her grave in Topeka Cemetery is marked with a military headstone.

"She never married," Ochs said. When she was in the Army, a nurse couldn't remain in the service if she married, and "she found it so exciting, she never gave it up."

NEW CHRISTIAN PASTOR AND WIFE

Rev. and Mrs. Owen W. Reece and family, Marilynn, Patsy Lee, and Willard, have arrived from Albuquerque, New Mexico, and will begin their ministry with the First Christian church of Corsicana Sunday. Rev. Mr. Reece will preach morning and evening.

They come from a successful three-year ministry in Albuquerque. During their ministry there, 251 new members were added to the church and extensive improvements made to the building including the completion of 16 new Sunday school rooms.

Rev. Mr. Reece received his college and university training in Midland College and Phillips University and has been in the active ministry sixteen years. He has held two other large pastorates, one in Shawnee, Okla., where 485 new members were added to the church and the other in Greeley, Colo. During the Greeley ministry, 800 new members were added to the church during the first two years and more than 2,000 added to the local church and neighboring churches in a period of five years. Mr. Reece teamed for sometime with the late Harry K. Shields, famous Irish tenor of the Christian Brotherhood.

Mrs. Reece, who is also an ordained minister, and who possesses a lyric soprano voice of unusual quality, is quite active in the general program of the church, assisting in the music and directing the young people's activities and working with the women.

Mr. and Mrs. Reece's daughters, Marilynn, age 12, and Patsy Lee, age 11, are accomplished piano-accordionists.

Special to The Capital.

Atchison, Kan., April 25. - Probably the only one of its kind in this part of the country is a silhouette picture, 150 years old, in the possession of S. E. Connely, of this city. The silhouttte consists of a piece of white paper, cut to resemble the profile of Mr. Connely's great grandfather, the white paper being pasted on a large piece of black paper to contrast the facial outlines. Such pictures were common in the eighteenth century, before tintype photography came into use. Another relic he possesses is a looking glass that has been in use in his family for almost 200 years. Mr. Connely has a large and varied collection of curios and relics. Some of the most treasured ones were destroyed in Effingham, Kan., some years ago when a school building, in the museum of which he had them on exhibition, burned down.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "silhouttte" should be silhouette.)

Special to The Capital.
Atchison, Kan., April 25.—Probably the only one of its kind in this part of the country is a silhouette picture, 150 years old, in the possession of S. E. Connely, of this city. The silhouttte consists of a piece of white paper, cut to resemble the profile of Mr. Connely's great grandfather, the white paper being pasted on a large piece of black paper to contrast the facial outlines. Such pictures were common in the eighteenth century, before tintype photography came into use. Another relic he possesses is a looking glass that has been in use in his family for almost 200 years. Mr. Connely has a large and varied collection of curios and relics. Some of the most treasured ones were destroyed in Effingham, Kan., some years ago when a school building, in the museum of which he had them on exhibition, burned down.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "silhouttte" should be silhouette.)

Pleasant Grove is mostly prairie, though there is an abundance of timber margining the streams, the principal one of which is Coal creek, running through the southern and western parts of the township. Butcher creek and other small streams head in the same township.

Coal abounds on all these streams, but more abundantly on Coal creek. One vein on the Cartwright farm measures about four feet in thickness, and one more recently opened on land belonging to Y. Spalti, about three and one-half.

This township was surveyed in ‘46 and ‘47 ... and was declared a township by order of the county commissioners, in January, 1847, ... and called Pleasant Grove by suggestion of the people living in and about the beautiful grove near Pleasantville.

The names of those who settled in this township at the earliest dates are as follows:

Denem Halsey, in ‘45; Lewis Reynolds, Trainor Reynolds, John P. Glenn, Wm. S. Glenn, two Samuel Glenns, Daniel Vansel, Larken Young, Pleasant Prater, Wm. Young, G. B. Miller, David Shonkwiler, Samuel Tibbett, Gilmore Robert and Harrison Logan, and Yase Spalti, in ‘46; Wm. F. Miles and Wesley Jordan and Daniel Davidson, in ‘47.

...

Lewis Reynolds broke the first prairie in the township, on his claim a little south of Pleasantville, on land now owned by Abram Erle, in May, ‘46. He, W. F. Jordan, and G. Logan planted orchards in ‘49. The trees then planted by Mr. Reynolds are mostly still living; those of the others having been destroyed by gophers.

...

Gilmore Logan is now the oldest settler still living in the township. He first moved from Indiana to Wapello county, and from thence to this place, arriving on the 20th of February, ‘46.

....

Daniel Shea taught the first school, in the spring of 1847, in a small log cabin built by G. Logan, about one mile west of where Pleasantville now is. Term, three months; 20 scholars at $2.00 per head. Miles Jordan taught the next in the winter of ‘47 and ‘48.

...

LOGAN FAMILY

The story of the "Central Oregon Logans" seems to begin in a Scotland left in disarray by the Jacobite inspired "Forty-five Rebellion" of "Bonnie Prince Charlie" in 1745. After a possible, indeed probable, sojourn in Scottish-dominated Northern Ireland, the first firm thread of the direct line is picked up with the birth of one William Logan in Virginia some time after 1765. Not much is known of William except that he married a certain "Martha" of indeterminate Virginia lineage, sired five sons and five daughters, and helped tame the Indiana frontier where he died, near Greencastle, about 1790.

One of William and Martha's children, Samuel Logan (1796-1865) married a strong-willed woman named Margaret W. Connelly (1792-1881) in 1814. The Connellys (Connely, various other spellings), like the Logans, were immigrants to Virginia from Northern Ireland in the Jacobite era. Samuel and Margaret had five daughters and eight sons between 1815 and 1836 in Kentucky and Indiana; all but one survived childhood. One of Samuel and Margaret's sons, Arthur Connelly Logan (1818-1865) had a grandson, Walter May, who was born in Kansas about 1877 and died in Bend, Oregon in 1952. Walter May platted the townsite of Redmond, Oregon, in 1905. Three more sons: William Harrison Logan (1816-1899), Robert Mitchell Logan (1822-1905), and Thomas Jefferson Logan (1826-1894) crossed the plains to Oregon in 1862.

William H. Logan settled at Cove in the Grande Ronde Valley in 1862 (where the family was still prominent in the 1930s), while his two brothers continued to the Willamette Valley.

The second brother, Robert Mitchell Logan, married Mary Jane McQuerry about 1852 and, before she died, they had one son who died after about a year. Robert M. then married Mary J.'s sister Lydia "Lucy" Ann McQuerry in the late 1850s and they had seven children, six of whom survived childhood. Robert M. and Lucy settled in Eastern Oregon.

Thomas Jefferson Logan, the youngest of the three brothers who crossed the plains in 1862, had married Phebe Anne Tuttle in 1858 and they had a son Lysander "Sanders" Simpson Logan (died in 1939?) the same year. After settling in the Willamette Valley, Phebe died about 1869 whereupon Thomas J. and son Sanders moved to a place three miles south of Prineville on the Crooked River in 1870. Three years later the father and son founded the famous "96 Ranch" on Camp Creek near Logan Butte in the Paulina country. Sanders bought out his father's interest in 1894 (Thomas J. died a year later) and ran it with his first wife, Maude Milliorn (1865-?) until 1917.

The sixth son of Samuel and Margaret, Samuel Allen Logan (1834-1919) was left behind by his three older brothers when they crossed the plains in 1862. He married Elmira Fisher (1845-1919) in 1869 and they adopted Mae Spaw (1870-1935?) and had two sons, Allen March Logan (1877-1935) and Fisher Connelly Logan (1881-1958). At length, Samuel A. and Elmira moved to a 160-acre preemption claim adjoining the 96 Ranch in Crook County, Oregon in 1883. From such humble beginnings, Samuel A., Elmira, and sons March and Fisher, built a respectable cattle empire in Crook County.

standing: Fisher, Rose, Allen March,

In 1907, Allen March Logan married Rosa "Rose" Foster (1880-1939). Rose's mother was Mary Elizabeth Faulkner, the sister of the noted Central Oregonian, John T. Faulkner, who in turn was married to Rose's paternal aunt, Charity E. Foster in 1871. Rose's father, William Wesley Foster (1845-1929) served in Company C of the famous First Oregon Infantry of the pre-statehood Indian wars. His father (also the father of Charity E.) was Henry Foster who crossed the plains to Oregon in 1846. Rose's younger sister Naomi (1882-1953) married John Grimes in 1905 and they had two children, Judge Ervin L. Grimes and Ethel C. Carlin, both of whom live in Prineville. March and Rose had one child, Fisher Foster Logan (1914-1968) who married Evelyn Mary Snyder (1906-1964) in 1935. They in turn had two children, Dr. Charles Allen Logan (born in 1938), currently adjunct professor out of Oregon State University, and, with his wife, Marcia, a teacher at Redmond High School; and Laurel Anne (Logan) Wantz (born in 1940) of Portland, Oregon. From one child, March and Rose have nine great-grandchildren-all living in Oregon.

In 1917, Fisher Connelly Logan married Viola Marie Smith (1887 -1972) and they had three sons and four daughters: Allen Henry (born in 1918); Elmira Rose Starr (1919-1971); Richard Smith (born in 1921), two of whose sons are graduates of the U. S. Air Force Academy; Flora Marion Solitz (born in 1922), currently living in Prineville; Bryon Fisher (born in 1923), currently living in Bend where his oldest daughter teaches; Bertha "Betty" Ann (1925-1973) who arose to a Lieutenant Colonel in the Army in the days before women achieved such rank; and Joan Orpha (born in 1927). At last attempted count, Fisher C. and Viola M. had twenty-seven grandchildren and at least five (most likely a great deal more!) great-grandchildren living all over the United States.

(Note by RRC: I don't think William, the father of Samuel Logan died in the year 1790 since Samuel is known to have been born in 1796. From other sources, Walter May died in 1963, not 1952; Lysander Logan died in 1947, not 1939; Lysander's mother, Phebe, died in IA in 1859, and his father, Thomas, died in OR in 1894, and his first wife, Minnie, died in OR in 1956. Elmira (Fisher) Logan, wife of Samuel Allen Logan, died in 1917, not 1919. May, adopted daughter of Samuel & Elmira, died in 1934.)

Big Central Oregon Cattle Ranch, Including Part of Bill Brown "Spread," Sold by Verges

By PHIL F. BROGAN

One of Central Oregon's largest cattle "spreads," the pioneer "96" ranch of Crook county's Camp Creek area, has been sold, and behind the sale is the story of an immigrant from the Pyrenees of Southern France who made good in his adopted land.

He is Dominique Verges, owner of the big "96" ranch since 1924. Included in the sale, to D. D. Santry of the Santry Tire Co., Portland, are the entire holdings, which in recent years have been expanded through acquisition by Verges of part of the Bill Brown ranches of early stock days. About 1,000 cattle, a fleet of farm equipment and livestock other than cattle were also sold to the Portland man.

Some 19,000 acres of deeded lands are included in the sale. About 30,000 acres of Taylor act grazing lands are tributary to the home holdings. Around 50,000 acres are under fence.

Brown Ranch Included

The Verges "spread" includes the big Buck Creek, Freezout and Harding ranches of the Bill Brown empire of early days. In earlier years, the Verges holdings were even larger than at the time of the sale to the Portland firm, but part of the range country, southeast of Brothers, was sold to the big "ZX" out of Lake county a number of years ago.

The new owner will continue the Ninety-Six ranch as a cattle plant. Gordon Barrie of Lakeview, field man for the Bank of America and the First National Bank of Lakeview for some 20 years, is to manage the holdings for Santry. Barrie and his wife are now on the ranch. Verges continued as advisor to the new owner until the first of the year, and plans to assist all he can this year.

Most details of the ranch transaction were completed this past fall, but under an option provision, the sale did not become fully effective until January 1, 1953.

Near Logan Butte

The home ranch of the huge acreage is on Camp Creek near spectacular Logan butte, a landmark in the range country in southern Crook county. Sanders Logan, and his brother, Fisher T. Logan, were the early-day owners of the ranch holdings. Verges purchased the Ninety-Six ranch from Orville Davidson and Sanders Logan. The Fisher Logan holdings were bought later, and the Brown holdings were acquired in 1936. Also acquired in subsequent years was Western Colonization Co. lands.

Property involved includes seven miles of ranch along historic Buck creek, where springs bubble from the earth at a number of points. Buck creek in pioneer days was the center of the Bill Brown horse and cattle holdings, which reached their greatest extent in about 1904 when Brown was known as the "horse king of America."

In the nearly 30 years that Verges operated and expanded Ninety-Six ranch plant to merge with the Brown "empire," he has extensively developed the connecting ranch areas, primarily through water improvement that included the drilling of many wells.

Retains Oil Right

Under provisions of the sale, Verges retains a right to one-half of the returns from any oil that might be discovered in the ancient ocean beds that underlie the ranches and fold under the Central Oregon lava plateau.

The stockman also retains his prized ranch horse, "Tony," black and now seven years old, and his saddle and boots. Mr. and Mrs. Verges are making Bend their home—and when spring comes, Verges plan to catch up on an activity he has neglected through the years: He is going fishing "and catch some of those big ones I have heard the boys talk about for many years."

Also, there may be a trip to his homeland in the Pyrenees of southern France, where he spent his boyhood. Mr. and Mrs. Verges may make that trip this year, if the ex-cattleman can break away from his fishing. Mrs. Verges, whom her husband gives full credit for her part in building up the big ranch just sold, also hopes to interest the retired stockman in doing a bit of square dancing. She is a frequent spectator at Claude Cook's dances at Pine Forest Grange hall.

Story Related

"How did I happen to come to America?" The stockman's answer to that question went back several decades. He was a lad of 20 then, and from young men who had previously crossed the Atlantic, he heard stories of great open spaces in America with plenty of sheep range. Also, he was facing a call into the French army. So in 1908, Verges crossed the ocean to America, landed in Reno with a few hundred dollars and soon discovered that in the Nevada city money did not last long. When the last dollars jingled in his pocket, he started herding sheep in Nevada, then shifted to the Lakeview country of Oregon. He saved his dollars—they came mighty slow in those days: About $30 a month. Finally he acquired a ranch at Powell Butte. Then, in 1923, he leased the Logan property, and on the following year made the first purchase of lands later extended into one of the largest ranch holdings in Oregon.

Sum Not Revealed

The amount the Portland firm paid for the big stock ranch was not made public, but it is known that the transaction was one of the largest of its kind ever made in Central Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Verges expect that in the years ahead, they will make frequent drives to the Camp creek region, for it is a valley of memories, mostly hard work crowned with success.

And, Verges mentioned, if the new owner ever needs help at roundup time, he and faithful "Tony" will be ready for duty.

Sale of 96 Ranch Recalls Incidents Of Pioneer Days

Recent sale by Dominique Verges of his far-famed "96" ranch on Camp Creek, Crook county, to D. D. Santry, Portland, aroused memories of early days for a Bend resident, Fisher C. Logan.

It was just 70 years ago this year that Fisher Logan, then a small boy, reached the Camp Creek area.

In 1883, the Samuel A. Logan family arrived in The Dalles by train from Iowa, then made the long, slow journey into isolated interior Oregon with a wagon party headed for the new county of Crook. Goal of the Logan party was the "96" ranch in the rangeland country of Camp creek. Owner of the ranch at that time was Thomas Logan, a brother of Samuel. Camp creek was some 70 miles southeast of Prineville.

Members of the Samuel A. Logan family on that long trip from The Dalles to the rangeland region were his wife, Elmira, their two sons, March, aged 7, and Fisher, aged 2, and a foster daughter, May, aged 10. To their friends in the new county of Crook, Mr. and Mrs. Logan soon became known as Aunt and Uncle Sammy.

New Home Erected

First task facing the new arrivals from Iowa was the erection of a house, so the crew at the "96" ranch helped build a large, one-room log cabin, on land adjoining the ranch of Thomas Logan. The ranch men went up into the Maury moutains to bring out logs, then split "shakes" for shingles and split off boards from suitable pine trees for floors and other use. Most of the furniture was made from the boards. A cook stove was brought in from Prineville. Other rooms were later added to the log cabin. Bedding had been brought from the east. Mattresses were ticks filled with rye hay, and a feather bed on top.

In that log cabin of Aunt and Uncle Sammy Logan three years later was established the first post-office in the area. It was called the Price postoffice, after Bruce Price, another rancher. Mail was brought in from Prineville once a week by a carrier using a light rig and team. Mrs. Elmira Logan was the first postmaster, and her son, Fisher, still has the document signed by William F. Vilas, post-master general, granting the commission. Mrs. Logan kept the post-office three years, then Maude Logan, on the "96" ranch, took it for a time. Maud Logan now lives in Redmond.

Located on Stream

The Logan residence was situated on a little stream on the south fork of Camp creek. One of the several springs that fed the creek provided domestic water. That spring was curbed with logs. Water was piped from a spring to a trough made from a hollow log.

The pioneer ranch home was in a picturesque area, facing a highly colored, sculptured amphitheater later to become known to paleontologists in many parts of America. In the formation were discovered John Day fossils. The area, capped by a mesa, is now known as Logan butte.

March and Fisher Logan were mostly taught at home by their mother, who had been a teacher in Iowa. Later, a school district was formed.

Food Hauled

In those pioneer years, the food supply for an entire year was moved into the "96" ranch by wagon from Prineville. Meats, chicken, eggs and milk were produced on the ranch. And through the year there was need of more food than required, for generous hospitality was extended to all who stopped.

Fisher Logan holds many memories of those early days, especially the Fourth of July picnics in the Maury mountains. They started just as a family at first, but soon expanded into community picnics. Aunt Sammy always brought a huge pat of butter, beautifully molded. People came from both sides of the mountains, ate, played games and danced on a platform.

Bad Winter Recalled

And there were other memories not so happy, and among these is the double winter of 1889-90. January, it is recalled, was warm and springlike. Cattle were turned into the hills to graze. Then in February came a heavy snow. Many cattle died on the open range. At the Logan ranch, even bread was fed to the weaner calves, and straw was emptied from bed ticks for the starving animals.

The "96" ranch expanded through the years, and cattle and horse herds increased until eventually the spread became known as one of the largest in southeastern Crook county. In 1912, a large frame house was erected and stood for many years as a white landmark on Camp creek.

It was in 1924 that Dominique Verges bought the Fisher T. Logan holdings, then expanded the ranch through acquisition of some of the nearby Bill Brown ranch.

4 Generations Of Druggists

PLEASANTVILLE, IA. - Lloyd Bare, freshman in pharmacy at the State University of Iowa, is preparing to become a fourth-generation druggist here. He has already had some "basic experience" in the store.

Jack Bare, 42, who operates the Bare Pharmacy here with his wife Cynthia as a clerk, and daughter Barbara, 16, helping at the fountain when school activities permit, keeps a proud eye on young Lloyd.

"My own father used to say that when I was too small to handle it, he couldn't keep a broom out of my hands," Bare said, "and when I got big enough, he couldn't squeeze the broom into it. That's how I got my introduction to the drug business."

The Bare Pharmacy was started in 1888 by the late O. H. Bare, son of a Civil War veteran who had died in Andersonville prison. O. H. Bare had apprenticed in Winterset before returning here - his home town - to open his own store.

"Originally, the store was a block north, but after three years it was moved to the present site - which means that the Bares have been on this location 68 years," said Jack.

In First Drake Class

O. H. Bare operated the pharmacy until he died at 86. His son Lloyd died a year later - at 58 - and then Jack took over. That was in 1946.

Jack, born in Pleasantville, attended Drake University after graduation from Pleasantville High School. He was in Drake's first pharmacy graduating class and became a registered pharmacist on the fiftieth anniversary of his grandfather's registry.

A reminder of Lloyd Bare's time in the store is a wall on which rifles, shotguns and pistols - a collection that he started for son Jack - are displayed.

Jack became an ardent sportsman - and has added to the gun collection.

Mrs. Bare, the former Cynthia Hunt of Knoxville, shrugs helplessly as her husband counts the months and days until time for an annual fishing trip in Ontario.

Since 1939

The Bare Pharmacy carries gifts, novelties and fills drug sundries. There also are a paint department and a hardware department. Most important, however, in the life of the community has been the prescription department.

Jack has been working in the store since 1939.

He is a former secretary of the Commercial Club, treasurer of the Pleasantville Methodist Church and a member of the Knoxville Country Club. He also is president of the Circle-8 Square Dance Club, which meets here twice a month.

THE ROCKFORD AREA: A HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

Wayne I. Anderson
Department of Earth Science
University of Northern Iowa
Cedar Falls, IA 50614-0335

THE TOWN OF ROCKFORD

Robert James Waller (Rockford High School class of 1957, former Dean of the School of Business at the University of Northern Iowa, and author of the huge best seller — "Bridges of Madison County") described the area near Rockford as follow:

"Iowa is a very romantic, mystical place. I can't explain it, but it's here. Anyone can see the Rocky Mountains — they're obvious. It takes a little more perspective to see the beauty of Iowa. She just lies there, on hot June days, like a woman in the sun, while romance splashes around where the Winnebago runs to kiss the Shell Rock, just two miles from the place of my growing."

Rockford (1990 population: 863) was founded in 1856. Located between two streams (Shell Rock River and Lime Creek, which later had its name changed to Winnebago River), Rockford provided an excellent site for saw and grain mills. Other businesses were established in due course. In 1864, Dwight Johnson and Harmon Mitchell established a brewery at Rockford that was well received by some, serving Rockfordians as well as residents of several towns within a 40 mile radius. However, pressure from local prohibitionists forced the brewery to close during the early 1880s, and it burned shortly thereafter. The Cedar Rapids Republican commended the citizens of Rockford for achieving a victory over "saloonism" and predicted that Rockford "will be slow, indeed, to invite the demonstrated curse back again to thrive at the expense of the community's morals and the depletion of its financial savings" (Vala, 1968, p.56).

The railroad came to Rockford in 1871, and the presence of the railroad was a key factor in Lord Melborne Harris' decision to open a brick operation there. Unfortunately for Harris, the railroad could not be convinced to build a spur to the brickworks west of town. Without doubt, the coming of the railroad (the Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Minnesota Railroad) was responsible for Rockford's rapid growth and transformation in the1870s. Prior to the arrival of the railroad, Rockford was a tiny farming community with businesses depending on local supply and demand. In 1865, the population of Rockford was about 300. At that time, the town had a church, a school, a flour mill, a saw mill, a river ferry, and a stage line from Cedar Falls. A bridge was built to span the Shell Rock River in 1865 (Vala, 1968).The population of Rockford reached 400 in 1870 and 700 by 1880. The town had its first newspaper in 1872, a second flour mill in 1873, a new Methodist Church, a new school building valued at $8,000 in 1873-74, a grain elevator, and a new iron bridge across the Shell Rock River in 1875 (Vala, 1968).The editor of the Dubuque Times spent three days in Rockford in 1876 and reported favorably concerning the town's location and the operation of its two flour mills. The article noted the presence of a bank, six general merchandise stores, two drug stores, two restaurants, three hardware stores, one furniture store, one harness shop, one boot and shoe shop, one livery stable, two lumber yards, four blacksmith shops, and two wagon shops. The Burlington, Cedar Rapids, and Minnesota Railroad was described as doing "an immense business with the entire Shell Rock Valley". According to the editor of the Dubuque Times, "Much might be said about Rockford, and still there would be room for more, but after three days stay in the place we conclude that a more pleasant town or a more lucrative place for a business situation it would be hard to find" (Vala, 1968, p. 64)

On March 16, 1987, the citizens of Rockford voted in favor of incorporation and elected Orlo H. Lyon as the first mayor. Rockford was the third incorporated town in Floyd County and second only to Charles City in importance (Vala, 1968).

THE ROCKFORD BRICK AND TILE COMPANY

Rockford-area residents knew of the value of the "Rockford clay hills" as early as 1860, and Lord Melborne Harris came from Clarksville in 1878 to establish a brick works on the south banks of Lime Creek. Although his bricks were recognized as some of the finest in the state, Harris could not convince the railroad to build a bridge across Lime Creek and construct a spur of tracks to his kilns (Vala, 1970).

A manufacturer of clay products commented on the situation in an article in The Rockford Register in 1899: "By the way, I note that Mr. Harris is trying to get a railroad track to his yard. The possibilities for a large business at his clay banks are beyond calculation, and your people should assist him in all ways possible. The one thing all should study and work for is to make work for men. The constant drain upon timber must largely increase the cost of lumber, and clay must come to use for all building purposes. The Lime Creek shales are rare deposits —valuable beyond a possibility of estimation. Your people do not know the value of the deposit near and in your town" (Vala, 1970, p. 230).

The brick works of Harris supplied bricks for several buildings in Rockford, including a number of homes, both bank buildings and most of the store buildings on the north side of Platt Street. Harris also manufactured drainage tile, which had only limited use at the time. His business closed in 1899. During peak production, Harris' operation employed 16 men and produced 24,000 bricks per day. The only means of transporting the finished products to the railroad in town was by horse and wagon (Vala, 1970).

An attempt to revive the brick and tile operation by a Mr. Wild of Cedar Falls failed in 1902 when the railroad again declined to lay a spur of track to the plant. In Î909, the railroad closed its shops in Rockford and transferred its employees out of town. That action caught the attention of local citizens and stimulated them to form a local corporation to manufacture brick. The Rockford Brick and Tile corporation was formed in 1910 with $75,000 in capital stock, and a new plant building was completed in 1911. The corporation spent $20,000 to construct a bridge and railroad spur. The overall venture was bold and expensive for the times, and it took several years for the corporation to offset its initial heavy debts. In 1914, the plant produced 107 carloads of clay products (Vala, 1970).

The corporation grew steadily through the years, although times were rough during World War I, the Great Depression, and World War II. After World War II, the company concentrated its efforts on the manufacture of drain tile and eventually discontinued manufacturing building tile and face and common brick. In 1961, sales topped the $1,000,000 mark and production capacity was more than doubled from that of the original plant. Two tunnel kilns were installed in 1961 and two years later, two tunnel-kiln driers were added (Vala, 1970).

Grover H. Galvin, Jr. was president and general manager of the Rockford Brick and Tile Company in 1970, having succeeded his father in 1946. Grover H. Galvin, Sr. had been with the plant almost from the beginning, having been elected manager in 1913. Forest Evashevski of Iowa City was one of the directors of Rockford Brick and Tile in 1970 (Vala, 1970). Sports fans will recognize Evashevski as a former football coach and athletic director at the University of Iowa.

In 1970, Rockford Brick and Tile employed over 50 persons and had eight salesmen in Iowa and Minnesota. The company conducted over $1,000,000 in sales of locally-manufactured drain tile. In addition, Rockford Brick and Tile served as a distributor for several out-of-state brick companies with brick sales in excess of $600,000. According to Vala (1970, p. 235), "Beyond question, the very earth has proved to be Rockford's chief asset, and the Rockford Brick and Tile Company has been not only the town's financial life line over the past 60 years but also a major element in the town's general progress".

The increased use of plastic pipe and tubing in the early 1970's led to the decline of the clay-tile industry. The Rockford Brick and tile grounds were sold to Allied Construction Company of Charles City in 1977. In 1990, the Floyd County Conservation Board obtained the property under Iowa's first Resource Enhancement and Protection (REAP) grant.

CHRONOLOGY OF SELECTED EVENTS RELATED TO THE ROCKFORD BRICK AND TILE OPERATION AND GROUNDS

The following items were obtained from historical files and newspaper clippings at the Rockford Public Library and from copies of the minutes of the Board of Directors Meetings of the Rockford Brick and Tile Company. I am grateful to Rita Hirv, Librarian, Rockford Public Library and Wayne Meyer, former director of the Floyd County Conservation Board, for their assistance. Items are presented in chronological order.

1910 Rockford Brick and Tile Company is incorporated.

1941 G.H. Galvin, president and general manager of the Rockford Brick and Tile Company announces a voluntary increase in employees' wages. Men who had been drawing 40 cents per hour were granted an increase to 42 1/2 cents per hour.

...

1972-73 A prospective fossil buyer requests 100 pounds of fossils to evaluate the potential market value of the fossils. President Grover H. Galvin, Jr. indicates that the fossils will be sent, and the company begins investigating the washing and processing of shale for fossils. This resulted in the brick and tile grounds being closed to fossil collecting for a period of time in 1973. (It was explained to the author of this article that a major oil company was investigating the use of fossils as an advertising promotion). Nothing materialized however, and the grounds were once again opened to fossil collectors.

1990 Rockford celebrates "Fossil Days" as a community promotion. The former Rockford Brick and Tile grounds, now owned by Allied Construction Company, continues to receive heavy use by area school groups. At least 28 classes, totaling more than 800 students visited the site last year.

THE ROCKFORD
FOSSIL AND PRAIRIE AREA

Dedicated in 1991, the Rockford Fossil and Prairie Area serves as a splendid example of what can be accomplished through the cooperative efforts of county government, state agencies, and the private sector. The Floyd County Conservation Board received the state's first Resources Enhancement and Protection (REAP) grant. Funding was provided to purchase the 109-acre former Rockford Brick and Tile property and an adjoining 47-acre prairie site, west of Rockford. Much credit should be given to Wayne Meyer, former Director of the Floyd County Conservation Board, for his efforts, energy, and vision in bringing the proposal for a fossil and prairie area to fruition. The Rockford clay pits are known worldwide for their rich deposits of Devonian fossils, and the adjoining prairie represented one of the largest remaining native-prairie tracts in Floyd County. The 47-acre prairie area borders the 30-acre Juniper Hill Preserve, a state preserve maintained by Floyd County. Thus, acquisition of the new tract provided Floyd County with 186 contiguous acres and provided the opportunity to develop and maintain a unique natural area for biology, geology, nature study, and recreation.

Fossils are so abundant at the Rockford site that collecting is allowed even encouraged, a highly-unusual situation for a preserve. The opportunity to collect a variety of well-preserved fossils, weathered free from the rock matrix, makes the Rockford pit a popular collecting spot for school groups. Spoil piles from the clay pits contain innumerable fossils and thousands of "new" specimens are released with each rain. The opportunity to collect a variety of fossils in a short duration of time makes the area a popular tourist attraction as well. For that reason, the local chambers of commerce and civic groups lent support to Floyd County to develop the area as a preserve and recreational area. The town of Rockford celebrates its heritage in appropriate fashion with an annual summer festival known as "Fossil Days" (Stone, 1990).

The Juniper Hill portion of the preserve is home to an unusual species of creeping juniper. Known as Juniper horizontalis, the low-growing shrub is on the endangered species list. Juniper Hill is believed to be the only place in the continental United States where this rare species grows (Jacobs, 1994).

The juniper occurs in 2 1/2 acres of the preserve and appears to grow only on soils developed on the Cerro Gordo Member of the Lime Creek Formation. Distribution of the creeping juniper may be related to Late Wisconsinan glacial events. Although the Juniper Hill locality is in the area of the state's Pre-Illinoian glacial deposits, it is a mere 10 to 15 miles east of the margin on the Des Moines Lobe.

Future development of the Rockford Fossil and Prairie Area depends on funding. Wayne Meyer, former Director of the Floyd County Conservation Board, envisioned a restored wetland on adjacent land to the north, eight to ten miles of hiking trails connecting the site to the city park at the west edge of Rockford, and restoration of one of the beehive kilns at the former plant site. Craig Ritland, landscape architect, has prepared a master plan for the area (pp. 12-13), and Kevin Hicok produced a video on "The Rockford Fossil and Prairie Area" as part of an Eagle Scout Project.

Marriage announcement - Helen Opal Galvin, ID = 13514b1

DES MOINES AP--Announcement Friday of the resignation of Miss Helen Galvin as clerk of the Iowa Supreme Court brought to light a statehouse romance that has been known for several months to only a few of the couple's most intimate friends.

Miss Galvin, who has been clerk five years and a member of the clerk's staff for 19, will marry Adrian A. Lubberden, a deputy state fire marshal who resigned his position Feb. 1 after 18 year of service.

Following the marriage late this month the couple will live on a farm near Garden Grove which Lubberden recently purchased. Both Miss Galvin and Lubberden have been Des Moines residents.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, Helen had a prior marriage (in 1922) to Ralph Kenneth Weese (1900 - 1934).

Galvin family in Pleasantville, IA; includes some descendants of Mary Jane (Logan) Galvin, ID = 13521

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article written by Lela Smith and published in "Past and Present Pleasantville, Iowa", 1976, pages 121 & 123 - page 122 has 2 photos; not copied by me. About 1/2 of this article is not pertinent to my Connely genealogy; the 1/2 that is pertinent has been bolded by me. James Thomas Galvin (1828 -1900) married first to Mary Jane Logan – her paternal grandmother was Margaret Walker (Connely) Logan = ID 135. Joseph Jackson 'Jack' Galvin (1821 – 1901), brother of James Thomas Galvin, married Margaret Elizabeth McGinnis – her maternal grandmother was also Margaret Walker (Connely) Logan.)

Galvin

James Anderson was born in Pennsylvania. He and his wife Mary Horton Anderson were the parents of John Anderson.

John had several children: Levi, Samuel, John, Lucinda, Francis (some will remember Fanny Clark), Elda Ann and William Henry.

The Myers family came from Virginia. John Milton and Elizabeth Myers settled near Pleasantville. Their children were Emma, Albert, John, William, Margaret and Belle. There was also Mary, Jim, Ted and Ida.

Henry Anderson married Margaret Myers. They had four children: Bertha, Ben, Bess and Ora. Henry died at the age of twenty-seven and Margaret later married Andy Reynolds. There were four more children: Virgil, Jerd, Mary Ann and Paul.

About the year 1830, the Logan family left Kentucky and went to Putnam Co. Indiana to make their home. Mrs. Logan rode horseback and carried the baby Mahalia in her arms, as told in the Cline family history.

There were nine children in this family- six boys: Robert, Clay, Simpson, George, Thomas, James and three girls, Mary Jane, Mahalia, and Nancy. These children grew up on the farm, living in a log cabin. They helped gather maple sap and make it into sugar. They hunted for pawpaws, picked wild berries and hunted nuts in season. They waded in Sugar Creek, which they called the "Branch"

Then came the Civil War. All of the male members of the family joined the Union Army, father and sons. Sim was crippled and rode the horses that pulled the cannon, some of which were shot out from under him. George was with the Indiana regiment and fought at Vicksburg. He marched with Sherman to the sea. Many were the tales he told of this march were quite different from the stories told in the south. George was the tallest man in his regiment. I'm sure many of the old-timers can remember George Logan and Bennie Bruer leading the parade on Memorial Day, in their blue uniforms.

Nancy and two of the boys died of Typhoid fever in their youth. James married and settled in Thorntown, Indiana. Clay, Sim, George, Mary Jane, Mahalia and their father came into Iowa and settled near Pleasantville.

James and Elizabeth Galvin lived on a farm in Montgomery County, Kentucky. The Galvins came from Ireland in 1765. There were three boys, Jack, James, and Allen. They moved through Indiana, where Allen stayed near Lafayette. Jack and James Thomas bought land east of Pleasantville on the Stringtown road, married Logan girls and settled down. James and Mary Jane and Ancel died and James started hauling supplies for the Government to the Dakota territories. He took Martin with him.

James married Mary Ann Bane but they separated. He then married Mahalia Logan, cousin of his first wife. He had sold the farm east of town and they bought land about two miles south of Pleasantville, where they reared their family of four boys Martin, Allen, John D., James and one daughter, Elizabeth; one girl died.

Martin married Zelpha Stubbs. Their children were Marion, Dick, Roy, Ray, Daisy, Erma, Emmet, Ruth and Rex.

Emmet Warren Galvin married Beulah Evadine Abbot and they have five children: Willard, Bob, Garold, Irene, and Jeanne.

Willard Warren Galvin married Irene King of Pleasantville. He worked at the Abbot ranch near Swan for 27 years. They moved to Tariko, Missouri. They have three children: Earl, Edith, and Sandra. Earl Warren married Jody and they have three girls, Cheri, Diana and Kathy. Edith married Gary Jenkins and they have a son Jerry and a daughter Jill. Sandra is married to John Huston and they have a son John and a daughter Dana.

Bob is married to Georgia Bacus and they have one daughter Carolyn. Carolyn married Bob Williams and they have three children, Judy, Jim and Janet.

Garold is married to Mae Crook and they have five children, Patsy, Dixie, Gary, Linda and Nancy. Patsy is married to Dan Yates and they have Michael and Lisa. Dixie married Larry Heaberlin and they have Kim, Kelly, Kevin and Kip. Gary married Linda Marsh and they have Gary and Tralawney. Linda married John Freshwater and they have Sean and Cathi. Nancy is a student at the University of Iowa.

Irene (Galvin) Lacey has two children, Tom and Rita. Tom Wise married Vonda Dockstader and they have Terry and Mike. Rita is married to Don Newquist and they have Chuck, Eric, and Kirk.

Jeanne married Robert Arlen Busick who passed away in 1974. They have four children, Janice, Ron, Carol, and Rhonda. Janice Evadine is married to John Peters and they have Brian and Brad. Ronald Arlen married Kathy Graham and they have two boys Robert Guy and Michael Arlen. Carol married Leo Freel and they have Brandi Jeanne and Brandon James. Rhonda is still at home.

Elizabeth married John Courtney. They lived on a farm south of Pleasantville, in the Kimball Community. They had a son, Walter and a daughter, Esta (see Courtney family).

John D. married Belle Myers. They had two children, Ruby (Richards) and Judson.

James (Jimmie) lived much of his life on the home farm. He, his sister and brothers attended Ladoga school. He and the Glen boys farmed the Stumptown Band, James played the bass Viol. Sometimes, Oscar Iddings would play the violin with the group.

James married Bess Anderson. They had three children, Dee L., a son who died soon after birth and Lela.

Dee married Muriel Ghrist of Knoxville. They had two sons, James William (Bill), and Lerlia Lee. Dee passed away in 1970, four years after his father, James.

Bill married Louise Niefert and had two children, Mary Lou and Gary James. Bill passed away in 1973.

Lerlia married Martyna Van Helten. They had two girls, Linda Sue and Monte Lu and a son Jon Dee.

Lela married A. C. Morgenson who passed away in 1957. She later married J. J. Smith of Parkersburg, Iowa.

Lela Smith

(Note by RRC: I know of no other evidece that supports Lela Smith's statement that the Mahalia Logan - who went from KY to IN at a young age - had a sister named Mary Jane.
I suspect that the sentence that begins "James and Mary Jane and Ancel died" was meant to read "James' wife Mary Jane and Ancel died". I suspect "Ancel" should be Anson.
Other sources lend support to Lela Smith's statement that Mahalia Logan, the 3rd wife of James Thomas Galvin, was a cousin of his 1st wife, Mary Jane Logan. I suspect that "Mahalia" should be Mahala.
The sentence that says "Jack and James Thomas ... married Logan girls ..." needs a bit of explanation as Jack's wife was Margaret Elizabeth McGinnis; Margaret was orphaned at a young age and raised by Logan relatives.
From another source, I have Robert Arlen Busick's year of death as 1975, not 1974; "farmed", in "farmed the Stumptown Band", should be formed.)

In the row boat, Sam Logan, wife Elizabeth (Leitzinger) holding Sophia, age 2 years (m. Zenas Copeland); Yaquina Olive, age 10 (m. Ira C. Hampton); Alice, age 19 (m. Lester Waugh); and Allen, age 5, on the bow of the boat in front of their farm. Photo taken 1888. Farming could have been more difficult without the fire of 1848 that left the hills bare. Stumps were easier to to dispose of than huge trees. In twenty-five years this young couple accomplished much. These fine photos were made and donated by the Oregon Development Co. first class steamship line, signed by S.B. Toby and the Oregon Pacific Railroad. (This copy is courtesy of Jim Copeland, son of Sophia. Elma (Waugh) Teel of Albany, daughter of Alice, loaned and donated other photos.)

At the big bend in the river is the original Samuel A. Logan farm. Granddaughter Elma Teal assured me she believes Sam was with Joe Graham and William Mackay in l865 when they decided which places they wished to return to file on. Sam was very active, cleared his fields, grew produce, built or had built the fine passenger boat, Benton, with Capt. Samuel Logan. (Ref: Marine History of N.W.) He also had land across the river. In 1893 he had this land surveyed into five acre lots and Capt. Storrs bought the lot next to railroad Siding 1. The flag station became Storrs Station. The house was like the Cloake's house, hence it is believed Alfred Cloake built three houses at Storrs.

(Note by RRC: By my calculations, in 1888 Olive & Allen Logan were each about a year younger than indicated in this article; several typos - "to to" should be to; "Teal" should be Teel.)

Iowa to Oregon in 1862; Recollections of Martha S. (Logan) Harsin, ID = 13524

MEDICAL SPRINGS WOMAN RECALLS ARRIVAL IN 1862

"Grandma" Harsin, 85, faced Hardships on Western Wilderness; only one log cabin then on present site of Baker, the trip from Iowa took five months.
Written by Klass V. Powell

Mrs. Martha S. Harsin fought the battle of motherhood amid the dangers of the western wilderness when the development of Oregon was in its enfancy, and she won. She lived in quietude on the ranch near Medical Springs on which she and her husband "squatted" shortly after their arrival in Baker county in 1862.

Grandma Harsin as she was known among her intimate friends, recalls landing in Baker September 22, 1862, after making the five month trip from Marion county, Iowa. When Mrs. Harsin arrived in this valley there was only one house in Baker, a log cabin, located on the present sight of Cambell Holdings on east Cambell street, just north of the park.

The imigrant party made camp near the Cambell home, according to a story told by Mrs. Harsin to her granddaughter, Mrs. Archie Whisman, who provided the details for this story. A woman who died at the "Farewell Bend" on the Snake River was buried near the camp, having been brought to this valley in Captain Glenn's wagon train. Mrs. Harsin who was then Martha Logan, helped to dress the woman to place her in the casket that was improvised at the grave.

Grandma Harsin's cow helped to pull one of the fifteen wagons in the train, and also furnished milk for the Logan family on the long trek. The cow was the original dam of the present Harsin herd near Medical Springs.

When coming across the plains, a single man who was with Captain Glen's train, said he was going to kill the first Indian he saw. The members of the party urged him to refrain from committing the crime, but further along the trip he killed an Indian squaw. A party of Indians overtook the train before it had gone very far and demanded that the youth be turned over to them, issueing a warning that if he remained with the train the entire party would be killed. The woman's murderer was turned over to the Indians, who tortured him to death.

Golden Wedding Anniversary of Mr. & Mrs. William Baxter Logan, ID = 13532

Golden Wedding Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. W. B. LOGAN

An occasion of more than passing interest was the celebration of their Golden Wedding Anniversary by Mr. and Mrs., W. B. Logan at their home at 401 N. East Street, Corydon, Ia., Friday, April 13, 1923.

Preparations for the celebration were made by their children living near Corydon and when the time arrived the children, grandchildren and a number of the old neighbors assembled at the home where a bountiful dinner was served to all present, one of the features being an elegant bride's cake adorned with the dates 1873-1923. After the dinner was served the guests assembled in the parlor and Mr. Logan was presented with a gold mounted cane and Mrs. Logan with a cameo brooch by the children. Following the presentation interesting talks were made by those present including old neighbors and the children and responses were made by Mr. and Mrs. Logan, all of which was enjoyed by all. Among the guests was the only living witness of the ceremony of fifty years ago, Mrs. Laura Goodale, a sister of Mr. Logan.

In the afternoon many friends and neighbors made informal calls and expressed their good wishes and congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Logan. They were the recipients of many beautiful flowers and gifts presented by their friends.

Wm. B. Logan and Rachel E. Zinn were married April 13, 1873, at the home of the bride's parents in Appanoose County, on the present site of the city of Mystic.

After about four years residence on a farm near that place they moved to Wayne county and bought a farm near Harvard, where most of their children were born and reared. In 1914 they retired from active life and moved to Corydon, where they still reside. Very truly it can be said of them that they were pioneers of Wayne county and southern Iowa, coming at a time when the greater part of the land was raw prairie with scattered villages. They have seen all this changed to modern improved farms and substantial cities and towns. Their career has been marked by industry, helpfulness to others and the advancement of every good cause for the community. One of the great blessings which these good people have to be thankful for is that all eight children and seventeen grandchildren are living. Their children were all present as follows:

Mr. B. E. Logan of Lineville, Ia.,
Mrs. Ola Prince, Guthrie, Okla.,
Mrs. Rena Smith, Allerton, Ia.,
Mr. C. C. Logan, Allerton, Ia.,
Miss Cora E. Logan, Torington, Wyoming,
Mr. Lester Logan, Seymour, Ia.,
Mr. R. Z. Logan, Powell, S. D.
All of the grandchildren were present except two.

Among the out-of-town gusts present were: W. T. Swanson, wife and son Clarence, of Mystic, Iowa, Mary Martin of Centerville, Iowa, W. L. Selby and wife of Sewal, Ia., Ola McConnell of Des Moines, Ia., Laura Goodale of Smith Center, Kansas.

We wish for this estimable couple many more happy anniversaries and reunions.

(Note by RRC: It seems that one child, Mrs. Hallie Krouse, was left out of the list of attendees; a typo - "Torington" should be Torrington.)

Garnet says it's time

At 103, this Democrat says
she's ready for woman president

MARCUS, Iowa - Garnet Stokesberry was 15 years old when women earned the right to vote in I920.

Eighty-eight years later she's still exercising that right.

Stokesberry, who turned 103 on Friday, caucused Thursday evening with Democrats at Cleghorn, Iowa, in Cherokee County. She got there thanks to granddaughter Belinda Leavitt, a good Republican from Marcus, who dropped Grandma off while heading to her GOP caucus in Cherokee.

Leavitt said her grandmother inspired her to turn out another voter in the family: Son Kent, 22.

"Kent didn't want to go to the caucus and I told him that his great-grandmother was going on the day before she turned 103," Leavitt said. "I told him she understands what a privilege we have in this."

The 22-year-old got the message. He rode with Mom and participated in his first caucus.

For Great Grandma, it might have been her last. These only come around every four years, you know. She'll be 107 when the next takes place, and perhaps 111 when the next on the Democratic side is contested.

Stokesberry, a lifelong Democrat, believes the nominee from her party will be in the Oval Office and unchallenged four years from now.

She hopes it's Hillary Clinton, her caucus choice and the winner among participants who sipped coffee and dined on treats Thursday at the new Cleghorn Community Center. Clinton received 61votes at Cleghorn, one of two Democratic caucus sites in the county. John Edwards earned 43 and Barack Obama 28 in Cleghorn.

"I didn't think there were that many Democrats in Cherokee County," Stokesberry joked, alluding to the state record turnout Thursday that helped secure a victory for Obama.

Why Hillary?

"Because I think she's a very intelligent woman," said Stokesberry, whose home in Marcus still displays a Hillary Clinton sign.

"Is it time for a woman to serve as president?

"Yes," Stokesberry said with emphasis. "She couldn't do any worse than the man we have in there now."

Stokesberry, a lifelong educator who graduated from college in the l920s, said the War on Terror and the economy are her hot-button issues.

"The war in Iraq was uncalled for," she contended. "What have there been, 80,000 Iraqis killed? It's terrible."

Oil prices which topped $100 per barrel for the first time ever this week have surged like a wave through the economy. While Stokesberry doesn't have a car and no longer drives, she understands wholesalers facing higher trucking costs pass those costs along to consumers like her. That, and higher heating costs have her cost of living on the rise.

Still, she's not in the shape she was when she began teaching in the mid-l920s. Stokesberry laughed, remembering her own "Black Friday," a day she deposited her first check for teaching. The check came to $65.

"I got paid on a Friday and put the check in my account at the bank at Corydon, Iowa," she said. "The bank didn't reopen on Monday."

She lost it all as the bank crashed at the onset of the Great Depression.

What's worse? Her uncle was director at the bank. He later ran for the Iowa State Senate and won. So did her father, Theodore Krouse. Both were Democrats.

Small wonder she's always had an eye for the political scene.

At 103, she still does.

"I taught Don Avenson in English when he was in the ninth grade at Oelwein High School," he said. "He later ran for governor."

Like Hillary Clinton, I'm sure Avenson got Stokeberry's vote. Good Democrats both.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "he said" should be she said.)

While Stokesberry doesn't have a car and no longer drives, she understands wholesalers facing higher trucking costs pass those costs along to consumers like her. That, and higher heating costs have her cost of living on the rise.

Still, she's not in the shape she was when she began teaching in the mid-1920s. Stokesberry laughed, remembering her own "Black Friday," a day she deposited her first check for teaching. The check came to $65.

"I got paid on a Friday and put the check in my account at the bank at Corydon, Iowa," she said. "The bank didn't reopen on Monday."

She lost it all as the bank crashed at the onset of the Great Depression.

What's worse? Her uncle was director at the bank. He later ran for the Iowa State Senate and won. So did her father, Theodore Krouse. Both were Democrats.

Small wonder she's always had an eye for the political scene.

At 103, she still does.

"I taught Don Avenson in English when he was in the ninth grade at Oelwein High School," he said. "He later ran for governor."

Like Hillary Clinton, I'm sure Avenson got Stokesberry's vote. Good Democrats both.

Golden Wedding Anniversary - Samuel & Mary (McNair) Logan, ID = 13534

Golden Wedding

Fifty years ago, when this part of the world was still young, ... a company of friends gathered in the primitive little Beaver Valley school house to witness a wedding ceremony. The contracting parties were Samuel L. Logan and Mary Isabelle McNair, ...

... served by four granddaughters of the pair ... Mrs. Roxie Peck Keeney of Kansas City.

There were appropriate speeches, reminiscences and old-time songs, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "O, Give Me a Home Where the Buffalo Roam," etc. The "baby" of the family, now grown to manhood and himself the father of a family, paid fitting tribute to

"That old-fashioned father, that old-fashioned mother,
That old-fashioned altar, I'll never forget."

Rev. I. N. Faurot made a few happy remarks. Mrs. Sherman Mathis contributed a history of the couple in rhyme. G. L. Kirkendall, who confessed to being a former pupil of the bride, sang a school-boy version of "Sweet Belle Mahone." Notwithstanding the specific request, "No presents," Mrs. Clarence Starbuck in behalf of the Logan clan, presented the couple with a gold piece, admonishing them that -

You've been hermits long enough,
So we've decided to call your bluff.
And since you see your bluff's been called,
We insist that a phone be now installed."

Fifty years - long enough in prospect, surprisingly brief in retrospect. Yet those pioneers have weathered the storms and stress incident to life in a new country, and have witnessed the transformation of the wilderness. Like all pioneers they will tell you many a thrilling and diverting tale of those brave old days. Both were school teachers, and when they closed their door behind them in the morning, each mounted a mule to ride away in opposite directions to the day's work, earning the handsome salaries of 12 and 15 dollars per month.

The old "claim" is still their home. Their seven children, now all grown and in homes of their own, all live within a few miles of the parental home, except one son, Mac, who saw service in France in the World war and is now located at Colony, Kansas. A host of friends join with the children and twenty-six grandchildren in paying tribute to the sterling worth of this happy couple in wishing them more years of peace and plenty.

A Tribute To A Mother

Mrs. Sam Logan is being greatly missed by her large family of relatives and her friends. Two weeks ago she went with her son Charles to northern Iowa, to visit her youngest daughter, Mrs. Frank Hutchinson. Just before leaving she celebrated her 70th birthday. Her 42 descendants remembered her with a shower of letters, greetings and cakes. There are four sons, three daughters, twenty-nine grandchildren, and six great granddaughters of her family.

Mother Logan is truly a pioneer woman. She came to Smith County in the spring of 1872, with her parents from Sterling, Ill. In her early womanhood she was a teacher and is lovingly remembered yet by men and women who were her pupils in those good old days. She has been a Sunday School teacher in the Presbyterian church for more than 45 years. Few of younger years are more faithful and devoted as a teacher than she. For 59 years she has traveled the four miles from her home to her church, first in a lumber wagon, then a spring wagon, and the last few years in a car. No difference what her mode of travel is, she is there and on time. Only when the weather or ill health prevents is she absent from church. She has always been active in missin work, more than 40 years ago she organized the first mission band for children in her church.

All of her old neighbors have gone to return no more, but she still lives in the house, built by father Logan, nearly 60 years ago. With the help of her grandson she keeps things up in fine shape on the old homestead and is contented and happy in the home she has loved so long. She spends much of her time studying her Bible and committing verses to memory. Although she has passed through many years of what we now call depression, she has not been hurt by it, "for her trust was in the Lord who made heaven and earth."

Everyone of her big family will remember hearing her say many times, when things looked dark, "The Lord will provide."

"God gave us each one dear mother - so that nobody need feel slighted, and only one - so that nobody need feel too proud." - A Daughter.

(Note by RRC: I suspect "missin" should be mission.)

REMINISCENCES OF EARLY DAYS by Mrs. Laura Ann Goodale

John C. Goodale and Trube Reece came to Kansas together from Illinois, in March, 1872. They stopped at the land office at Concordia and Robert Zimmerman gave them the numbers of two quarter sections of land, with the privilege of changing if they did not suit them. But the land proved to be the two best quarter sections in the county, or so they thot. They were two miles north of Smith Center. Mr. Reece drove the team and Mr. Goodale stepped the distance, taking a magnesia hill several miles north for a sight. They found the section corner stones in this way. They located their claims, decided on a site for a temporary camp and took the overjet off their wagon and unloaded, Mr. Reece took the team and went a mile west to Beaver Creek for a load of wood, and while he was gone Mr. Goodale had a well dug and had water by the time he returned.

They had all out-of-doors for a kitchen and slept in the wagon cover. The put two sticks of timber under the bed, that made a nice place for the rattlesnakes to hide in. When they pulled their bed out, old Lyon, the dog soon killed them, but when he tackled a porcupine, he had to have the quills pulled out of his nose. They held him and used the bullet mold to pull the quills with. Next day, Trube took the team and went to Jewell City for provisions, a distance of about forty miles. Mr. Goodale stayed at camp and kept a fire going at night to keep the wolves away. Next day he started for town, (Smith Center) a stake driven into the ground with a red handkerchief tied to it. The two wagon tracks were the only marks he had to go by. The old dog found a porcupine, Mr. Goodale went to help him out and lost the trail. It was cloudy so he had nothing to guide him. He wandered around till four o'clock before he finally found camp. Tired and hungry, he made some mush. He ate a mouthful, then gave the dog a mouthful until the meal was finished.

They worked for fifty cents a day, gave a dollar and fifty cents for cornmeal, fifty cents a gallon for coal oil and ten cents a box for matches. They broke prairie and planted corn in the cracks between the sod, raised everything they planted. In 1873 they raised a good crop. In 1874 they had a good crop when the grasshoppers came. They came July 26, 1874. They ate every green thing, for three days the ground was covered.

Mr. Goodale and two other bachelors, Charley Shoemaker and Hank Bachelor went to Iowa to work the winter of 1874-1875. He came back in the spring of 1875 and was married to Laura Ann Logan Goodale December 12, 1875. They lived on his homestead and accumulated enough to keep them. They sold their first hogs for $2.50 a hundred pounds, dressed, paying .50 a hundred to have them taken to Hastings, Neb., a distance of eighty-five miles. They hauled oats to Salina, Kansas and sold them for .15 a bushel.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodale moved to Smith Center in 1886 where they lived till Mr. Goodale's death in 1915. Mrs. Goodale still resides in Smith Center.

THE HUMBOLDT HOTEL

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Logan, of Rockwell City, have purchased the equipment of the Hotel Humboldt and rented the building and will conduct it hereafter. They have operated the Brower Hotel in Rockwell City for many years and are experienced hotel people.

They have leased the Cafe privileges of Hotel Humboldt to Mrs. Clara Sullivan also of Rockwell City who will refit it, open it and expects by July 1 to have it ready for customers. Mrs. Sullivan will be assisted by her son Duane Sullivan who is also an experienced man in that work.

This is gratifying news to the people of this vicinity.

Humboldt people have a financial and sentimental interest in Hotel Humboldt.

It was many years after the old Russell House was destroyed by fire that the new edifice arose. In the meantime to preserve the site the Humboldt business men raised a fund or money and purchased it and held it for the new owner whoever he might be, of the new hotel. Added to that they raised a sum or cash well into the thousands of dollars that they were willing to put with the site (they had been offered $11,000 for it) and make a gift to the man or woman who would build a new hotel that met their requirements. After many false starts with various people an agreement was reached and the present Hotel Humboldt was built and operated.

That's why the people of Humboldt have both a sentimental and financial interest in the hotel.

They will back it to the limit in what is right. They will give it their patronage and support in everything that is legitimate.

The new proprietors will find a ready support to every effort they make to give Humboldt a good hotel and cafe.

Added to that they raised a sum of cash well into the thousands of dollars that they were willing to put with the site (they had been offered $11,000 for it) and make a gift to the man or woman who would build a new hotel that met their requirements. After many false starts with various people an agreement was reached and the present Hotel Humboldt was built and operated.

That's why the people of Humboldt have both a sentimental and financial interest in the hotel.

They will back it to the limit in what is right. They will give it their patronage and support in everything that is legitimate.

LOCAL HOTEL SOLD AUG. 9 TO OPERATORS

Mrs. L. L. Logan and Son Are The New Owners

The Humboldt hotel, known as Hotel Humboldt, was sold Monday, August 9 to Mrs. L. L. Logan and step-son, Kenneth, of Humboldt, who have operated the hotel for the past four years. The building was purchased from Merrill Amspoker of Emmetsburg. The hotel cafe, which has been operated by Guy H. Smith in the past few years, will continue under his ownership at the present.

The hotel was opened by Mr Amspoker, and his sister, Mrs Ethel Emrie in 1940. This was Humboldt's first and only hotel since 1928 when the Russell hotel and theater burned to the ground.

Mr. Amspoker and Mrs. Emrie were assisted in their new venture by Humboldt citizens who contributed to a fund to purchase the hotel site and save it for parties interested in constructing a modern hotel. The town donated the site to them. The two owners managed the hotel until the war, and then the hotel was managed by Mrs. Emrie until Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Logan of Rockwell City leased the building about four years ago. Mr. Logan's death left the hotel under the management of his wife and his son, Kenneth, who had returned from the armed services a short time before.

PIONEERS GATHER IN CROOK COUNTY

Old Residents Meet for Annual Picnic

Pioneers of Crook county, including early day residents of Central Oregon who lived in this part of the state when Crook included Jefferson and Deschutes, met for their annual picnic yesterday under the trees of the Prineville city park, listened to a patriotic address by Prof. W. J. Chamberlin, of Oregon State college, re-elected officers and discussed old times. Included in the large group attending the picnic was a delegation from Bend.

Speakers included Linsy Sisemore, son of the owner of the Farewell Bend ranch in early days and now acting president of the Klamath Pioneers' association. Chamberlin had as his topic "What Price Democracy." Prineville legionnaires assisted with the program and provided a color guard.

A feature of the meeting was the display of pioneer relics. This display is rapidly growing from year to year. A short memorial program was held during the afternoon, with women of the association in charge.

Outstanding action taken by the association was that fixing the year 1900 as the "upper date" in membership eligibility. Under the revised ruling, any person who lived in Crook county prior to 1900 is eligible to membership in the association.

Mrs. Hattie Reed, of Culver, was crowned queen of the association, with Howard W. Turner, of Madras, in charge of this phase of the ceremony. Carey W. Foster was re-elected association president and Miss Nora Stearns was re-elected secretary.

Sanders Logan was introduced as the oldest native of Crook county present for the annual reunion.

The Ranch in Central Oregon of Samuel Allen Logan, ID = 135c

(Transcribed by RRC from the 1993 Christmas newsletter of Peg & Dick Logan, San Diego, CA)

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE LOGAN RANCH

Samuel Allen and Elmira Logan, Dick's grandparents, came to Central Oregon from Iowa about 1884. They had gotten off the train at The Dalles, Oregon, on the Columbia River, and started on their ten-day wagon trip to Central Oregon.

With them were their two sons Allen March (age 7) and Fisher Connelly (age 2), and Mae Spaw (age 13), a family member by some agreement, but not related to the Logans. They struggled for years, finally establishing a thriving ranch on Camp Creek fifty miles up the Crooked River from Prineville, the nearest town. They became wealthy by local standards.

Drought and low cattle prices in the early twenties destroyed the enterprise and Fisher C. became a tenant farmer with a wife and seven small children. He was to move his family several times before being ab1e to re-establish himself in a small way. For our family the Great Depression was to last most of the twenties and thirties. Through his honesty and hard work Dad sustained his good name. He was Fisher C. Logan, a man of his word.

Connely-Moody Wedding

Miss Lucile Connely, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Edgar Connely, and Mr. Horace Jackson Moody, the only son of Mrs. H.B. Moody, all of Harrisonvile, were quietly married at the home of the bride on South Independence Street, this city, at 8:30 o'clock on the evening of Wednesday, June 15, 1921. The ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. J.D. Robins, pastor of the Harrisonville Methodist Church.

The home was beautifully decorated with resplendent bouquets of cut flowers, and, as the bride and groom descended the stairs, Mendelssohn's beautiful wedding march was played by Miss Wilma Scruggs and, during the ceremony, Miss Scruggs played the old song "Annie Laurie".

As soon as the ceremony was over, light refreshments were served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Moody, accompanied by Mr. Harry Hudson Bird of Harrisonville, motored to Kansas City from which place the "newly-weds" started on their honeymoon, but their final destination was not made known. Mr. Bird returned to this city the following morning.

The ceremony was witnessed only by the close relatives of the bride and groom and a few personal friends, as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Connely, the parets of the bride; her sister, Miss Corinne; her grandmother, Mrs. T.S. Webster of Austin, Mo; the groom's mother, Mrs. H.B. Moody; Dr. and Mrs. Sylvester J. Woolridge; Mrs. Finis Volle, Mrs. Aston V. Renwick; Misses Wilma Scruggs and Ada May Elder, and Messrs. Joseph Lisle Brown, Robert L. Bohon and Harry Hudson Bird.

So quietly was the approaching weeding of these two young people kept, that the majority of their friends did not know it had happened, until after the bride and groom had left for their honeymoon trip.

They are two of Harrisonville's finest young citizens. Both are in the social events of their set, are very accomplished, and possess charming personalities. The bride is a singer and pianist of high rank, and has made many public appearances, which were always a signal triumph. The groom holds a responsible clerical position in the Will Clemments hardware store of this city and is a young business man, who is destined to attain the highest point on the ladder of success.

Mr. and Mrs. "Jack" Moody will be at home after their return from their weeding trip at the home of the groom[s mother, East Pearl S treet, where they will receive the congratulations, and well wishes of their innumerable friends, in which the DEMOCRAT will most heartily join.

Observe 68th Anniversary

Special to The Times

GREENCASTLE, Ind., March 12.—To be married and live together as man and wife for almost three score and ten years seems a fantasy in the light of modern divorce court records. Yet this is the history of Elias Garner, 88, and Mrs. Margaret Garner, 92, who celebrated their sixty-eighth wedding anniversary in Greencastle this week.

The commemoration was held at the home of James Garner, son of Elias Garner. Among the guests present were the children, grandchildren, great grandchildren and one great-great grandchild. Dr. Riley Halstead, who was the Methodist presiding elder when Mr. and Mrs. Garner were residents of Putnamville, returned thanks at dinner.

Mrs. Elias Garner is the daughter of the late Gilmore and Jane Connelly, pioneer residents of Putnam County. She was born in Montgomery County, Kentucky, Aug. 22, 1828. Her father move to this county with his family and settled on what is now known as the Arch Cooper farm, which adjoins the National road. In transit the mother of the family rode horseback and carried the youngest child in her lap. Mr. Connelly walked and drove the cattle, while the eldest boy drove a team of oxen.

On this farm Mrs. Garner grew to womanhood. She was united in marriage to Elias Garner March 6, 1851. Today she is the only surviving member of her father's family.

Elias Garner is one of the eight children of Smith Garner of Virginia and Marcissa Bellamy Garner of Nashville, Tenn. He was born Nov. 19, 1832, in Switzerland County, Indiana, and, like his wife, is the only surviving member of his father's family.

Until the fall of 1918, Mr. and Mrs. Garner lived on a farm in Putnam County. Since that time they have been living with their children who are Mrs. Alice Bowman and James Garner of Greencastle, and Walter Garner of Franklin township, Putnam County.

Early in life Mr. and Mrs. Garner united with the Methodist Episcopal Church and until old age prevented, were regular attendants at all services.

Throughout his life Mr. Garner has been a member of the Democratic party, and, at the age of 92, his wife cast her first vote for the Democratic candidates.

Mr. Garner said that the seasons or 1853, the year of his marriage, and the seasons of 1863 were similar in weather conditions to this year. On March 7, 1863, he and his brother Frank found that the grass had grown to the height of three inches around the sugar water troughs. A neighbor, Dan Chadd, planted corn on the 12th of April and by the 27th day it was two inches high. On June 2 he had new potatoes from his garden. If this season continues to correspond to those of 1853 and 1863 early and good crops will he assured, he says.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, “Connelly” should be Connely & “1851” should be 1853.)

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Garner celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary Sunday at their home one mile south of Raccoon.

They were married Sept. 9, 1884, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Secrets, one mile north of Putnamvllle, by the Rev. U. V. Moore, Methodist minister. They have spent their entire life in Putnam county, residing near Putnamville until about fourteen years ago, when they purchased a farm of Albert Bowman, south of Raccoon, where they have since resided.

There were four persons present Sunday who attended their wedding: Mrs. Alice Bowman, sister of the groom: Mrs. Nora Garner, sister-in-law of the groom, and her daughter (then a baby), Mrs. Jennie Hutcheson, and Mrs. Thomas Houlett, all of the Greencastle vicinity.

An unusual feature of the couple is that both Mr. and Mrs. Garner’s parents lived to celebrate their 50th anniversaries.

Dinner was served to the following guests: Mr. Cass and Mrs. Nellie Hughes, of Terre Haute; Mr. James Swift and daughter, Mrs. Nora Garner, Mr. and Mrs. Verner Houck and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutcheson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Houlet, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Houlet, Mrs. Alice Bowman and granddaughter and Rev. Yeager, all of the Greencastle vicinity; Mr. and Mrs. John L Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kline and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nicols, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Myers, Mr. and Mrs. John Leaton and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Riddle and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stamp, Miss Jennie Stamp, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Harbison, Miss Letha Wilson, Mr. Howard Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Garner and daughter.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, "Secrets" should be Secrest. I suspect "Houlet" and "Houlett" should be Howlett.)

(Note by RRC: I'll never forget how excited I was that day back in the late 1970s when I found this document in the Indiana State Library. I later had the pleasure of meeting Mary Frances and visiting with her at her home in Greencastle. She was a great genealogist & was DAR on this line. Based on the ages of 89 for Charles Frederick Connely (1876 – 1966) and 13 for his granddaughter, which Mary Frances mentions in her work, my guess is that she wrote this in January 1966. Over the next 3 decades I was able to confirm most everything she compiled. I have only a few minor differences in the spelling of surnames, dates of birth, etc. However, I was never able to show that the Thomas Connely who married Margaret Lowder was a son of Thomas & Margaret (Walker) Connely.)

Wedding Announcement.

An important engagement just announced, in the Globe-Democrat of Sunday, is that of Miss Nellie Bagnell to Mr. Byron Fenner Babbitt. Miss Bagnell is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. William Bagnell, No 12 Westmoreland place, and one of the greatest belles in society. She has been traveling a great deal of late with her aunt and uncle, and has been much missed in St. Louis society. Miss Bagnell is an extremely dainty type of beauty, with golden brown hair and clear blue eyes. Although not tall, she is perfectly proportioned, looking her best in the simple, though elegant, toilets which she most delights to wear. Mr. Babbitt is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Thayer, and has lately been appointed to the post of United States commissioner. Although just returned from California, where she has been all winter, Miss Bagnell will leave in a short time to spend the summer in Europe, with Mr. and Mrs. Bagnell. The wedding will take place in the early fall, and is being looked forward to as one of the events of the opening season. Mr. Babbitt is a member of the law firm of Kern & Babbitt, of this city.

Miss Bagnell is well known in Marshall, having spent much of her young life at Elk Hill farm and since the death of her father, the late Thomas Bagnell, she visited our city with her uncle William Bagnell and wife, when she made many friends, who will look forward to her wedding with a great deal of interest.

WEDDING PLANS ARE CHANGED

Miss Bagnell and Mr. Babbitt Marry Nine Days Before the Date Announced by Cards.

As announced in the 7 o'clock edition of the Post-Dispatch, the marriage of Byron T. Babbitt and Miss Nellie Bagnell took place at 5 o'clock Monday evening in the chapel of Christ Church Cathedral, nine days in advance of the published date for the wedding.

It is said that illness in the family of the bride caused the change in the arrangements.

Only a few relatives and intimate friends witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Carroll M. Davis.

So quickly were the plans for the wedding formed that it was found impossible to communicate with Nathaniel McDonald, chief deputy clerk of the United States Circuit Court, who was to have been best man.

Judge Thayer of the United States Circuit Court, uncle of the groom, was in attendance. He was notified by telephone.

The bride is a niece of William Bagnell of 12 Westmoreland place. She returned recently from a trip to Europe.

Mr. Babbitt is a lawyer and is a United States commissioner.

Mr. and Mrs. Babbitt will live at the Bagnell residence for a few weeks, after which they will travel through the South. They will be at home to friends after their return at Hotel Franklin.

SEPARATION OF BABBITTS LAID IN PART TO RELIGION

Acquaintances Say Lawyer Who Sues for Divorce is Episcopalian, Wife is Catholic,

---

The divorce suit of Byron F. Babbitt, a lawyer, against Mrs. Helen Babbitt, formerly Miss "Nellie" Bagnell, and a niece of William Bagnell of 12 Westmoreland place, did not come wholly as a surprise to some of the acquantances of Mr. and Mrs. Babbitt, who had known of the recent infelicity of their married life.

Mrs. Babbitt lives in the Jane Bagnell residence at 9500 North Broadway, north of the city limits. This house, built at a cost of $40,000 within the last few years, and the tract of nearly 100 acres surrounding it, make one of the finest country homes in the vicinity of St. Louis. Mrs. Babbitt inherited the property from her aunt, Miss Jane Bagnell, who died a year and a half ago.

Babbitt, in his petition, names this house as his residence address, though he says he and his wife separated July 2 last. The Babbitts lived, until a year or so ago, at 4477 Berlin avenue. They were married in 1901. Babbitt is a United States Commissioner, with authority to hold preliminary hearings of persons arrested by Federal officers. He was formerly private secretary to the late United States Judge Amos L. Thayer, who was his uncle, and he was later secretady to Judge Adams.

In his brief divorce petition, Babbitt alleges that his wife became indifferent toward him and failed to show him proper affection.

Acquaintances of the Babbitts said yesterday that religious differences had played a part in their domestic difficulties. Mrs. Babbitt, these friends say, although from a Protestant family attended a convent school in France and became an ardent Catholic. After her marriage, she is said to have been disappointed at her failure to interest her husband in her church, while he, in turn, was displeased at her unwillingness to accompany him to services of the Episcopal Church, to which he belongs.

Mrs. Babbitt has been an owner of pedigreed dogs and after her removal to her country home she engaged in the sale of such dogs as a business enterprise. She is an accomplished pianiste.

(Note by RRC: A typo - "acquantances" should be acquaintances; I suspect "secretady" should be secretary, "pianiste" should be pianist.)

John W. Hopper, of Carlisle and Tressa May Brown of New Lebanon were married at the marrying parlors of Squire Kirkham Thursday morning at 11:30. The bride is 16 and the groom is 20. They will reside on a farm near Carlisle. The groom, like many other youth, had not thoroughly acquainted himself with the late revisions of the marriage laws in the state and consequently did not bring with him the written consent of his parents, so he was forced to make a return trip to Carlisle Wednesday and secure the necessary credentials, thus delaying the marriage one day. - Sullivan Times (Thursday).

Several years ago, my cousin Minnie Alice (Bondurant) Scott, wrote a book about the Bondurant family for her father, James William Bondurant. I have borrowed freely from her very fine work, with her permission, (some of it verbatim) and without her help this book would have never been printed. Much credit is also due to Minnie Alices' father. Her book, help from many other Bondurants, and a little research on my part has resulted in what I sincerely hope will be informative and pleasant reading.

RICHARD BONDURANT, the second son of John, II, and Sarah
Moseley Bondurant was born August 22, 1740, in Manakin Town. He married Cecelia Ann Hall and they had three children. Their first born, Thomas, married Margaret Drury and they went to Boone County, Kentucky, in 1820. Frances, their only girl, married Jacob Holsclaw and they too went to Boone County. Their third child was Joseph, who married Martha Tharp. Joseph and Martha moved westward and one of their sons, Alexander Connelly Bondurant, founded the town of Bondurant, Iowa.

BONDURANT, IOWA

Alexander Connelly Bondurant, son of Joseph and Martha (Tharp) Bondurant, was born September 1, 1829 in Sangamon County, Illinois. He married Margaret Brooks October 27, 1861. From this marriage eight children were born. One of the eight was Florence, whose son, Fred Lingenfelter, lives today in Rochelle, Illinois

Mr. Bondurant joined the immigration from Illinois to Iowa in 1857 and laid claim to 320 acres of land on Section 31, Franklin Township. He later bought 320 more acres at $1.25 per acre, adding to that until owning 2,500 acres. In 1882 the Chicago Great Western Railroad built a station on his land and named it Bondurant, Iowa.

Mr. Bondurant himself platted the town and gave a lot to anyone who would build a home or business there. He gave lots for the building of churches and schools. He was a deeply religious man and also had a great interest in educational matters. He was at one time on the Board of Trustees of Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa.

The first business to open in Bondurant was a store which occupied the lower story of the building with the upstairs being used as a church. In 1885 the first school opened with thirty-five scholars. In 1886 Mr. Bondurant donated thirty acres of land to be used as an aid to a local church. The church members planted crops, tended and gathered, followed by a husking bee. In 1909 he offered free sites for manufacturing industries. Shops factories, grain elevators, two hotels, a bank and newspaper called the "Bondurant Journal." Today, Bondurant is a small but thriving community. Mr. Bondurant died in Bondurant, Iowa, September 16, 1899.

Semi-pro baseball player Guy Elston, ID = 154333

Remember When
By CHARLIE BRAY

Pictures of some of the old-time baseball players who were involved in the 1919 Chicago White Sox baseball scandal have been borrowed from an old collection saved by a rabid baseball fan from Castro Valley.

The rabid baseball fan who lives in Castro Valley is Guy Elston of Carlton avenue, who first saw the light of day in 1881 in the town of Churdan, Iowa.

At the age of thirteen he was the regular first baseman of the Hawkeye school squad. He also did some receiving in a pinch but, always liked first sack the best of any position.

Leaving the town at the age of 16, he moved to Wellsford, Kansas with his parents where he played with the Wellsford Crackers. He lived there with his parents until he was 18 years old when his family moved to Wichita, Kansas, and Guy joined a semi-pro ball club playing under the name of Johnson and Larmer.

He had been with the club about three years and was seen by a scout who asked him if he was interested in a contract. Guy took the scout to meet his father and the scout was told his son was not interested - especially if the games were to be played on Sunday.

That was the end of Guy's baseball days. In 1913 he moved to San Francisco and in 1916 to Castro Valley.

Always interested in baseball, Elston began to save pictures of ball-players, write up personal meetings with them and he now has one of the greatest collections of material this writer has ever put his "mince pies" (eyes) on.

During the canning season, Elston works for Hunt's Foods ...

When Guy is not working he and his wife spend a lot of time with their three-month-old grandson, Lee Alan Wilson, who lives with his parents at 19659 Center street in Castro Valley.

The Elstons live at 18997 Carlton avenue so if any of you readers are interested in baseball talk, drop in on Guy and you will be entertained with baseball pictures and stories of the old-timers in the game.

(Note by RRC: All records I have seen (with info on Guy's birthplace) indicate that he was born in IA - but precisely where in IA I'm not certain. Here Churdan is given as Guy's birthplace. Churdan is in Greene County. But in his WW II draft registration card, Guy gives a neighboring county, Calhoun, as his birthplace.)

Twenty-five members of the family gathered at the home of the honored guests' daughter, Mrs. Elsie Jane Richards on Meridian Road, to help them celebrate the occasion.

Bouquets of jonquils and pussy willows centered the lace covered table where the dinner was served. The afternoon was spent socially.

Mr. and Mrs. Bondurant were married in Iowa and came here in July, 1898. Before his recent retirement, he was a prominent farmer in the northwest part of the valley.

They have 11 children living, namely: H. L. Bondurant of Campbell, Calif.; Mrs. Florance Stuart, Eugene, Ore.; C. B. Bondurant, Jr., Eugene Bondurant, Mrs. Mary Gilbertson, James A. WOULD BREAK WILL Heirs of Thomas Bondurant of Deland, Begins Suit at Monticello.

Monticello, Feb. 16.—A bill was filed in the circuit clerk's office Wednesday to contest the will of Thomas Bondurant, who died in Deland on January 15, 1905. The complainants are Thomas N. Bondurant, Emma Handley, Martha A. Seaman, Etta G. Miller, A. C. Bondurant, Florence B. Lingfelter, Nellie B. Austin, C. B. Bondurant and Emma Ridlingshafer, who are heirs at law. They allege in their bill that the will was signed under undue influence of T. J. Schofield and Mary E. Bondurant, her sister, and other designing persons. He gave in this will a large amount to churches and schools, Eureka college being the chief beneficiary. There are a large number of defendants and the summons in the case will go to sheriffs in eighteen counties. Many of the defendants are non-residents of this state and they will be served by the publication route. It looks on the face like a big law suit and the costs will be large.

Bondurant Will Contest Again
Comes to Trial in Piatt County

... Piatt county comes to the fore with the Bondurant will case, involving anywhere between $500,000 and $1,000,000 dollars, which will be up for re-trial at the term of circuit court opening in Piatt county on Monday, Feb. 10.

The suit, which is an effort to break the will of the late Thomas E. Bandurant of Deland, was tried in Piatt county last year. The law suit itself lasted for three weeks. After being out for two or three days the jury found for the contestants. A motion for a new trial was immediately granted by Judge Cochran, on the ground that a new heir had been born after the suit was instituted, who had not been made a party to the suit.

The will was made on May 21, 1902. It was written by Judge Charles J. Schofield of Carthage, a personal friend of Mr. Bondurant. It was witnessed by Otis H. Vittum, Thomas J. Holton and Judge Schofield.

Sister's Influence at Issue.

In the previous suit the contestants maintained that much of the undue influence was exercised by Judge Schofield and by Mary E. Bondurant. Miss Bondurant is a sister of the testator. To Miss Bondurant was left the home place, one of the most beautiful and elegantly appointed in Piatt county, worth between $30,000 and $50,000. The residence sits in the midst of a lawn of ten acres or more. The place is on the outskirts of Deland, a village of about 500 inhabitants. It is enclosed by a high iron fence. Just across the street from it is the handsome Christian church which was built a few years ago largely upon donations made by Mr. Bondurant. Mr. Bondurant remained an elder in that church until his death. On another corner nearby is the public school building of Deland, in which Mr. Bondurant was deeply interested.

Nephews and Nieces Sue.

Nine nieces and nephews of Mr. Bondurant are the mainstays in the effort to break his will. Five of these contestants are the children of A. C. Bondurant of Iowa, a brother. Two of them are the children of Samuel Bondurant, another brother, living in Chicago Heights.

It is openly claimed by Miss Mary Bondurant that her only living brother, J. N. Bondurant of Paxton, is the instigator of the action to have the will set aside. According to the story told by Miss Bondurant, J. N. Bondurant owed Thomas E. Bondurant a large sum of money extending far into the thousands at the time of the latter's death. Miss Bondurant, who was named executor of the will, has already started suit against her brother to force a payment of this debt...

Miss Bondurant on the other hand has prepared data to show that her brother did do a vast amount of trading, and that he invariably made money on his trades. She cites one trade, perhaps the last ever made by Mr. Bondurant, a few weeks before his death, where he sold a 160-acre tract at an advance or $1,600 on the purchase price a couple of years before.

Many Lawyers in the Suit.

...

The case will be far from an end even after a verdict has been given in the Platt county circuit court. It unquestionably will go to the supreme court of the state. Miss Bondurant declares that she will spend every cent of the estate in protecting the will of her dead brother, which she says is sacred to her. She is a pleasant woman about 60 years or age, and well preserved. The Bondurant home in the lifetime of Thomas E. Bondurant was ever open to friend or stranger, and Miss Bondurant has maintained this excellent reputution of the old homestead.

A Pioneer of Illinois.

Thomas E. Bondurant never married.

Neither did his sister. While he was yet a boy his father died, leaving to him the support of his mother and the entire family. His mother lived until a few years ago, and up to that time Mr.

Bondurant felt that his first duty was to his mother.

A brief sketch of his life follows:

Thomas E. Bondurant was born about six miles east of Mechanicsburg Dec. 29, 1831, and died at his home in De-land Monday, Jan. 16, 1905. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bon-durant, came from Kentucky to Illi-nois in 1828, entering a small farm near Mechanicsburg. There were six sisters and five brothers in his father's family. The oldest son, John Tilman, went to California in 1850, and died soon after reaching there. Samuel Bondurant serv-ed in the Civil war about two years, and died at his home in the northern part of the state in 1888. A. C. Bondu-rant went to Iowa in 1857 and died Sept. l7, 1899. J. N. Bondurant, the youngest brother, is living at Paxton. Of the sisters, Amanda, Mrs. Margaret D. Underwood, Mrs. Lucretia Churchill, and Mrs. Elizabeth Miller have passed beyond, and Miss Mary E. Bondurant of Deland and Mrs. Martha Thornton of Ankeney, Ia., are living.

In 1854 Mr. Bondnrnnt entered 290 acres of land (where the original home stands) under the graduation act of congress, at fifty cents per acre. April 9, 1856, he came to the county to make his home. He hauled most of the lum-ber to build his home from Champaign. His mother and sister came to make their home with him in l86l. His mo-ther died at his home in Deland Aug. l5, 1892.

Always Interested in College.

In 1857 he had five teams-a yoke of fine oxen to each team-and broke prairie near Broadlands. In 1855 he went to Eureka to attend college and stayed one year. He entered school the next year, but was taken sick and had to return home. When he recovered he became engrossed in business and never returned to school. It was one of the regrets of his life that he did not obtain a college education. He was always interested in Eureka college, and in 1896 gave that institution two hundred acres of land. Since that time he has paid the college rent on this.

When about twenty years of age he joined the Christian church at Buffalo Hart Grove. He remained an active member of the church until his death. After he went to Piatt county he transferred his membership to Farmer City, where he and his mother and sister attended church until 1876, when the Union church was built at Deland. He was much interested in the Christian church at Deland; was one of its charter members, and one of the elders from its organization until he was no longer able to look after the work. He gave largely to the Christian churches throughout the state.

He was supervisor of Goose Creek township for a number of years. In 1873 he laid out the town of Deland.

For fourteen years Mr. Bondurant got his mail at Monticello. He rode over the prairies of this county in an early day, when there were no roads and many swamps. He said he was never afraid of being lost when he could see the stars, because he could guide himself by the north star. When the streams and sloughs were partially frozen over he rode a mare that was trained to break the ice. She would strike the ice with her hoof and break it for several feet in front of her and repeat the operation until the slough or branch was crossed.

Mr. Bondurant was an ardent Republican from the time of the organization of the party. He was a strong temperance man and worked faithfully in the interests of that cause. He was a warm personal friend of Abraham Lincoln and attended his funeral in Springfield. He was a man who always stood firmly by what he considered the right and was never willing to make a compromise with what he considered the wrong. He with others was responsible for the establishment of the Deland First National Bank and was its first president.

Several years ago he became interested in the land of Kankakee county and owned a large ranch there at the time of his death. In early days he fed cattle, hogs and sheep, shipping the stock to New York. He has fed cattle and hogs more or less all his life.

Mr. Bondurant was much interested in the development of his country. He attended the Centennial celebration at Philadelphia in 1876, and the World's Fair at Chicago in 1S93. He was very desirous of attending the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis and had intended to go in the fall, but was prevented by an accident.

His devotion to his mother was very strong and when the day's work was over he would go into her room and sit before the grate and talk over the events of the day. She was also much devoted to him.

Weaves Flowers From Hair

By NELL JUSTIS
(Star-Herald Society Editor)

Mrs. Mary Howlett, who has spent the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Margie DeRock of Gering, makes flower arrangements from human hair.

The 87-year-old woman spends time each day creating flowers, using a knitting needle, wire and the hair of relatives and friends.

On the table is a large framed wreath made for Mrs. DeRock from the hair of seven generations of the family. The small framed picture is made from the hair of five generations of the family.

At the base of the wreath is a small bouquet. Individual flowers are scattered on the table. At the right is a long switch of hair donated by a friend.

Mrs. Howlett learned to make the flowers when she was 7 years old. After separating the locks of hair, which can be as short as three inches, and moistening them to hold the strand together, she weaves the hair and wire on a knitting needle. The size of the needle varies with the desired size of the flower.

She then shapes the woven hair into roses, lilies, pansies, tulips or other desired flower. The various colored stamens are purchased. The intricate process of making a rose, which to the touch feels as soft as the real thing, takes about one day. After making flowers for a spray, wreath or bouquet, she arranges them and binds them with thread and floral tape.

Hair wreaths were quite popular in the late 1800s and Mrs. Howlett learned to make them from her mother. She is wondering if it is a lost art, as she has been unable to find anyone else who knows the technique. Mrs. Howlett would like to hear from anyone who knows how to weave hair flowers. She is a resident of White River, S.D.

CACTUS CAST
DEATH PALL OVER FAMILY

Three Blooms in 20 Years
Preceded Tragedy in Ohio Household

KINGS MILLS, Ohio, April 1. - (UP) - Natives of this town tell the story of the "death cactus" and the blight it cast over the home of Oscar Connelly, in hushed voices.

Three times in 20 years it has bloomed. Each time the white blossom has been accompanied by death. Now it has been thrown away, its owners hoping to escape its evil influence.

The prickly little plant was kept in Connelly's home without blooming for years. Then, in 1912, the owner's son was stricken with typhoid fever. Simultaneously, the cactus bloomed, producing a single waxen white flower that exuded a sickening-sweet fragrance. A few days after the flower withered, the son died.

Until 1927, the plant failed to bloom. In that year, a daughter, Mrs. Mary McCullum, became ill. The "death cactus" bloomed. Mrs. McCullum died a few days later.

A few months ago, the plant showed signs of renewed life. A bud appeared. The family became genuinely alarmed when Mrs. Connelly became ill. She asked her sister-in-law, Mrs. Annie Bateman, to bring the plant into the sick room.

"The flower seemed to he just in its prime when I carried it into the room," Mrs. Bateman said. "But when I looked at it a few minutes later, it had withered."

A week later, Mrs. Connelly died.

For several months after his wife's death, Connelly kept the plant. But the tragedy of its rare blooms preyed upon his mind. Only when it burst into bloom has death visited his home. So he threw it away.

Papermaking in Ohio - mentions father of Mathais M. Kluger, Jr., ID = 1613 interesting to surmise just how he had been influenced by the Dutch papermakers and to what extent he introduced the old Dutch customs into the pioneer paper mill of the New World.

In contrast to the custom of the old Dutch mill-owners in endeavouring to prevent the workers from satisfying their appetites at their master's table, we have an account showing the abundance of food supplied by a master papermaker in early nineteenth-century America. In the amusing manuscript diary of Ebenezer Hiram Stedman, quoted from previously, there is an intimate description of paper-mill life in pioneer Kentucky and Ohio. Some time before the year 1820 Stedman left the mill in Kentucky and ventured across the river into Ohio, where he readily found work in the erstwhile Christian Waldschmidt mill, the second papermaking establishment to be set up in the state, about 1810. An extract from the Stedman diary relative to mill life among the German immigrant papermakers reads: ". . . When Matthias Kugler came to the place he was an ignorant German, could not read or write; he worked for eight dollars a month for the man (Waldschmidt) who was later to be his father-in-law. One day young Kugler was sent by his master to the barn to flail out grain and he and his master's daughter got mixed up amongst the grain and Kugler had to marry her, that is the way it commenced. Matthias Kugler was now the master of the mill and Mrs. Kugler was head of everything. The first meal I had in the mill-house was supper and Kugler had a practice of initiating every new journeyman papermaker who came to his house by telling them that all the food on the table was cooked for the papermakers and the family and each worker was entitled to consume as much as he desired, but everything taken on the plates must be eaten as there was to be no waste; nothing was cooked to be thrown to the dogs or hogs." This short quotation from Stedman's interesting diary gives a little conception of the proprieties of the life of a papermaker in the "western country" during pioneer days when the craft of making paper by hand was practised in the Miami Valley, now an important paper-producing centre.

The old European papermakers, as well as the early American workers at this craft, were much too fond of their drink and could be found almost any night at the public houses which were located near the mills. The vatman and the coucher, who interchanged

DEVON

One of the recent local events was the celebration of Mrs. Alice Connely's 76th birthday at her home, August 16. The day was rather warm but otherwise an ideal one. The guests present numbered 33, and were the following: Mrs. Afonzo Groshordt and family, Mr. James Harrington and family, of Covington; Alex Connely and family of Newport; J. Z. Bristow and wife, of Latonia; Alfred Rivard and family, Ben Bristow and family and W. A. Rice and family, of Devon. Mrs. received quite a number of presents, which showed the great esteem in which she is loved. The dinner, which was served under the shade of a massive Maple tree, consisted of all the delicacies of the season. Mrs. Alice Rice baked and decorated the cake. It was artistically done in wild roses, and had the words, Mother, Rutlandshire, England, Aug. 1832-1908. All expressed themselves as having had one of the pleasantest days of their lives, and wished Mrs. Connely many, many happy returns of the day. Mrs. Connely is never happier than when dispensing hospitality to her friends.

(Note by RRC: Although the celebration was on the 16th, based on other sources Alice was born on the 6th; based on other sources, "Alfonzo Groshordt" should be Alphonso Groskordt.)

Arthur Connely
Born, Boon County Kentucky 1812. He went with his father's family in 1815 to Covington, Ky. He was twice married. First wife, Mary Bennett. There were six children by this marriage. Cassus, Bushrod, and Julia are the three named in this record.
Second wife, Margaret Hawthorne of Morgantown, West Virginia. Six children were born, five of whom are named here. Art, Lucy, Betty, Ida, and Minnie. In another account Arthur Jacob is named just before the last, and infant, who died.

About the beginning of Civil War he moved to Shelby County, Mo. Prior to this move he was captain in a steam boat in the Ohio river, and in 1848 and 1849 he went to Calif. during the gold rush but did not stay.

The Shelby County farm was a few miles north of Shelbina. After about ten years stay there moved to Shelbina and became proprietor of the American Hotel. In 1874 he moved to the Waverly House, a newly constructed brick building completed in the fall of 1871.

The following concerning A. Connely has been stated by Dr. J.D. Smith of Shelbina, dated 1942.

"I came to Shelbina in 1873 and the following year Mr. Connely came to the Waverly House. I knew him thence forward as my friend and patron for a number of years. He not infrequently referred to his earlier days before moving to Missouri. Before the war he had lived in a farm known as the Foley Farm, three and one half miles north of Shelbina. He spoke of his experience, when a younger man, as being employed in steam boat traffic from Natches, Miss. to New Orleans.

He was continuously in charge of Waverly Hotel and made a success of the business for some years. While in the hotel he developed cancer of the mouth.

Mr. Connely was tall, portly, fine looking. A genial gentleman and an habitual pipe smoker. He always wore a tall silk tile. He was deacon in the Baptist Church for many years."

Dr. Smith goes on to say that he remembers the birth of Bush Connely JR and of the visit of Dr. Welborn at that time 1886.

Cassus ran away to war when sixteen years of age. Without returning he settled in St. Joseph, Mo, and married there, later moving to Arkansas. Married three times. One child by first wife and seven by last. Returned home just in time to see his father before he died.

Bushrod Foley Connely. Born Natches, Miss. 1846. Came from St. Joseph, Mo. to take his father's place in Waverly House. Lived just two years after coming to Shelbina. Ethel 8 yrs, Jessamin 6 yrs, Bush infant at time of his death

Lucy Connely – 82 years old, died at the home of brother, Art Connely 1941. Born in Newport, Ky, Dec. 25, 1859. The following year she came with her parents to Shelby County until 1869 when she moved with them to Shelbina.

Aunt Lucy wrote to J. that Arthur Sparks traced his family through the Media Research Bureau, 1110 F Street, Washington D.C. at cost of @1.00. She suggests that a letter be sent to this address first asking for information and that they will send advertisements. Give them A. Connely as from Ireland, and Hawthorn from Scotland.

Aunt Lucy's Mother, Margaret Hawthron told her children she did not know her parents as they died while she was a yound child. Her oldest brother reared her in Newport Ky.

Aunt Lucy writes in this same letter to Jessamine "I have a cousin living in San Diego by the name of Buck. Her husband was Captain Buck of the U.S. Army. Her mother's name was Winnie Hawthorne.

My uncle Lee Hawthorn went from KY. to San Diego and lived there till he died. Both he and Lieut. Buck were brought back and buried in Arlington Cemetary. Uncle Lee Hawthorn's family were all Army people. He had one son Lieutenant Harry Hawthorn and one daughter which married Lt. Ruck (Winnie)

Aunt Lucy wries of cousins by name of Rice in Newport, KY – her mothers people.

CRESCENT

Miss Emily Connely was called to Newport, Thursday, to meet her aunt, Mrs. Arthur Connely, and her daughter, Miss Lutie, who were guests of Jacob Hawthorne, of Newport. Mrs. Connely's home is in Shelbina, Mo. She is now 80 years of age but had a great desire to visit the home of her childhood in Virginia, and once more to be with her Kentucky relatives and friends. She is well and happy for one of her age.

New president looks to maintain quality of university

By Linda Martz
News Journal

ASHLAND - G. William Benz said he hopes to usher in a new age for the campus, at his inauguration Friday as Ashland University's 27th president.

Higher education is now seeing troubled times - with campuses facing diminished financial support from federal and state governments and decreases in the number of young people ready to attend college, he said.

It used to be relatively simple for university administrators to figure out what students wanted from college, he said.

"But look what we expect out of college today - it's almost a Club Med," with campuses providing health care, counseling, intercollegiate athletics for both men and women and a variety of other programs.

Ashland University will need to probe, through a careful analysis of its programs, into how it can provide students with the best possible service, he said.

The university must learn how to continue to attract students in the future, "or I do believe we're going to be passed by," he said.

Benz made several remarks defining Ashland University as a special institution:

AU, which was formed by the Brethren church, has a Judeo-Christian heritage - even though it is an open-enrollment campus, and not a "church" school, he said.

ASHLAND — G. William Benz said he hopes to usher in a new age for the campus, at his inauguration Friday as Ashland University's 27th president.

Higher education is now seeing troubled times — with campuses facing diminished financial support from federal and state governments and decreases in the number of young people ready to attend college, he said.

It used to be relatively simple for university administrators to figure out what students wanted from college, he said.

"But look what we expect out of college today — it's almost a Club Med," with campuses providing health care, counseling, intercollegiate athletics for both men and women and a variety of other programs.

Ashland University will need to probe, through a careful analysis of its programs, into how it can provide students with the best possible service, he said.

The university must learn how to continue to attract students in the future, "or I do believe we're going to be passed by," he said.

Benz made several remarks defining Ashland University as a special institution:

AU, which was formed by the Brethren church, has a Judeo-Christian heritage — even though it is an open enrollment campus, and not a "church" school, he said.

During his weeks on campus he's learned that the university lives up to its slogan of having an "accent on the individual."

Compared to many other colleges, AU takes seriously the needs of specialized groups of students, he said. Benz said the university needs to make sure the same level of quality is offered at all locations, including regional branch classes and its prison programs.

Benz said he intends to emphasize a need for community service programs at the campus, "because we do want our students to understand the way in which they could impact lives — not just after they leave this campus, but while they are here."

The new president said his goals include developing a sense of community on campus, partly through shared systems of governance.

"We are not an institution that's so large that we cannot work with one another," across all constituencies, he said.

The new president was chosen through a search committee as Ashland University's 27th president from among 300 applicants.

He has served as president for seven weeks, but this was his formal investiture in a line of AU presidents going back to 1878.

■ G. William Benz's inauguration as the 27th president of Ashland University had as many warm, informal moments, as it did solemn ones. See back page.

"... We do want our students to understand the way in which they could impact lives — not just after they leave this campus, but while they are here."

MISSIONARY FINDS JOY IN CONVERTING CHINESE PEOPLE

Interesting religious experiences in China are described by Frank H. Connely, missionary, in a recent letter to Mrs. Connely's uncle, Mrs. C. L. Sears. Mr. Connely tells how he and his wife and their co-workers have found joy in converting Chinese men and women to the Christian faith.

Funds for carrying on their work have been reduced this year and Mr. Connely says it is impossible to continue their eductional program on the funds available.

Mrs. Connely, the daughter of the late William H. Sears, a missionary to China for 32 years, was born in China. Her mother was Miss Effie Johnson of Thomas Hill and her paternal grandfather was P. M. Sears, veteran Baptist minister who died three years ago. Mr. Connely's father lives in Shelbina.

The Connelys are stationed at Tsining, Shantung.

(Note by RRC: I suspect "Mrs." C. L. Sears should be Mr. C. L. Sears; "eductional" should be educational.)

Relatives Here of Missionaries In Occupied China Learn of Many Hardships They are Enduring

The life of a missionary in occupied China now is not an easy and happy one, according to word that has reached Missouri relatives of the Rev. and Mrs. Frank Connely, Baptist missionaries who are still in China. Some of the humiliations they have had to endure have reached his father, Art Connely of Shelbina, indirectly and passed on by him to relatives in Moberly, Salisbury and elsewhere.

The word received by the Rev. Mr. Connely's father reached him only last week. It started on its way from China last September, was smuggled into free China, reaching there in November, and being carried to the United States and eventually reaching relatives here...

China Missionary
Guest Speaker at Immanuel Baptist

Dr. Frank Connely, missionary, recently returned from Shanghai, China, will be guest speaker during the 10:45 o'clock worship service tomorrow at Immanuel Baptist Church, announces the pastor, the Rev. Gordon Whiteside.

Dr. and Mrs. Connely were forced to leave their mission field when Chinese Communists began their attack against the United Nations in North Korea. Dr. Connely is a native of Missouri and Mrs. Connely was born in China, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. William Sears, who were natives of Chariton County and missionaries of the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board serving in China.

The Immanuel church and pastor invite the public to hear Dr. Connely Sunday morning. His years of service in China and his knowledge of the Chinese people enable him to understand and discusse the present conflict and crisis with a clear, Christian view-point.

At Evening Service

MISS MARY ELIZABETH MOODY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hugh Moody, 710 Limit avenue, University City, was married Monday night to William Sears Connely, whose parents, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Connely, are Baptist missionaries in Tsining, China.

The Rev. Dr. Rolland N. Dutton performed the double ring ceremony in Delmar Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, in a candlelighted setting of ferns and white chrysanthemums. A reception in the church foyer followed.

The bride wore a white satin gown designed with a close fitting bodice, heart-shaped neckline and long tight sleeves. The skirt, with back fullness, was gathered to a low waistline. A coronet of orange blossoms held her veil, which cascaded from as orange blossom coronet to the hem of her long train. Her flowers were white gladiolas.

Mrs. Roland L. Schild of Seattle, Wash., sister of the bridegroom, matron of honor, wore a yellow and taffeta chiffon gown. Miss Frances Merritt, maid of honor, wore pink taffeta. Both carried chrysanthemums to harmonize with their gowns.

Stockwell Sears, of St. Joseph, Mo., was best man for his cousin, whose ushers were George Radie, Carl Merritt and Fred Farmer.

Born in China, where his maternal grandparents also were missionaries, the bridegroom is a graduate of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo., and served as a sergeant in the Army Air Forces during the war. He and his bride have gone to Denver for their honeymoon and will live temporarily with her parents on their return.

The wedding, planned for later, was advanced so that the bridegroom's mother might attend. She and her husband were interned by the Japanese and came to the United States on the exchange ship, Gripsholm. Dr. Connely returned to China after six months. His wife departed the day after the ceremony.

Georgia- England Friendship Swap Said Success

By PEGGY WALSH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA - They left on July Fourth not knowing what they would find or how they would get along with the strangers with whom they were supposed to live.

They returned last Friday bringing with them a piece of England and the memories of some new and close friends.

For more than 381 Georgia members of the Friendship Force, a grass roots ambassador program between the United States and foreign countries, the initial exchange between Atlanta and Newscastle Upon Tyne, England, was an incredible success.

FRIENDSHIP FORCE sponsors say the next two exchanges will involve Americans from Hartford, Conn, and Nashville, Tenn., and residents of two as-yet-unnamed foreign countries. Sponsors say they hope every state in the nation will participate in the program by 1980.

"It was hard to leave," said Ed Gray of Doraville after arriving home from the program's first trip. "When we got to the airport, my host Jim Crawford hugged us all and kissed us goodby. When he hugged us, the dam just broke. It was like leaving family"

The Georgians' four-day official stay with their working counterparts in Newcastle was filled with new experiences and activities.

The city's lord mayor held a reception in the Georgians' honor, and visitors and hosts spent hours comparing life in the American South and in northeast England.

It seemed like the entire city, even those not connected with the program, were devoted to making friends with the Southerners.

"Everybody wanted to know if we were having a good time," said Sherrill Burke of Clarkston. "Americans just don't do that kind of thing. Maybe we'll all learn something from this."

Besides drinking the local brew, Newcastle Brown Ale, and struggling good naturedly to learn the dialect of the Newcastle residents, called Geordies, many of the Georgians took the opportunity to go to work with the hosts and to visit places they had never seen.

BERNIE TEKIPPE, a 35-year-old clock repairman, donned a hard hat, overalls and knee pads to climb through the tunnels in a coal mine.

"My host was a miner," he said. "We read about the incredible conditions down in those mines but you don't have any idea what it's like until you're in a tunnel where you can't move at all except to scoot forward on your stomach."

The Rev. Robert Connely and his wife, Tippa, the oldest members of the group at 84, had an experience neither will forget.

"I had a nephew who was very close to me who was killed in World War II," said the Rev. Mr. Connely, a retired minister from Decatur. "We knew he was buried somewhere in England, but we didn't have any idea just where.

"THERE'S an American military cemetry at Cambridge and just for a lark we asked the registrar if they had a Ripley Connely Jr. buried there. He said yes, so we visited the grave."

Ed Meadows, a Decatur police sergeant, directed traffic at a busy downtown Newcastle interesetion, causing more traffic problems then he solved because residents were too busy staring at his Georgia police officer's uniform to see where they were going.

Meadows also met Queen Elizabeth II at Durham, just south of Newcastle.

"I've seen the President lots of times," he said. "But it wasn't like meeting her. I mean, she's the Queen of England."

GEORGE WASHINGTON, a black postal clerk from Atlanta, caused a local uproar when he visited President George Washington's ancestral home near Newcastle.

Local officials couldn't remember anyone with the same name ever having visited the brownstone memorial, and Washington had to squeeze in his touring between pictures, and interviews.

One Atlanta girl even got engaged to one of the Georgia ambassadors, whom she had been dating before the trip.

"I guess it was the atmosphere," said the girl, who asked not to be identified until she told her parents.

But more evident than the ambassadors individual experiences and the novelty of visiting another country, was the close friendship formed between people who had been strangers only 10 days before.

(Note by RRC: I suspect “interesetion, causing more traffic problems then” should be intersection, causing more traffic problems than.)

Unlike most humans, members of the Robert Connely family do not sleep.

They may deny this, but it is obvious from the nature of their varied activities that sleep would be a waste of time ... if they had time for it in the first place.

IT IS HARD to know where to start about Dr. Connely (a chiropractor), his wife and three children. Mrs. Connely projects the attitude of the entire family when she says, "I become very depressed and low when I'm not active in something."

If one envisions a scene of frenzied activity, one is not so very far from wrong.

For a start, everybody in the family is an artist. Mrs. Connely is a graduate of the Kansas City Art Institute, but this is not to discount the others. She thinks her husband is as good as she is. And the children, aged 9, 7 and 4, consider themselves better than both parents although their commissions are a little slow, so far,

HERE IS the way the adult Connelys function. When they first moved into their house, they liberated sections of a wrought iron fence in a junk-pile and installed these in the entry to their living room. That was stage one.

Stage two came later when they decided to give a pirate's party to celebrate a wedding anniversary. Never one to do things the simple way, Mrs. Connely made a woodcut of a pirate ship for the invitations.

Throwing herself further into the party project, she suggested painting a pirate ship scene on paper and attaching it to the 28-foot-wall in the living-dining area.

Her husband recklessly said, "Why not paint it directly on the wall?"

SO SHE DID that. In the foreground was a balcony with the wrought iron motif. And beyond this was the sea, the ships, the seagulls. That's how the mural got there in the first place.

When Christmas came, she impulsively painted holly festoons and snow into the scene. Shortly after Christmas, the holly and snow began to look slightly unseasonal. She decided to scrap that mural and do a more painstaking one.

"I painted the wall white again, putting in clouds at the same time, and I painted the iron balcony with uprights to the ceiling. And again there is the sea with one large ship in the foreground, and a small Dutch city a short distance back. The colors are soft and earthy," she said.

SHE DID not put the seagulls back into the sky. Her husband had liked the gulls in the earlier mural, but she was a little tired of seagulls at the moment.

"I sometimes paint seagulls or ships on old boards," she explained. "A friend offered to sell these for me . . ." and suddenly she was very busy turning out seagulls and ships. There never was a shortage of wood. For one thing, her husband built the couches and the kitchen counters, and for another, his former office was being torn down and he salvaged enough boards to last five years, she thinks.

She also fell into the business of painting coats of arms on parchment for people. One thing led to another until today she and her husband carve these coats of arms out of wood, then paint on the colors. The largest, so far, is three feet tall, created for a country home.

FOR Father's Day, she did not gift him with the traditional necktie. Instead, the wrappings revealed a chunk of limestone and a chisel. In his spare time, he works on a sculpture portrait of her head.

As if all this weren't enough, he took up photography the hard way, the way men do. It is not enough merely to own a camera and go "click". He picked up all this second-hand equipment and more or less rebuilt it so that he could do his own developing and printing. It no longer is a good idea to try to use the downstairs bathroom; that is his darkroom these days

Currently he is learning to play his bagpipes - her gift to him last Christmas. Mrs. Connely said, "I happen to like the way bagpipes sound. "We also have a balalaika and mandolin. He and I and Laura, 9, especially love to play the guitar. All of us love madrigals and really enjoy singing and playing.

"WE GO camping just about every weekend in summer; that's what brings our family together. We bought a VW bus and my husband renovated it so that the children can sleep on top under a little wood roof with canvas sides, and we can sleep inside where there's a kitchen in one end. We go to secluded areas and really get to know one another.

"On these outings I sketch or paint and so do the children; my husband takes photographs or whittles, or we sing folk guitar music; I'm not good enough for classical guitar yet."

As things stand now, she's preparing to do a portrait for a woman who earlier bought a carving. Meanwhile, she is painting a mural of Atlanta's skyline in her husband's new office.

THE TWO adults have decided to start studying Spanish, German and Russian in order to give the children a more continental atmosphere in their Decatur home.

"No," she said, "I don't have any help around the house."

Catoosa Items... Catoosa was the scene of a wedding of one of her brightest young ladies on Saturday last. At 4 o'clock the spacious parlor of the Lone Star Hotel was crowded with guests to witness the ceremony which united Mr. William Conley and Miss Maud, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. John Reynolds. The minister Rev. A. B. Trimble officiated. Miss Reynolds was attired in cream colored satin and white slippers. The groom wore the conventional black Prince Albert suit. After congratulations were offered the guests were seated to an elegant repast. Guests were present from Texas, New Mexico, and other distant states.

This article was typed and submitted to me by Gwen Nolte, genealogist and family historian. In her cover letter, Gwen said "Did I tell you about my uncle, Frank Conley? If not, you'll find the enclosed material very interesting. Aunt Lennie told me he wasn't as bad as this would seem to indicate. He fell in with some moonshiners when he was young and went downhill from there. I do remember hearing that the girls who were taken hostage credited him with saving their lives. He wouldn't let the other escapees harm them. .... After his death, the whole town of Catoosa chipped in to raise enough money to bring his body back for burial, but the man who volunteered to go to Louisiana and take care of the arrangements ran off with the money. That's why Frank is there in Columbia." I have bolded Frank's name in this article.)

COLUMBIA AUTO DEALER KILLED

Four convicts who escaped from the Arkansas Prison Farm on Labor Day, 1940, holding three Rayville high school students as hostages for two days and killing Frank C. Gartman, prominent local automobile dealer, a member of the posse seeking to capture them, were hanged in the new Caldwell Parish courthouse on Friday, March 7, 1941. Hanged were William Heard, 43; William Landers, 39; William MeHarg, 25; and Floyd Boyce, 29. They went to the gallows while a radio announcer over a Monroe radio station read statements declaring to the world that "crime does not pay."

This section of Louisiana was terrorized for a time when word came to Columbia that a number of convicts had made their escape from the Arkansas prison and had made their way to Louisiana, capturing three Rayville students. They were discovered repairing a flat tire near Bellview Plantation, a short distance from Columbia, on the east side of the Ouachita River, where they were surrounded by possemen. Mr. Gartman, acting as spokesman, pleaded for them to surrender, warning them that they were surrounded, at which time he was shot and killed. Three of the convicts made their escapt in the darkness to a swamp section near the river, where they held the three students for two days, using them as shields to keep from being fired upon. The two nights brought horrible thoughts, anguish and fear, the highways were dangerous, homes in the neighborhood feared attack, and excitement in this parish ran high until they were captured.

Local law enforcement officers had surrounded them, with the aid of neighboring parish deputies, until State Police came to the scene and the guarding line lengthened and became stronger. They then closed in on the convicts and captured them without harm to any others. One of the convicts, Frank Conley, was killed next day when he was discovered wounded near the scene at Bellview, still holding his gun in his hand. The other two made their way to the highway, where they held up a car and kidnapped another couple and in their attempt to try to cross the Mississippi River bridge at Vicksburg, Miss., two were killed and one captured.

As the four condemmed men marched to their doom, they were loud in praise of Columbia people, of Sheriff Buddy Erskine and of Jailer Ellis Roberts and his wife. One of them, William Landers, stated that Mr. Erskine was a fine sheriff and a "grand fellow", and shortly before he marched to the gallows handed the sheriff a "dummy" pistol which he had fashioned from corrugated cardboard and tin foil. The Arkansas convict evidently meant to use it to effect an escape if given the chance. Landers was the third to meet death. The body of Landers was carried to Jena where a brother had arranged his burial, the bodies of Boyce and Heard were buried in the Columbia Hill Cemetery, while the body of MeHarg was accompanied back to Missouri by a sister and brother-in-law.

While the four were tried and hanged for the shooting and killing of Mr. Gartman, it was never revealed or known just who shot the automobile dealer, and needlessly to say, probably more people on the street were of the opinion that it was not beyond the realm of possibility that a nervous finger of one of the possemen pulled the trigger, of course, due to extreme dim light, thinking when first spotted he was one of the men they were after. However, there seemed to be no doubt, regardless, that the victims hanged certainly received their just due for the path of crime they had followed.

(Extraction by RRC from: Louisiana's Last Hanging: "No Way to Win in Crime", by Burk Foster, online; originally appeared in The Angolite, November/December 2001, pp. 34-36. I have bolded Frank’s name in this article.)

The biggest prison break of 20th century America took place on Labor Day 1940, when 36 convicts, led by trusty guards who turned their guns on other guards, escaped from Arkansas's Cummins prison farm, the institution later made infamous in the memoirs of reform warden Tom Murton and the popular prison film, "Brubaker." Barely six months after their escape, four of these convicts would be unwilling participants in another historic event--Louisiana's last hanging.

In what was to be not only the state's last hanging but also its biggest execution of the century, these four men kept a Friday afternoon appointment with the hangman in the Caldwell Parish Courthouse in Columbia, Louisiana: William MeHarg, 25; Floyd Boyce, 29; William Landers, 39; William Heard, 43.

After the mass breakout from Cummins, later attributed to the terrible living conditions at the old prison farm, the escapees had split into different groups, "taking off in all directions," according to news accounts. Six of them--commandeering and wrecking cars, capturing and releasing hostages along the way--fled into north Louisiana by Monday night, September 2, 1940. Newspapers labeled their spree a two-day "reign of terror," and it appears that every law enforcement officer and half the male citizenry was armed and out looking for them, while the other half stayed home to protect the women and children from the heavily-armed desperados. Even the trusty guards from the Louisiana State Penitentiary at Angola joined in the search. Steve Alford, the state police superintendent, took to an airplane to direct the search from overhead.

The desperados' escape plan--"to go to Mexico"--completely unraveled after they kidnaped three Rayville high school students--Voncille Williams, Gladys Diamond, and Gerry Harrigill--Monday evening. The convicts were repairing a flat tire on their stolen car near Belvue farm north of Columbia about midnight Monday when a group of possemen approached the car with flashlights. Frank Gartman, a prominent Columbia auto dealer, acted as spokesman for the possemen, warning the fugitives that they were surrounded and pleading with them to surrender. The escapees opened fire, killing Gartman as he ran for cover.

One of the leaders of the prison break, Frank Conley, was also wounded in the exchange of gunfire. He was killed by law enforcement officers on Tuesday while attempting to surrender. Conley was waving his gun from the bushes and yelling, "Don't shoot," when he was shot.

Two of the remaining five broke away from the main group, commandeered another car, took the driver hostage, and tried to flee across the Mississippi River bridge at Vicksburg. In a shootout with police, one convict, Bruce Fowler, "got the top of his head blown off." The other convict, Floyd Boyce, surrendered.

The other three convicts--MeHarg, Landers, and Heard, all coincidentally nicknamed "Bill"--and the three hostages were surrounded in a swampy forest northeast of Columbia. They tried to negotiate an exchange--their freedom for the release of the hostages. When that failed, they gave up on Wednesday, September 4. The three hostages, with wild tales to tell of their captivity, were exhausted but unharmed.

The trial of the four surviving convicts began on October 14, 1940, in Columbia. Despite the reign of terror label, their only capital crime in Louisiana was the killing of Frank Gartman. They would continue to maintain, right up to the day of their execution, that they were only trying to escape the brutal conditions of imprisonment at the Cummins prison farm southeast of Pine Bluff, conditions that would eventually result in the entire Arkansas prison system being held in violation of the Eighth Amendment prohibition against "cruel and unusual punishment." They said they meant no harm to anyone. They were just trying to get away.

A 1938 Interview with John Holbert Conley, ID = 191a2

(Transcription by RRC of typewritten copy of an interview by C. H. Holt, March 16, 1938, submitted to me by Gwen Nolte, genealogist and family historian; this interview is also online at OKGenWeb, submitted there by Gwen.)

An interview with John H. Conley
Hominy, Oklahoma

I was born in Kentucky in 1873; my father, Benjamin F. Conley, and my mother, Elizabeth Anderson, were also born in Kentucky.

Father made the run in 1889 and staked two lots near Guthrie and mother and I came to Guthrie on a train and in a boat. Johnny Johnson, a man whom father had hired, came to the train and met us and we were taken home in a four-wheel carriage drawn by two grey mares. At that time father was a game hunter for the government, he hunted chickens, turkeys and quail, which were loaded on a train and marketed in St. Louis, Missouri.

Father decided to build a new house and make it of rock; these rocks were purchased from the Bushyhead quarry and were delivered by four Indian men in a large cart drawn by four spotted horses. When the house was completed the household things were moved into it, and the old house was made into a barn for livestock and chickens.

One time we were attacked by seven savage Pawnee Indians and my elder son was badly wounded, but recovered. Our barn was burned down and three cows were killed. The Indians attempted to burn the house but did not succeed. Three days later the accident was reported to Sheriff McCrea of Pawnee County, who said there wasn't much he could do as the names of the Indians were unknown.

When farming time came and the land was broken it rained almost continuously for ten days straight and three weeks later the crops were planted. Fruit that year was unusually good on account of the rain. I had a small orchard consisting of fifty apple trees and one hundred peach trees, and my wife canned 370 cans of fruit last year.

Putnam Couple To Observe 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mrs. Clarence Scobee will entertain Sunday August 22nd with a family dinner at her home two miles northwest of Brick Chapel, in honor of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Howlett, who will observe their golden anniversary on Tuesday, August 24th.

Open house will be held at the daughter's home from 2 to 5 o'clock. Among those planning to attend the celebration from a distance are Mrs. Joe Click of Florence, Ky., and Mrs. John W. Conley, Nace Clcmmens and Mr. and Mrs. McCabe, all of Walton, Kentucky.

Golden Wedding To Be Observed

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT HOWLETT PLAN CELEBRATION AT HOME SUNDAY.

"I made a trip out to Kansas once, and saw the same weeds and the same bushes growing out there that I could see at home, and I didn't do any more traveling." So, Robert L Howlett and his wife, Martha Margaret, when they celebrate their golden wedding anniversary next Sunday, will from the windows of their home, look out upon the same view which has been theirs for forty-eight years, with exception of that jaunt into the Sunflower state. One other exception should be noted, too, which is that they now live in a newer house, built by themselves, than one in which they went to housekeeping nearly half a century ago. That old one yet stands, however, farther back from the road.

That old one is the one which John Detrick, of this city, was cradled to sleep in his infancy. The farm was owned by his fahter, John Detrick, senior, before Mr. Howlett came into possession of it.

The Howlett place is west of Brick Chapel and a little north. Adjoining on the south is a tract that Andrew Lockridge once owned, and not far away, to the south, is the weatherbeaten old structure which was once the Lockridge mansion, a show place of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Howlett were married August 24, forty years ago, in the Indiana House at Cincinnati, their homes being not far away from that city, in Boone county. Kentucky. They lived one year with her father in the Bluegrass state, and then, a year later, came to their present homeplace, where they have been ever since.

"I don't owe a cent on it." This was said by Mr. Howlett, and he has a right to be proud of the fact. He talked of the practice of some farmers borrowing heavily, and of their over-reaching themselves in extending their holdings, and in other ways. He had no ill word to say of those who did such things, but as for himself, it was not his code. He spent money only when he had it to spend and never anticipated what might happen.
Mr. and Mrs. Howlett, even though they have been on their own place so closely all these years, have developed along with the times, in the desirable ways. They know what is going on on the other side of the world, and in our own nation and state, and they have their opinions of all these carryings-on. They have but little to worry about, with good land on which to raise uniformly satisfactory crops, and good health, and clear consciences. They are members of the Somerset Christian church, and Mrs. Howlett belongs, also, to the Ladies Aid of that congregation. They do not care for other, and wider affiliations.

On Sunday, their daughter, Mrs. Clarence Scobee—who is their only child, by the way—will give a dinner for them at the Howlett home, and there will be an informal reception at the home during the afternoon, when the very many friends of this couple will be welcomed.

(Note by RRC: A typo- "fahter" should be father. Based on other sources, Robert & Martha were married on 24 Aug 1887, so fifty years ago, not "forty years ago".)

WILL OBSERVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scobee will celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary on Christmas Day with a family dinner.

Their children are, Mrs. Kenneth Williams, Scarsdale, N. Y.; Mrs. Estel Rowings, Greencastle; Mrs. Denzil Coffey, Fillmore, and Thomas E. Scobee, Morton. They have 10 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Mrs. Scobee is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Howlett and was born in Boone County, Ky. Mr. Scobee is the oldest son of the late Robert S. Scobee and was born north of Greencastle.

They have lived on their farm for the last 50 years with the exception of six years.

(Note by RRC: Based on other sources, Mrs. Scobee's father's middle initial was L, not S, and Mr. Scobee's father's middle initial was L, not S - the middle name of both fathers was Lee.)

Family History written by Joan (Godfrey) Taylor, ID = 1973421

(Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of the original article in the Cowley County Heritage Book, 1990, pages 176-177.)

Godfrey- Taylor

My first ancestors in Cowley County were my great-great-grandparents, Erastus Marion Godfrey, wife, Janette, and five of eight children, who homesteaded five miles northwest of Arkansas City in 1872. E.M. and Janette were born and married in New York. They arrived in Kansas with seventy-five cents. They planted crops, gardens, fruit and nut orchards and hedge rows. Friends said he caught fish in the Arkansas River longer than his height and carried them home on his back. The eldest son helped establish a school later called Oak Grove and taught for several years. Second son, Charles had served in the Civil War, married Lucy Ashley, was a mason and house mover in Indiana, moved his family of seven in 1886 to Cowley County. Verne, then seventeen years old, helped his grandfather and father dig the deep well that still yields good water. Verne organized and directed a community band and gave instrumental music lessons. He married Edith M. Conely whose parents had come to Kansas from Missouri in 1873 in a covered wagon leading a cow. John C. and Mary D. Conely lived north of Geuda Springs when Edith was born. The family moved east of Geuda Springs where John farmed and ran the ferry across the Arkansas River. Verne and Edith had five children. Verne farmed and Edith sold fine produce of cream, butter and eggs. Irl, the oldest son, was known as a good "southpaw" pitcher. During service in World War I, he was bugler for his company, played in the band, and was pitcher for the baseball team. Irl was a farmer. He married Jeanne M. Muret and they had four children, born in Cowley County: Joan, Beverly, James and William. Jeanne's parents were William H. and Mary B. Muret, who came to Cowley County in 1884 from Indiana. Joan Godfrey and Ray Taylor were born in Cowley County, married, moved and returned with three children: Morris, Julie and Jane. Another child, Bryan was born in Winfield. Ray's parents of seven children, lived in Arkansas City and later bought a ranch south of Arkansas City. Ray's mother, Zetta Williams, was born in Nemaha County, Kansas. Her parents moved to Texas, then to Arkansas City in 1912, where they owned a grocery store until retiring in the mid-1930's. Delmer D. Taylor was born in Illinois, moved with his family to Texas. He met Zetta, married and they came to Arkansas City in 1913, where he worked at the A.C. Flour Mill and later became a rancher. Ray and Joan came to Winfield in 1957 and bought the Swisher Mortuary that became the Swisher-Taylor Funeral Home. Ray served on the city commission 1967-1969, mayor in 1968. The four children were educated in the Winfield school system and are presently employed thusly: Morris, counselor at Menninger Foundation; Julie, elementary teacher in Winfield; Jane, librarian at Joplin High School; and Bryan, a doctor in Oklahoma.

“A Family History Comprising the Surnames of Gade-Gadie-Gaudie-Gawdie-Gawdy-Gowdy-Goudy-Goudey-Gowdey-Gauden-Gaudern-and the Variant Forms From A.D. 800 to A. D. 1919.” by Hon. Mahlon M.Gowdy, Journal Press, Lewiston, Maine, 1919.

(Transcription of pages 480 to the middle of 490 – except some text not transcribed as noted below - by Roger R. Connelly, from a photocopy of this article. Book located in the Greene County Room of the Greene County Public Library, Xenia, Ohio.)

Editor's Note - This section of the family history was transposed from an account written down by James Gowdy of Xenia, Ohio, when he was sixty-eight years of age, at the request of his family; but that document has been materialy enlarged and enhanced in value by information acquired through correspondence with descendants now living. The traditions held by the venerable members of the Ohio families have become much modified by transmission during the passing decades and are inharmonious at the present time. The substance and dates of the published accounts relating to the early generations of the family are conflicting and the compiler has encountered insuperable difficulties in his attempt to syncronize them. In some instances the Editor has deemed it necessary to preserve two versions of the traditionary and literary statements, both seeming to have been equally authentic, and leaves the reader to make his choice or accept both as correct. For reasons unknown the statement was written that James Gowdy, or John Gowdy his son, heads of the Xenia, Ohio, families was born in Connecticut, whereas it was a well-known fact that he was born in Delaware, where his emigrant ancestors first settled. Abundant documentary evidence exists to prove the origin of these western branches of the Gowdy and Goudy family. There is not a shadow of reason for believing that the eastern and western families were closely related save in the faraway foreign connection mentioned in the "Compendium of History" now appearing in this volume.

1. James Gowdy[1] (1), parents' names unknown, arrived at Newcastle, Delaware, then in Pennsylvania, in the autumn of 1707 as an emigrant from the north of Ireland. In a letter dictated by Mrs. Ellen Bressler, a granddaughter of John Ryan, whose wife was Jane Gowdy, and a woman of remarkable memory, we have learned that families of Gowdy, Ryan, and Boyd, old neighbors and relatives, emigrated from the north of Ireland early in the eighteenth century and settled at Fishers Creek Valley, Dauphin County, Pennsylvania; that these families took up tracts of land there and cleared farms, but, later, on account of the Indian troubles, evacuated their clearings and did not return but settled in Chester County of that state. This James Gowdy married one of the Boyd daughters and had no less than four children whose names have come down to us. The parents died in Pennsylvania and were buried in some of the old churchyards of the state.

Second Generation

CHILDREN OF JAMES AND MARY BOYD GOWDY.

1. Adam Gowdy[2] (1), eldest son of James[1] (1) and Mary (Boyd) Gowdy, died in Pennsylvania, unmarried. Place of burial unknown.

2. John Gowdy[2] (2), second son of James[1] (1) and Mary (Boyd) Gowdy, was born in Newcastle County, Delaware, Nov. 5, 1742, and is said to have moved to the State of Pennsylvania about the year 1760 along with others who were his kindred. John Gowdy located first at the north bend of the Ohio river about 1782, but owing to military troubles he was compelled to remove to the military station at the falls of the Ohio and thence to a settlement since known as Mount Sterling, Kentucky, where he lived till about1809, when he and his family went to Greene County, Ohio, and settled on a farm which has since been the Gowdy homestead. He married ABIGAIL RYAN, daughter of Michael

Ryan from the north of Ireland, June 15, 1774, with whom he lived 42 years, and by whom he had issue eleven children, nearly all of whom lived to be married and raised families. There were two versions of the history of this family and the genealogy and biography disagree. John Gowdy served during the war of 1812 and his name appears in the records of the officers. He was a private in the company of Capt. James Murray and went into the army in November or December, 1775. He was present at the battles of Trenton and Pruston. He was a private in the 4th battalion from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, commanded by Capt. James Burd, Nov. 13, 1776. In a return of Capt. Richard Manning of the 4th battalion Lancaster troops, March 13, 1776, he was mentioned as a private soldier. During these terms of service be was accompanied by his brother, Robert Gowdy, and brother-in-law, John Ryan. He died Nov. 18, 1814. His widow, born Sept. 11, 1743, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Peter Jacoby, May 6, 1838, aged 84 years and 8 months lacking 5 days. John and Abigail Gowdy were devoted communicants of the Presbyterian church and lived consistent with their creed. Names of their children, Mary, James, Samuel, Robert, Martha, Jane, John, Alexander, Ryan, Abigail and Sarah. See forward to third generation for particulars.

3. Robert Gowdy[2] (1), third son of James[1] (1) and Mary (Boyd) Gowdy, was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, as early as 1744 and removed with his brothers to Kentucky, and by examination of the records of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, we find in the return of the company commanded by Capt. James Murray in the 4th battalion that Robert Gowdy was present at the battles of Trenton and Pruston in November, 1775. In the return of the same Captain of the 1st class battalion, Lancaster County, troops, October 21, 1779 the name of Robert Gowdy appears. He was also a member of the battalion commanded by Col. Robert Elders under Capt. James Murray of Upper Paxton, April 12, 1781. His name appears as "Serjent Robert Gowdy" in the list of male residents in 1782. This man's marriage is unknown. If be had issue their names have not reached the compiler.

4. Jane Gowdy[2] (1), daughter of James[1] (1) and Mary (Boyd) Gowdy, was said to have been born in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania, where so many of the Gowdys, Boyds, and Ryans settled, probably as early as 1746. She was married to JOHN RYAN, son of Michael Ryan of Ireland, by Rev. John Elder the Presbyterian minister at Paxtang, Aug. 13, 1774. At the time of the evacuation of their lands during the Indian troubles, the mother of Jane Ryan was left behind at Fort Hunter in the Fisher Creek Valley, where she was taken care of by the soldiers stationed there, and while her husband was absent Jane Gowdy was born. She was eighteen years of age, when her father returned from his exile, and woman grown. John Ryan was a soldier in the war of 1776. In the return of Capt. James Murray, 4th battalion, Lancaster County troops of Pennsylvania, commanded by Col. James Burd, Nov. 13, 1776, John Ryan was mentioned as ensign. In the return of the same captain of the 1st class battalion, Lancaster County troops, Oct. 21, 1779, John Ryan was Ensign. The name of Lieut. John Ryan appears in a list of males in Upper Paxton, April 12, 1781; and in a list of names of the male residents of Upper Paxtang District, between the ages of 18 and 53 taken in 1782, the name of Lieut. John Ryan appeared. He was 97 years of age at his death in 1836, but the age of his wife and their places of burial are not known. There were eight children in this family, several of whom were married and raised families, and their descendants are now numerous in Dauphin County, Pennsylvania. The names of these children were Michael, John, James, Sarah, Andrew, Mary and Samuel.

I. JOHN RYAN, son of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, moved to Erie County, Pennsylvania.

II. JAMES RYAN, son of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, moved to Erie County, Pa.

III. ANDREW RYAN, son of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, settled in Powl's Valley, Dauphin Co., Pa. He had a family of seven children.

IV. SAMUEL RYAN, son of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, was not married.

V. SARAH RYAN, daughter of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, was not married.

VI. MARY RYAN, daughter of John and Jane (Gowdy) Ryan, was not married.

Third Generation

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND ABIGAL RYAN GOWDY.

1. Mary Gowdy[3] (1), eldest daughter of John[2] (1) and Abigail (Ryan) Gowdy, was born in Dauphin County, Penn., April 13, 1775, and died in Greene County, Penn., June 9, 1812, unmarried.

2. James Gowdy[3] (2), eldest son of John[2] (1) and Abigail (Ryan) Gowdy, was born in Lancaster County, Penn., May 20,1777; married Jan. 27, 1814, JOANNA TOWNSLEY, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Townsley, with whom he lived till July 25, 1817, when she and her infant child both died; she was 28 years of age. He married second, Nov. 11, 1819, Miss SARAH BROWN, daughter of John and Margaret Brown of Clark County, Ohio, but born in Northumberland County, Penn., with whom he lived rising nine years till the time of her death, March 6, 1829, at the age of 40 years. She was the mother of six sons and one daughter. He married third, April 23, 1832, at Mansfield, Ohio, Miss JANE PURDY, daughter of Patrick and Jane Purdy, of Richland County, Ohio, with whom he lived for

NOTE.-As there were two intermarriages between the families of Gowdy and Ryan it seems proper to present some account of the Ryan family, they being half-Gowdy, as well as of the Gowdy children whose mother was Abigail Ryan. It was not the intention of the compiler to insert the names and records of grandchildren of collateral branches of the Gowdy families, but in this instance at the very fountain-head of the history of the numerous Pennsylvania branches, he wishes to state that there are many descendants of John Ryan and his wife, Jane Gowdy, still resident in various sections of that state, some of them educators and others in respectable positions in civil and mechanical life. Many of the names of the children and grandchildren are in the possession of the compiler.

NOTE.-The old Gowdy homestead situated two miles from the center of Xenia, Ohio, was purchased more than a century ago, about 1809, and has remained in the family ever since. The farm consists of 118 acres which are nearly level. The old buildings were replaced some forty years ago by new and improved structures, including the residence, barn, and outbuildings. The house is of brick with stone trimmings, two storied and contains ten rooms opening from a large hall. The largest rooms on the right and left of the hall are 16 by 16 feet and the hallway is 8 feet in width. There is a wing on the left side which makes provision for two rooms one above the other. The house contains no fireplaces but is heated from large grates. The barn is one of the largest and best in that section of the country, and is 96 by 42 feet in length and breadth. It is a bank barn and the basement is used for a stable and the upper story for storage. The homestead is situated on the upper Bellbrook turnpike and there is a fine view of the surrounding country from the door. The avenue leading to the house is bordered on either side by large maple trees planted about forty years ago, and ten beautiful trees in the yard affording an abundance of shade; the oldest and largest is a sycamore almost a hundred years old. This homestead is now occupied by James Gowdy, great-grandson of the origina1 owner, and was never more beautiful than now-the spring of 1918.

eleven years until her death July 24, 1843, and by whom there was no issue. James Gowdy died at his home in Xenia, Ohio, Dee. 24, 1853, aged 76 years, and was buried in the old Associate Reformed Graveyard, East Third Street. Mr. Gowdy was a merchant in partnership with his brother, Samuel Gowdy, in the fall of 1802 at Mt. Sterling, Montgomery County, Ky. Here the two brothers carried on their merchantile and cabinet business, having the post office in their store, for about three years. In the fall of 1805, James took part of the goods and moved to Xenia, Ohio. Samuel Gowdy closed the store in 1806 and carried the remainder of the stock to Xenia. They were the first merchants who made a permanent stand with store goods in that town. Here the brothers continued the business, gaining capital and purchasing real estate in the town and land in the country, with mutual satisfaction, for five years until 1814, when they dissolved partnership by mutual consent, and they conducted separate stores for several years; then Samuel Gowdy sold his store and settled on a tract of woodland near the town. James Gowdy was engaged in the mercantile business forty-four years, during which he admitted several partners and, considering the losses incident to a trade involving credit, was measurably successful.. During the long tenure of his merchandising he purchased several lots in Xenia, and his father's farm near the town. He erected some valuable buildings in the town and some cheaper ones which he rented. During the war of 1812 he was a soldier in the company of Capt. Daniel Reeder. He was treasurer of the Green County Bible Society for more than thirty years, giving to that institution untiring labor. He was for twenty-three years treasurer of the Greene County Colonization Society, for which he showed equal devotion. He had been a member of the Associate Reformed Church from its organization, and contributed of his means to the erection of three church buildings. In all the benevolent movements of the time he was a liberal contributor. For the up-building of his fellow-men and the spread of the gospel he could always be depended upon to give his cordial support. To use his own words when passing a review of his life, he said, "Goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and to set up my 'Ebenezer,' saying, 'hitherto the Lord hath helped me.'" For the names of children see forward to fourth generation.

3. Samuel Gowdy[3] (1), second son of John[2] (1) and Abigail (Ryan) Gowdy, born in Lancaster County, Penn., Jan. 9, 1780; married ISABELLA CONNELY and had as many as twelve children of whom hereafter. He went to Mount Sterling in his young manhood and there engaged in the mercantile and cabinet business successfully with his brother, James Gowdy, having the management of the local post office in connection with their store. This was as early as 1802. About 1806 he sold his store and carried his stock of goods to Xenia, Ohio, where he joined his brother who had preceded him about one year in trade. He was one of first merchants in the State. These brothers continued in business with fair success till 1814 when they dissolved partnership by mutual consent and Samuel settled on a tract of wild land from which he cleared a large and productive farm where he erected a commodious set of buildings and made his home the remainder of his life. The authentic record of this family was destroyed by a person who had no legal right to it; and who, also, gave away and otherwise disposed of many beautiful things such as brass candlesticks and rare articles of furniture. The old tall clock which Samuel carried from Mount Sterling, Ky., is still preserved among his descendants in Dayton, Ohio, along with several choice pieces of old-fashioned dishes. He died March 18, 1851. His wife, born March 18, 1786, died Sept. 9, 1842. They were buried in the cemetery at Xenia, O., where old crumbling stones mark their graves. The children's names were as follows: John R., Sarah W., Emily, Jane, Abigail, Martha, Samuel Jr., James, William, Frank H., Isabella and Malinda-Diana. Five of these died in infancy or in youth and of the others only two had issue. See forward to 4th generation for particulars.

(Note by RRC: I have not transcribed the genealogy for the 4th – 11th children of John and Abigail (Ryan) Gowdy or the 6 children of James and Sarah (Brown) Gowdy.)

NOTE.-Mrs. Harriet (Bonner) Irwin, a granddaughter of Samuel and Isabella Gowdy (as above), now has the old tall clock carried by him when he moved from Mount Sterling, Ky., to Xenia, 0., in 1804. She has also some copper-lustered pitchers and pieces of an lrish-lustered dinner set that belonged to the family and which was within her memory used every day on the table until it became too scanty for the family; then it was banished to the kitchen for service there until the younger children grew up and rescued it. The few pieces of this dinner-set are now highly treasured. Mrs. Irwin did not learn of the prospective Family History till after much of the information and records had been in type; but has manifested a deep interest in the scheme and rendered all the assistance toward its success within her power.-EDITOR.

Went west during the early '40's and was lost to his kindred. There exists a family tradition that one of the children of Samuel Gowdy was lost in a steamer explosion on the Mississippi river and it may have been this William.

Augusta County Road Orders, 1745-1769

At its creation from Orange County in 1745, Augusta County extended from the Blue Ridge to the utmost limits of Virginia. Although legislated into existence along with Frederick County in 1738, Augusta did not commence operation until 1745 when it was felt it had sufficient population to support a government. From 1745 to 1770, Augusta was a giant parent county, although early nibbled by the creation in 1754 from it of Hampshire County (now West Virginia). Indeed, what is strange is that it maintained as much of its territory as it did until 1770. Much of this must be attributed to the turmoil of the French and Indian War and its retarding effect on settlement.

The road orders contained in this volume cover the period from 1745, when Augusta’s county government became operational, down to the creation of Botetourt from it in 1770.Prior to 1720, a small portion of the area that later became Augusta County was included within newly-formed Spotsylvania County, which included the present counties of Spotsylvania, Orange, Greene, Culpeper, Madison, and Rappahannock east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and a portion of the Shenandoah Valley as far west as the Shenandoah River. In 1734, Orange County was created from Spotsylvania County. A giant county at its formation, Orange included the present-day counties of Orange, Greene, Culpeper, Madison, and Rappahannock east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, as well as the territory west of the mountains extending, at least nominally, to the Mississippi River. A 1738 enabling act provided for the creation of two new counties, Frederick and Augusta, from that that part of Orange west of the Blue Ridge. This was to take effect as soon as there was sufficient settlement in the region: the first court of Frederick County was held in 1743; Augusta County’s government became operational in 1745. Augusta County’s original territory included most of western and southwestern Virginia, as well as most of what would become the state of West Virginia, the future state of Kentucky, and the Illinois territory. Major reductions to Augusta’s territory included the creations of the counties of Hampshire (1754) and Botetourt (1770), and the loss of the other far western lands of the county (the creation of Yohogania, Monongalia, and Ohio counties from the District of West Augusta in 1776 and the creation of Illinois County in 1778). The subsequent creations of the counties of Rockingham and Rockbridge (both 1778), Pendleton (1788), and Bath (1791) brought Augusta County to its current boundaries.

(Note by RRC: The immigrant Connely brothers, Thomas and Arthur, both had sons named Thomas, Robert, and Arthur. In reading court records (or abstracts in Chalkley) it is almost impossible to determine who a record for Thomas, Robert, or Arthur Connely refers to because of this. The 1787 tax list provides some insight in that Arthur, son of Thomas, who was at least 23 and had married in 1785, does not seem to be enumerated – since there was no Arthur enumerated on 05/15/1787 – other sources also indicate he moved to Montgomery Co., KY, shortly after his marriage to Jane Dale.)

Chapter I. Farms and Plantations on Middle River

CRAIG-LANDES-SIPE PLANTATION AND MANSION HOUSE

The Craig-Landes-Sipe Plantation and Mansion house, situated on Middle River near Mt. Meridian, about two and one-half miles east of Weyers Cave, is either part of a land grant made William Thompson, or of one made John Campbell, or of grants made each. William Thompson, a yeoman, was patented September 22, 1739, when Augusta County was still part of Orange, "a certain tract of land containing more than 400 acres on both sides of Middle River of the Shenando into which North River flows." Stating North River flows into Middle River is a mistake on the part of either the surveyor or the clerk. Some maps of the early 1700s make the same error. Buffalo Run or Draft, a small branch of North River, is mentioned in the patent. For a grant of more than 400 acres of land, said William Thompson was directed to pay the royal family of Great Britain an annual rental of one ear of corn or Lady's Day.

John Campbell died in 1747 or before seized and possessed of several tracts of land lying on the north side of Cathey's (Middle) River and along the sinking Spring Branch, the head of Little Run, which had been patented him. His orphans - Mary, John II, and James Campbell - survived him. Daniel Stover qualified February 15, 1748, as their guardian. The lands of John Campbell and of William Thompson lay close to the Pennsylvania Road which crossed North River at Beard's Ford and Middle River at the Pennsylvania Ford, a short distance below present Mt. Meridian. William Thompson was a member of Augusta Stone Presbyterian Church.

William Thompson conveyed James Craig, a yeoman, February 1, 1745, a tract of land lying on the north side of Middle River containing more than 305 acres, and being part of the more than 400-acre tract patented him in 1739. The indenture was witnessed by Thomas Lewis, Robert Craig, and Thomas Connaly. Yeoman James Craig bought March 12, 1786, from John Campbell II a tract of land on the north side of Middle River, situated on the Sinking Spring branch, the head branch of Little Run, containing 200 acres, and bounded by the lands of Robert and Arthur Campbell and Thomas Connaly.

Yeoman James Craig died in 1791. He devised through his will recorded February 15, 1791, his sons James II and William Craig all his lands lying on the north side of Middle River, each to keep the land he was then living on. He directed that the two tracts of land adjoining land of James Crawford, John Craig, and Henderson which he had willed them were to be divided equally between them as to quantity and quality. He devised the remainder of his land to his other children, directing it be ...

(Note by RRC: In the 3rd paragraph above, May writes that a Thomas Connaly witnessed a 1745 deed in Augusta County, VA. According to family tradition, my ancestor Thomas Connely arrived in America in 1735, spent the next 10 years somewhere in PA, and then settled in Augusta Co., VA, in 1745. However, in Chalkley’s abstraction of this deed (“Chronicles ...”, Vol. III, page 253), he gives the witnesses as Thomas Lewis, Robert Craig, and Wm. Thompson. Daley Craig of Charlottesville, Virginia, sent me a certified copy of the deed; the witnesses are as Chalkley shows them, so May was incorrect and this deed (on page 31 of Deed Book No. 1) provides no evidence that Thomas Connely was in Augusta by 1745.)

Chapter II: Churches, Farms, Plantations, Schools, Towns, And Villages On Little River.

THE WALKER PLANTATION ON LITTLE RUN

The most important branch of Middle River in northern Augusta County is Little Run which rises at the foot of Grindstone Ridge back of Mt. Sidney and Ft. Defiance flows in a northeasterly direction across a portion of the county, and enters Middle River about two miles above present Mt. Meridian, Grindstone Ridge is the range of hills paralleling the Valley Turnpike, now Route 11, from Staunton to Harrisonburg. This range of hills was called Pisgah Heights by early settlers in the area. Little Run has had several names since Colonial days. The segment of it crossed by the Mt. Sidney-Pleasant Valley Church Road has become known locally as Shover's Creek, the segment crossed by the West View School Craig Shop Road as Miller's Creek, and the segment crossed by the West View School-Port Republic-New Hope Road as Walker's Creek. On recent topographic maps, the stream is designated as Broad Run. At the same time settlers in Augusta County were locating along Middle River, they were also locating on Little Run. One of the first to do so was Alexander Walker.

Alexander Walker was a freeholder in Augusta County as early as October 16, 1748, for on that date he was appointed constable by Augusta County Court to succeed Michael Daughtery. He was granted by patent 400 acres of land March 12, 1760. This 400-acre tract was situated not far from Middle River on Little Run and was bounded by lands of McMahon, Reaburn, and Campbell. Five years later this tract was increased to 413 acres by an inclusive survey. Thomas Lewis surveyed for him March 28, 1770, a tract of land containing 159 acres on some drafts of Middle River of the "Shanando"; and July 22, 1772, he surveyed 70 acres fur him on some of the headwaters of Little Run. This small tract of land adjoined the lands of Hugh Kelso, Anthony Kelly and ? patent line.

August 9, 1766. Alexander Walker and wife Elizabeth conveyed for ten pounds in English money their son Alexander II 287 acres of land lying on a branch of Little Run which had been patented Esther Campbell November 3, 1760, and subsequently conveyed by her to Alexander Walker. This tract of land cornered to land of John Campbell. Alexander Walker II died in 1773, for settlement of his estate was recorded August 23 of that year. His father Alexander Walker and his widow Martha administered his estate.

Alexander Walker died testate in early 1775, survived by his wife Elizabeth; sons Andrew, John, and Robert; and daughters Elizabeth, Isabel, Margaret, Martha, and Mary; and granddaughters Jane and Elizabeth. His will witnessed by Joseph Hannah, Robert Hazlett, and Thomas Connaly and signed with his mark was probated March 21, 1775. He devised his wife Elizabeth maintenance during her widowhood, use of his house or ten pounds with which to secure another, whichever she might elect, a bed with bed clothing, and four pounds and ten shillings with which to buy a saddle. Should she re-marry, she was to get only two _____?, a spinning wheel, and body clothes. He bequeathed his daughter Barbara 70 pounds in English currency; his daughter Elizabeth 50 pounds in the same currency, and a negro woman named Judith, stipulating that the children Judith might bear after his death should be divided between Barbara and John; his daughter Isabel 50 pounds in English money, and a negro man named Sambo; his daughter Mary 50 pounds in the same currency, the negro wench called Lucy, her spinning wheel, a young black mare foaled out of young June, her saddle and her clothes; his daughter Margaret 50 pounds in English money, and a negro boy called Sampson; his daughter Martha five pounds in the same currency; and his granddaughters Jane and Elizabeth, children of his deceased son Alexander Walker II, 20 shillings each to be paid them as each became 21.

He willed his 500-acre-or-more plantation to his son John, all the iron tacklings on it, two draft horses, the young mare Jewel and her mother for breeding purposes until each of his children had a horse, and 50 pounds in English money. He devised his son Andrew 80 pounds in the same currency, ninety acres of land he had bought from Joseph Lindel, a negro boy called Frederick, a young mare out of Jewel, and also schooling for one year, a new saddle and necessary clothing providing he remained on the plantation and worked. He bequeathed his son Robert 100 pounds in English money, a stallion colt, a negro boy called Dick, and the testator's black clothes and hat. He named his wife Elizabeth executrix and his son Robert executor of his will and appointed John Campbell, Jr., guardian of his children.

His personal property, including six slaves, was appraised at 1,275 pounds, two shillings, and six pence. The slaves varied in value from 25 pounds to 45 pounds. Sam, a negro man, was valued at 45 pounds; and Lucy, a child-bearing woman, at 40 pounds. Besides raising horses and cattle, growing hemp and flax, and some grain, Alexander Walker was a distiller and a money lender. His still and vessels were valued at ten pounds, and he held notes against 42 different people in the county.

Although Alexander Walker signed his will with his mark, he was not illiterate. He owned four Bibles and a small book of sermons and attended Augusta Stone Church, encouraged his son Andrew through his last will and testament to get a year of "schooling", and the settlement of his estate shows that three different men were paid for teaching his children.

John Walker who inherited the Walker Plantation on Little Run was a successful farmer, a speculator in land, and owner of a number of slaves. His son Alexander III was sworn in as commandant of a company of horse September 30, 1815, by Gentleman Justice James Rankin, a neighbor. By 1830 John Walker built facing north on his Little Run, 400-acre plantation a Georgian, two-story, four-room brick I-house with a shingle, gable roof, an attic, a basement, and a detached kitchen with a room above it, the quarters of the slave cook. A corner stairway in the kitchen gave access to a room above.

The brick used in constructing the main block of the house and the detached kitchen were made from clay found on the place and laid in the Flemish bond pattern. Through a Georgian door, a visitor entered a wide, wood-paneled hall, the ceilings of which as well as those of the four rooms were ten feet from the floor. The floors throughout the house are wide pine boards. The first floor rooms were the dining room and parlor; and the two upstairs ones were bedrooms. Each of these four rooms had a fireplace framed in turned pilasters and a decorated mantel. The attic called a dormitory was also a bedroom. A winding stairway with undecorated newel posts, rectangular banisters, and rail rose to the attic.

The Walker mansion house, like all other plantation houses of the period, had around it beside the detached kitchen such other support buildings as a blacksmith shop, a carriage house, a wagon shed, a cow shed, an icehouse, slave quarters, a smokehouse, a springhouse, and stables. He named the house Velvet Acres because of the luxuriant growth of that flower on the place.

Subsequent owners of the plantation after John Walker built his mansion house on it around 1830 have made changes in the structure. Silas Walker following the Civil War connected the detached kitchen to the main block by building a dining room with a bedroom above between them. He replaced the shingle roof with a metal one, removed the colonial gables, and installed a triangular gable above the front entrance. G. G. Tanner, a medical doctor, and his wife Janet who bought the plantation in 1942, added a two-story front portico in the 1960s. Impressed by the large number of black walnut trees on the plantation, Mrs. Tanner changed its name from Velvet Acres to Walnut Acres. Dr. Tanner's heirs following his death in 1978 added several rooms to the ell and modernized the kitchen.

John Walker died in 1836. His will witnessed by Isaac Sellers of Green Springs farm on North River, George Shreckhise of Mt. Sidney, and John Hufe of Middle River, was recorded at the April, 1836, term of Augusta County Circuit Court. He devised his wife Sarah the rent from all his land as long as she lived, his son Alexander III the Little Run Plantation, his son John the tract of land he had purchased from Thomas Lawson, including eight acres of timberland known as the Lawson tract, and his son Thomas 130 acres of the tract of land he had purchased from Robert Hackman on which the said Thomas then lived. He directed that all his lands not heretofore devised be sold after the death of his wife Sarah and the proceeds derived from their sale be divided equally among his five daughters, to wit, Elizabeth Hooke, Rebecca J. McClung, Patsy Walker, Polly frame, deceased, and Sarah Johnston. He named his wife Sarah executrix and his son Alexander Walker III executor of his will.

According to the appraisement of his moveables, John Walker owned besides his land 16 slaves, a wheat threshing machine, reap hooks and rakes, and a butter churn.

Alexander Walker III, a second generation descendant.of Alexander Walker to inherit the Walker Plantation on Little Run, owned it from 1836 to his death at the end of the Civil War. Through his will dated July 18, 1865, he devised his wife Hannah all of it on the east side of Little Run from Mathias Cash's (Kersh's) farm to the Whitmore farm, including the buildings and one-half of the household and kitchen furniture, and $500 in cash; and his son Silas H. Walker $1,000 in cash, the lower half of the farm, and also the part he bequeathed his mother at her death. After payment of the abovementioned legacies, he ordered the residue of his estate be divided equally among his five children, viz, Benjamin F., James A., Elizabeth Craig, Silas H., and Hannah Mary. September 20, 1878, Silas H. Walker was deeded the following real estate his father Alexander Walker III had died seized of, to wit, Mike's Field, an 80-acre tract of land lying on the north side of Middle River, and a 159-acre tract adjoining the lands of T. P. Crawford heirs, Hansberger, Henton, Kersh, and other lands of the said Silas H. Walker.

After the plantation on Little Run which was patented Alexander Walker in 1760 had been owned by him and three generations of his lineal descendants for 157 years, his great grandson Silas H. Walker sold it February 15, 1917, to W. D. Flory for $26,000. At the time of the sale, the plantation contained 252 acres, was bounded by lands of J. G. Fulton II, Albert H. Roller, D. H. Cromer, and others, and was being rented by B. F. Evans, a son of Hiram Evans who lived on the road that connects the Keezletown Road with the Mt. Sidney-Pleasant Valley Church Road at Reedtown or Cathay. Two years after purchasing the plantation, W. D. Flory sold it to J. H. Harshbarger of Rockingham County for $35,000.

December 29, 1942, Hattie Harshbarger, widow of J. H. Harshbarger, deceased, and his other heirs-at-law sold George G. Tanner and wife Janet for $18,000 the Walker Plantation containing 252 acres with all the buildings thereon and appurtenances thereunto pertaining, including all the cattle, hay, small grain in the ground, corn, ensilage, etc., situated on Little Run near Mt. Meridian, and adjoining lands of J.G. Fulton III, Jacob Wampler, E. E. (Kit) May, and others. George G. Tanner was a medical doctor practicing in Grottoes and a son-in-law of the late J. H. Harshbarger and his widow Hattie Harshbarger. His wife was the former Janet Harshbarger. Dr. Tanner, a native of Madison County, was a graduate of Bridgewater College and of the University of Virginia Medical School.

George Garland Tanner, M.D., died in 1978 survived by his widow Janet and daughter Carol T. Landes, wife of Don Landes, basketball coach then at Ft. Defiance High School. December 28, 1978, Janet Tanner, Carol T. Landes, and Henry Clark, executors of the estate of the late George.G. Tanner, M.D., conveyed Janet Tanner, Carol T. Landes, and Henry Clark, trustees of his estate, a half interest in the real estate hereinafter described as tract two, i.e., all that real estate known as the Walker Place, containing 252 acres, situated on Little Run near Mt. Meridian, and adjoining lands of J. G. Fulton III, Jacob Wampler, E. E. (Kit) May, and others.

SUNSET HOLLOW FARM ON LITTLE RUN

Sunset Hollow Farm, a 90-acre thoroughbred horse farm which sits astride Little Run about a mile south of Cathay on State Road 773, was originally a land grant plantation of 400 acres, more or less, operated by its owners with slave labor.

Alexander Walker and Thomas Connaly both secured land grants on Little Run. Walker was patented 400 acres on it near its mouth July 12, 1760; and Connaly was patented land on the waters of said run before that date, for the said Walker's 400-acre tract was bounded by lands of McMahon, Reaburn, Connaly, and Campbell. Having married Alexander Walker's daughter Margaret, Thomas Connaly was his son-in-law. Further, Alexander Walker had had patented in his name a tract of land in which his son-in-law Connaly had an undivided half interest. After this patent was recorded, Alexander Walker deeded one half of the tract of land to the said Connaly. Because of the contiguity of their lands and because of their family relationship, it is difficult at times to determine which one's patent land on Little Run is being conveyed. Let us assume, therefore, that Sunset Hollow Farm derives from land patented either to Connaly or to both the said Connaly and Alexander Walker.

Thomas Connaly was patented February 1, 1781, a 250-acre tract of land on the waters of Middle River of the "Shenando", apparently his second or third grant of land. He died testate either late in 1794 or very early in 1795, for his will was recorded January 20, 1795. He directed his executors through it to sell all his lands in Augusta County at the pleasure of his sons Thomas, Alexander, and Robert; to give from the money arising from said sale 40 pounds in English currency to each of his six daughters; and to divide the residue equally among his three sons.

October 4, 1804, Alexander Connaly and his wife Mary and Robert Connaly, two sons and a daughter-in-law of the late Thomas Connaly conveyed two certain tracts of land situated on the waters of Middle River to John Early by a deed of bargain and sale; and about two years later John Early and his wife Christina conveyed Michael Cline a tract of land containing 75 acres, more or less, which touched Walker's land. Michael Cline and his wife Elizabeth sold this tract in 1807 to Thomas Lawson, and it then became known as the Lawson tract.

Thomas Lawson and wife Sarah sold June 22, 1812, John Walker, son of Alexander Walker, a tract of land containing 75 acres, more or less, adjoining lands of William Bell and the said JohnWalker, and being part of two tracts of land Alexander Connaly and his wife Mary and Robert Connaly, two sons and a daughter-in-law of Thomas Connaly, had conveyed to John Early by a deed of bargain and sale dated October 4, 1804. John Walker and his wife Sarah conveyed October 16, 1835 Thomas Walker for $8,300 a tract of land on little Run, a branch of Middle River, being the tract on which the said Thomas Walker then resided, and which adjoined the lands of George Lirkiser or Zirkiser (Shreckhise), and others, and also which was part of an old patent tract of 322 acres. The metes and bounds of the tract were a blacksmith shop, a road, the mouth of a lane, and the beginning corner of the old patent tract of land. About two years later John Walker conveyed James Bourland and Thomas Walker for $2,237 two certain tracts of land called the Lawson tract, comprising 83 acres, more or less, which adjoined the said Thomas Walker's other land.

(Note by RRC: John Walker devised his son Robert (not Thomas) 130 acres of the tract of land he had purchased from Robert Hackman. The wife of Alexander Connelly is Nancy (not Mary) in the deed of 4 October 1804.)

Chapter IV: Churches, Farms, Plantations, Schools, and Towns On The Keezletown Road.

THE LONG-GENTRY-EVANS-FARM NEAR WEYERS CAVE

The Long-Gentry-Evans Farm, parts of which remained in possession of Adam Long and his descendants from 1820 to 1949, was pieced together from two different small land grants, namely the McMahan grant and the Thomas Connaly grant.

Robert McMahan was patented in 1759 a 300-acre tract of land on Buffalo Run; he conveyed it in 1758 to John and James Hooke; James Hooke sold his share to John; and John devised in 1824 one half of the tract to his niece Mary Ann Blakey and the other half to ten other nieces. Alexander Blakey and wife Mary Ann Blakey conveyed January 6, 1826, Henry B. Roland (Rowland) a 110-acre tract of land lying on the waters of North River, beginning between three white oak trees on John Walker's line, and being part of lands formerly owned by John Hooke. A year later Henry B. Rowland sold the very same tract to Jacob and Benjamin Weller; and April 2, 1822, Benjamin Weller and his wife Katherine conveyed one-half of the said land, 55 acres, to Eli Long for $550.

Thomas Connaly moved from Culpeper County to Augusta before 1749, for he is listed that year as a tithable in Captains Givins and Campbell's militia companies. He was granted by patent bearing date February 1, 1781, a tract of land lying on the waters of Little Run, a branch of Middle River, containing 250 acres. Several deeds suggest he was granted before 1781 a larger tract of 332 acres situated on the same stream. Through his will, recorded January 20, 1795, Thomas Connaly directed that all his land in Augusta County be sold, that from the proceeds derived thereform 40 pounds in English money be paid each of his six daughters; and that the residue be divided equally among his sons Alexander, Robert, and Thomas. He willed his negro boy "Peet" to his son Alexander and his negro woman "Pol" to his son Thomas, subject to the reservation that the first child born to her after she became his son's property was to be given to the deviser's son Robert. He devised his wife Margaret maintenance from the land during her natural life, the mare called "Keet" and her bridle and saddle, her bed with its furnishings, a spinning wheel, and a negro girl named "Beck". He devised Thomas his horse Shandy and a saddle, Alexander his horse Slavin and a saddle, and his son Robert a young filly named Lady, subject to the reservation that the first colt she foaled was to be given to the deviser's daughters Jean and Isabella. He devised his 840-acres of land in "Caintucky" as follows: 200 acres to Alexander, 200 acres to Arthur, 200 acres to Robert, and 240 acres to Thomas. He named his wife Margaret executrix and sons Alexander, Robert, and Thomas executors of his will.

October 4, 1804, Alexander Connaly and wife Mary and Robert Connaly conveyed John Early for $625 two tracts of land situated on the waters of Middle River. Tract one comprised 110 acres of land and was one-third of the land formerly owned in Augusta County by Thomas Connaly, deceased; tract two contained 125 ares of land which the late said Thomas Connaly had previously conveyed the said Alexander and Robert Connaly. John Early reconveyed May 17, 1820, Adam Long 175 acres of these two tracts of land. The 175 acres Adam Long bought were situated on the waters of Little Run near the Keezletown Road. Twelve years later Adam Long and wife Peggy sold their son Eli Long 17 1/2 acres from the 175-acre tract they had bought from John Early. February 23, 1836, John Revercomb and wife Mary and Benjamin Weller conveyed Eli Long a tract of land containing 29 acres, three roods, and 17 poles adjoining lands of John Early, Rankin, and others. Adam Long and his wife Catherine sold their son Eli December 2, 1840, five acres, one rood, and five perches of land on the Keezletown Road, adjoining the lands of the said Adam and Eli Long. Zecheriah Johnston and wife Sally conveyed July 14,1849, Eli Long 55 acres and 86 poles of land adjoining lands of Thomas Walker, Benjamin Weller, and others which was part of the McMahan grant. Eli Long now had a farm of 161 1/2 acres situated on the waters of Little Run near the Keezletown Road.

Five years before the Civil War started, Eli long sold two small tracts of land. January 1, 1855, he and his wife conveyed S. Henry Bowers five acres and 28 poles of land bounded by his own land, the land of Thomas Walker, and a lane leading to the Keezletown Road. Some three years later, he and his wife sold Robert and Mary Reed for $500 ten acres of land adjoining lands of John S. Rubush, Ann Kersh, and Andrew Reed and being part of a larger tract deeded Eli long July 14, 1849, by Zecheriah Johnston and wife. This ten-acre tract became known later as Reedtown and then as the village of Cathay.

(Note by RRC: I suspect "thereform" should be there from; "ares" should be acres.)

THE EARLY-HOUFF FARM ON THE KEEZLETOWN ROAD

The Early-Houff farm fronting on the Keezletown Road about one and a half miles southeast of Weyers Cave derives from the McMahan and Connaly land grants on the waters of Buffalo and Little Runs through conveyances to Adam and Eli Long and then through partition of their farms. Eli Long of near Mt. Sidney was declared bankrupt August 26, 1872; and four months later John Paul, assignee of his estate, conveyed David Early for $2,987.87 a tract of 145 acres of his land adjoining the Long homestad and the lands of Rubush.

David Early having died, Margaret E. Early, Joseph A. Glick and wife Mary C., and Samuel A. Driver and wife Mary A. conveyed April 1, 1895, Noah L. and William P. Early for $1,574.25 three several tracts of land. One tract contained 25.5 acres, the second tract 12.5 acres, and the third tract one acre. All three tracts of land adjoined and were parts of the Old George Rubush tract which derived from lands patented Esther Campbell, Alexander Walker, and Thomas Connaly.

(Note by RRC: I suspect "several" should be separate and "homestad" should be homestead.)

THE WILLIAM P. EARLY-FRANK S. DRIVER FARM ON THE KEEZLETOWN ROAD

The William P. Early-Frank S. Driver farm fronting on the Keezletown Road about one and a half miles south of Weyers Cave derives from McMahan, Connaly, and Walker land grants on the waters of Buffalo and Little Runs through partition first of the Adam and Eli Long farms and then of what became the David Early farm. Eli Long of near Mt. Sidney was declared bankrupt August 26, 1872; and four months later John Paul, assignee of his estate, conveyed David Early for $2,987.87 a tract of 145 acres of land adjoining the Levi Long homestead and the lands of Rubush.

Article on Big Bone, Boone County, Kentucky

(Copied from Wikipedia, online.)

Big Bone, Kentucky
From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
Big Bone, Kentucky, is an area in southern Boone County, Kentucky, at 38.888° N 84.751° W. It is bounded on the west by the Ohio River, and Rabbit Hash, on the south by Big Bone Creek, which empties into the river at Big Bone Landing. The northern extent is along Hathaway Road, and the eastern portion extends not further than U.S. 42, and is approached from that direction by Beaver Road (State Route 338) coming from either Richwood or Walton. Geographical features of interest include the now disappeared Big Bone Island and the Palisades of Big Bone Creek.

Big Bone Lick
The most famous landmark is Big Bone Lick, now the site of Big Bone Lick State Park. The salt lick, or lick, as it is more generally known locally, was long known to the original inhabitants of the area. It was discovered by people of European descent about 1735, the first recorded instance being one Robert Smith, an Indian trader. Other notable visitors were Daniel Boone, Lewis and Clark, William Henry Harrison, Christopher Columbus Graham, Mary Draper Ingles, Constantine S. Rafinesque, and many others.

History
The area is rich in history, and was the site of a "Watering Place", an hotel that catered to the well-to-do in the early part of the nineteenth century. There have been at least three hotels associated with the springs. The area has traditionally been primarily agricultural. Early transportation was by river. There were a few steamboats built in the 1830's (until the white oak timber gave out). The largest town, now extinct, was Hamilton, named after an early magistrate, Joel Hamilton; family descendants still live in the area. Hamilton, on the river, was originally known as Landing, and was located at the mouth of Little Gunpowder Creek, now generally known as Landing Creek. The nearby village of Normansville was never incorporated, and was just a mile or so from Hamilton. There were several businesses there in the 1880s and following.

There were several schools in the area, the earliest before 1843. The earliest church was the Mud Lick Baptist Church, established about 1804, but it seems to have gone out of existence. The Big Bone Baptist Church was established in 1843. The house of worship was built on land donated by Gen. John Wallace and Thomas Huey. Until then most of the inhabitants of the area attended Middle Creek Baptist Church (now called Belleview in Belleview Bottoms, Kentucky). The only other church in the immediate area, the Big Bone Methodist Church, was established in 1888. The Methodist building, the upstairs of which was owned by the Masonic lodge, is still standing, and the land is now owned by the Park; the building is presently undergoing repairs. There are a number of cemeteries in the area, the largest being at the Baptist Church. The oldest graves in this cemetery are from the 1840s.

There have been excavations of several of the prehistoric sites in the area, as well as at historic sites. A number of the farms in the area were tended by slaves before the American Civil War, though the density was probably not as high as in some other areas of the county because of the nature of the terrain. Probably the most famous visitor at that time was Gen. John Hunt Morgan, who passed by the Lick on a cold snowy day, with Capt. Hines. They were escaping from prison after being captured in Union territory. The hamlet of Big Bone gained some status in the early 1900's, and a "traction road" (railway) was proposed several times, but never materialized. The park itself became a reality due primarily to the efforts of John Uri Lloyd (1849 - 1936), a notable researcher and writer from the county who founded and served as the first president of the "Big Bone Lick Historical Association."

Etymology
The name of the area has often elicited comment. The area was named after the extraordinarily large bones, including mammoths and mastodons, found in the swamps around the salt lick frequented by animals, who need salt in their diets. The fossil deposits were the most notable feature in the entire geographical region. Even the first maps noted it as "the place the big bones are found."

References
The primary history of the lick is Willard Rouse Jillson, Big Bone Lick, Louisville, 1936.

Big Bone Creek enters the Ohio River at mile 516.8 below Pittsburgh. The mouth is at the division of Boone and Gallatin Counties, Kentucky, near the site of Big Bone Island. It is navigable for several miles, and flows through Big Bone Lick State Park.

Article about Rabbit Hash, Boone Co., KY

(Copied from The Kentucky Post, 09-12-2003, online.)

Rabbit Hash makes history

By Luke E. Saladin
Post staff reporter

Things just keep looking up for the historic community of Rabbit Hash.
In the last year, the Rabbit Hash Historical Society has received more than $250,000 in donations that it used to buy the 3.5-acre hamlet in order to protect it from developers, and now it is on course to become only the second district in Boone County to the National Registry of Historic Places.

The Kentucky Heritage Council will vote on Sept. 19 at a meeting in Glasgow whether to accept the application and forward it to the National Park Service for review.

If all goes as planned, the park service could accept the application before the end of the year.

While the designation does little except qualify for the district for a few tax benefits and protects it from any federally funded development, officials say it is still a respected feather in the community's cap.

"If you talk to anyone familiar with the area, they know Rabbit Hash qualifies to be in the registry," said Matt Becher, rural/open-space planner for the Boone County Planning Commission and historic preservation officer for the county. "It is a selling point to some degree, but it is really a point of pride more than anything else."

Rabbit Hash, a hamlet located along the Ohio River in Western Boone County, is treasured by historians both locally and around the state because it exists today much as it did 170 years ago, a living example of an early river town on the Ohio River.

At the social heart of the community is the Rabbit Hash General Store, which still boasts a trademark Coca-Cola sign from the 1930s.

The general store, along with a ferry landing, museum, a veterans memorial, blacksmith shop and about 10 residents are listed as part of the district in the application. The total district comprises about 33 acres.

Other areas already listed in the national registry include Churchill Downs in Louisville, the Suspension Bridge in Covington and the East Row district in Newport. Burlington is the other Boone County site on the registry.

"You have to go to Rabbit Hash. You really can't explain it," Becher said. "The place is bizarrely isolated. You go through this little road thinking there shouldn't be anything and then all of the sudden you come upon this little town."

A large part of Rabbit Hash's charm is indeed the culture.

The community once elected as mayor a dog named Goofy, selling votes for $1 apiece to raise money to restore the East Bend Methodist Church.

Such instances attracted the attention of filmmaker Judge Gerard Prest, who will debut a film about Rabbit Hash this winter at the Sundance Film Festival titled "Rabbit Hash: Center of the Universe."

"I traveled to 48 countries last year," Prest told The Post last summer, "But I've never run across a town that has such a great sense of humor."

Last year Edna Flowers, a retired P & G employee who owned a small weekend house in Rabbit Hash before her death, left the historical society $250,000 to keep the community the way it is.

Last December the society decided to use the money to buy the town, ensuring that no developers could get their hands on the land across the river from the Grand Victoria Casino in Rising Sun, Ind.

Notes on Mt. Sterling, Montgomery Co., KY

Mt. Sterling, seat of Montgomery County which was named for General Richard Montgomery, Revolutionary War officer. Formed in 1797 from Clark County.

Estill's Defeat: Captain James Estill, gallant soldier and frontiersman, fought one of bloodiest Indian battles, called "Estill's Defeat", on March 22, 1782, in what is now Montgomery County. He and 7 of his 25 pioneers were killed in violent combat with a band of marauding Wyandots. Captain James Estill was killed on Hingston Creek about 145 steps from the place where the battle first began, about two miles below Small mountain. There was a bend in the creek and a small branch on the east side of the creek that put in about the place that the battle began which was at a Buffalo crossing on the creek. There is an historical marker at the corner of N. Maysville St. and Hinkston Pike, Mt. Sterling, KY.

Arthur Connely lived near Estill's famous battle site (see J. J. Marshall's Reports, Conley's Heirs vs. Chiles, January, 1831, pages 303-309, for proof. Chief Justice Robertson's description of the battle: "The battle was fought on the 22d of March, 1782, in the now county of Montgomery, and in the vicinity of Mountsterling. It is a memorable incident, and perhaps one of the most memorable, in the interesting history of the settlement of Kentucky. The usefulness and popularity of Captain Estill; the deep and universal sensibility excited by the premature death of a citizen so gallant and so beloved; the emphatic character of his associates in battle; the masterly skill and chivalric daring displayed throughout the action, ("every man to his man, and each to his tree;") the grief and despondence produced by the catastrophe; all contributed to give to "ESTILL'S DEFEAT," a most signal notoriety and importance, especially among "the early settlers." All the story with all its circumstances of locality, and of "the fight," was told and told again and again, until even the children knew it "by heart." No legendary tale was ever listened to with as intense anxiety, or was inscribed in as vivid and indelible an impress, on the hearts of the few of both sexes who then constituted the hope and strength of Kentucky." Some additional notes from this article: William Hays sold 118 acres to Arthur Conley (RRC: this is the spelling used throughout this article) in 1793. Hinton sold 59 acres to Arthur Conley. Taylor sold 59 acres to Bridges who then sold the same to the said Conley. In 1794, Arthur Conley settled on the 118 acres which he had bought from Hays. He continued to reside on the land until his death in August, 1815. Chiles ... obtained a judgement in ejectment in 1818 against Conley's heirs and others ...).

Estill's battle and the events leading up to it are well described in an article by the Rev. W. G. Montgomery in the Southern Christian Advocate of May 9, 1845. "Capt. Estill's party came up with the Indians. They proved to be Wyandots, and twenty-five in number, exactly that of Capt. Estill's band. The ground was highly favorable to the Indian mode of warfare, but Estill and his men, without a moment's hesitation, boldly and fearlessly commenced an attack upon them, and the latter as boldly and fearlessly (for they were picked warriors) engaged in the bloody combat. It is, however, painful to record that in the very onset Lieut. Miller, of Estill's party, with six men under his command ingloriously fled from the field, thereby causing the death of many brave soldiers. Hence Estill's party numbered eighteen, and the Wyandots twenty-five. Between these parties, at the distance of fifty yards, the battle raged for the space of two hours. Deeds of desperate daring were common. On either side wounds and death were inflicted, neither party advancing or retreating. 'Every man to his man, and every man to his tree.' Capt. Estill was now covered with blood from a wound received early in the action; nine of his brave companions lay dead upon the field, and four others were so disabled by their wounds as to be unable to continue the fight. Estill's fighting men were now reduced to four. Among this number was Joseph Proctor. The brave leader of this Spartan band was now brought into personal conflict with a powerful and active Wyandot warrior. The conflict was for a time fierce and desperate, and keenly and anxiously watched by Proctor, with his finger upon the trigger of his unerring rifle. Such, however, was the struggle between those fierce and powerful warriors that Proctor could not shoot without greatly endangering the safety of his Captain. Estill had had his right arm broken the preceding summer in and engagement with the indians, and in the conflict with the Wyandot warrior on this occasion that arm gave way, and in an instant his savage for buried his knife in Captain Estill's breast, but instantly the brave Proctor sent a ball from his rifle to the Wyandot's heart. Thus ended this memorable battle... “

Arthur Connely came to KY from VA in 1791 (per the Gilmore Connely Bible record). It was probably to the area that was then called Bourbon County; Clark County was formed from Bourbon in 1793; Montgomery County was formed from Clark in 1797. I suspect that Jane (Dale) Connely inherited land there from her father.

Morgan's Station: Settled in 1789. On Slate creek, 7 miles E of Mt Sterling, in now Bath Co. Attacked by Indians April 1, 1793. 19 women and children were captured while men worked in fields. One woman hid in a spring house and gave the alarm. 12 of the prisoners were massacred. There is an historical marker 2 mi. E. of Mt. Sterling. I wonder if this settlement was made by folks from Augusta Co., VA.

Connely family migration from Ireland to America in 1735

(The following is a wonderful bit of family history Linda Lee (Rybin) Kepler of North Platte, NE, sent to me in June of 2006. She obtained it from her aunt Elizabeth (Connely) Lee. I was first made aware of it by Robert Merrill Connely of Phoenix, AZ, who was told about it by his cousin Lois Elaine (Evans) Schultz of Wisner, NE. The document was written by Edward Johnson Turpin Connely (1873 OH – 1945 NE). EJT Connely was the father of Elizabeth & the grandfather of Linda, Lois and Robert. It contains information provided by their great-grandfather James Worthington Connely (1825 KY–1905 OH). The document is 5 typed pages, each measuring 8.5 x 11 inches. Transcribed by RRC from a photocopy of a photocopy of the original. I have transcribed only the top ¾ of the first page. I retained the original spelling except in 2 instances where I changed The to They. I also separated a few words that were run together. Sentences shown in parentheses in the transcription are part of the document, notes written by EJT Connely, not by me)

The sentence that begins with “This THOMAS CONNELY” was underlined in my copy of the document; I can’t tell if this underlining was in the original document or added later.

James Worthington Connely says his father Thomas Connely was a grandson of Alexander Connely. Based on other sources, I believe James Worthington Connely’s father Thomas Connely was a grandson of the Thomas Connely who emigrated from Ireland, married Margaret Walker, and died in Augusta Co., VA, in 1794.

There are 2 more paragraphs between the 0-0-0 separators that I have not transcribed, one fully on the first page, the second continuing onto the second page. These seem to be notes by EJT Connely on various aspects of the migrant’s life. The first page of the document was cut-off at the bottom in the copy I have and does not provide everything that is contained in the 2nd paragraph. Of importance, the first paragraph does mention “the CONNELY-WALKER migrants”.

Linda Kepler has told me that in other papers, EJT Connely mentions that the migrants left from County Meath, Ireland, and during their overland journey in America they crossed the Delaware, the Susquehanna and the Schoolkill (Schuykill) rivers.)

Alexander Dale 1720c-1786 of Rockbridge Co., VA

(Transcription by RRC from the original article in the journals written by Dr. Donald K. Smith Dale, "Searching for the Hidden Dale", Vol. IV. This article begins on pages 136-140 and continues on pages 172-174. Some corrections are provided on page 316 in Vol. VIII. I have transcribed only pages 136, 138-140, 172, and the top of page 173; the corrections are shown in my note at the end of this transcription; page 137 is a map, and some material at the end of the article on pages 173 & 174 was not transcribed. I want to thank Barb Shackelford of Port St. Lucie, FL, for sending me work done earlier on this article by her late cousin Mrs. Audrey (Durst) Stigall of Brookfield, MO.)

Alexander DALE became the patriarch for those with the Dale surname settling in that part of Virginia. By 1748, he built his first cabin and began clearing land along Kerr's Creek. This area just a few miles from where Thomas Jefferson had chiseled his name into the base strata of Natural Bridge was still a part of Augusta County.

Alexander's birth was probably ca. 1720-1728. His wife, Isabell(a) GILMORE, seems to have been born about 1731. Sufficient data in Augusta and Rockbridge counties verify his life and social status where, and the words are carefully used, he calculated and spent his life.

The attests for this Ulster-Englishman and Irish-Irish wife include deeds, processionings of boundary lines, tax lists, court proceedings and the wills/estate settlements for their kith and kin of that locale.

By his own definition, Alexander was a yeoman. His judgement and deportage generated respect from his peers. Thus, they made him constable and also to sit on jury.

Actual filings were sometimes several years late. But in 1755 he formally came into possession of the rough and rocky terrain making up his first 80 acres. Five years later, in 1760, he was able to add another 110 acres of this beautiful, yet austere, Blue Ridge land to his holdings.

A still surviving record that was penned into a Bible nearly a century and-a-half ago tells us something of this couple's origins. Both Alexander and Isabella were natives of Ireland. The Gilmore lineage has been traced back several generations through Ireland into Scotland. And, the Dale lineage appears to have been in Ulster (Ireland) for two or more generations prior to America and after migrating from England, possibly via Scotland.

The Gilmores had come into the valley of Virginia through Pennsylvania after arriving at the port of Philadelphia. Land transactions and other such records give them a clear trace as they made their way to Kerr's Creek in what is now Rockbridge County. Their Pennsylvania sojourn probably included time in the Carlisle area. Such was the case for several, maybe most, of the families who made their homes on Kerr's Creek.

With the Dales in the same neighborhood as their in-laws, the Gilmores (virtually next-door), one assumes that the two families had been together all along. This would in turn explain the absence of land records for Alexander after his arrival in the colonies and before choosing the portion of forest that would finally yield a homestead for him, his wife and ten children.

How often we have heard and also echoed, "No one is an island!" Except for a very limited few, isolation is rejected. We long for and search out our own kind. More and more those who are doing genealogical research are demonstrating that this need for the society to which we have been emotionally conditioned holds clues for discovering who our forbears were.

So common was the route of pilgrimage followed by the Scots-Irish with the Ulster-English sprinkled amongst them that at one time it was mistakenly named 'the Irish trail.' But, be that as it may, the thousands from Northern Ireland who dispersed into New England, along the Chesapeake Bay of Maryland and then down into the valley of Virginia discerned and followed smaller paths within this one larger trail.

The way to Carlisle and then on to Kerr's Creek in Rockbridge was one such smaller path.

In year's gone by, descendants of those settlers in Rockbridge related that back in Scotland and Northern Ireland, their progenitors had been Presbyterians, by-and-large. But, all Presbyterians were not the same. In Rockbridge, at least three different Presbyterian denominations were represented in the colonial period. One of the three were known as the 'Seceeders'. All of the Presbyterians, as with other Christian bodies, used as their hymn book the Psalms from the Bible. As other Presbyterians adopted their singing of the Psalms to the newer forms of melody that were emerging, the 'Seceeders' withdrew from them over a preference for the traditional plainsong, sometimes called Gregorian chant in our present day.

Well, these Kerr's Creek folk were the 'Seceeder' Presbyterians. Like the "birds of a feather who all flock together," one of their motivations for so doing was in their song! All of us searching out our roots want more than just the names and dates that are carved on tombstones. And so here is a lovely oddity that helps to breathe life into this man, woman and the circle of their closest friends.

Earlier we mentioned the 'Family Register' of a Bible published in 1845 that identifies Alexander, Isabella, their ten children and a very large network of their kin. Only that which is pertinent to us now, will be quoted:

“Arthur CONNELY, oldest son of the first above named Thomas, married in 1785 Jane DALE, daughter of Alexander DALE and Isabella GILMORE, both natives of Ireland*, and emigrated from Augusta County, Virginia, to Montgomery County, Kentucky in1791, where he died. His wife Jane Dale had 7 brothers and 2 sisters to wit Robert, Thomas, Alexander, James, William, Joseph, Samuel, Martha, Elizabeth” [ 'both natives of Ireland' refers to the parents of Jane Dale].

The source of this data was Gilmore Franklin CONNELY (1815-1896), first s/o Arthur CONNELY (1790-1878) & Jane [STEELE] CONNELY (1793-1871) and grandson of Arthur CONNELY (1764-1815) & Jane [DALE] CONNELY (1766-1839). W. Alexander OSTHEIMER of Houma, LA, a descendant of this lineage is the present owner of this Bible.

Birth-order for the siblings is not known. But, because the old British naming pattern seems to have been used by many of those within at least the next two generations and from a small amount of public information available, we are probably correct that,

1. John Robert DALE is the eldest male. The cited Bible Register does not mention a John as a sibling to Jane. This turns up an interesting probability. Again, going to later generations of the lineage, especially those through Thomas with whom we are better acquainted, up to three given names for the individual was not unusual for the Ulster-English involved, if not for the Scots-Irish. Depending upon the circumstances and also his/her stage in life, one or more of the given names, a nickname or simply the initials would be used by or in reference to that person.

According to an old tax record covering 1782-1810 of Rockbridge County, John Dale was recognized as Alexander's heir in 1787. Likewise, a John Dale is the surety when Jane Dale married to Arthur Connely. (It is of course, possible, that Alexander's baptismal name was also John.) And on 19 March 1767 John Dale had served as a juror at the same time as had Alexander. Court documentations refer to Robert at least three different times. He purchased 80 acres from Alexander and Isabel(la) on 04 May 1771; he served in Captain James GILMORE's Rifles during the Revolutionary War; and there is documentation for he and Sarah residing on Kerr's Creek in 1779. In several land transactions after 1787 the grantor or grantee was John and Elenore Dale. One other tax list, i.e. a poll tax also for 1787, has John Dale on it. Samuel Dale's tax on that listing was paid for him by John. The previously mentioned jury duty in 1767 for this eldest son would require his birth by 1746.

2. William Dale was enumerated as residing "on the north side of Buffalo Creek Botetourt County" in 'A list of the Tithables Taken by Wm. McKee 1772'. Botetourt Deed Book 2, p. 32 and dated 30 May 1774 states that the grantor was Robert Alexander (to) grantee William Dale, "280 acres on Sugar Fall on west side of Buffalo Creek, a branch of James River ... (for) L1,042"; the witnesses were Patrick Sockhart, Harvey Ames(?), and John Aylett. On 08 September 1772 William served as a juror held for Botetourt County. He served again the following day, 09 September 1772, as did James Gilmore.

3. Alexander Dale was also enumerated on the north side of Buffalo Creek Botetourt County in 1772. Another record of Botetourt for this Alexander includes a court appearance on 13 April 1773 to certify 1,459 pounds of hemp.

The proximity of this William and Alexander to Alexander and Isabella Dale on Kerr's Creek makes it difficult to not believe these men are their sons of the same names. William's jury duty demanded that his birth had taken place at least by 1751. The probabilities are that Alexander was the family's third son; his court appearance for the hemp certification places his birth at least by 1752 to 1754.

4. Joseph Dale is perplexing. A known record doesn't exist that we can ascribe to him in Augusta, Rockbridge or Botetourt counties, or any other area, thus far.

5. Elizabeth Dale was "seated" in the Old Monmouth Meeting House by 05 Sept 1790. She was probably the eldest of the three daughters.

6. Martha Dale is the other sister to Jane [Dale] Connely mentioned in the Bible's Family Register and for which no other references are known.

7. James Dale has left his trace in the public record, but hardly more. He was survived by his wife Matty, and two, three or more children. Clark County, Kentucky's first tax list was for 1793 and it carries both he and his brother, Thomas. (Shortly thereafter, Montgomery County was divided from Clark.) A monument located in Boonesboro is reputed to carry the name of a James Deal as passing through on the migratory trail. Probably this was our James. This would also indicate that he had staked our that part of Clark before his younger brother, Thomas. The death of James was before 1810. Thus, the Montgomery county census for 1810 gives us Matty's name and the close proximity of her house hold to that of her brother-in-law, Thomas.

8. Thomas Dale was born in 1763, and Jane his wife in 1766. This can be determined by careful calculation from the Tax Lists and several census records. These figurings, because of the children, also help us to place the marriage of Thomas and Jane at about 1783. (Their oldest child, Alexander, was born ca. 1784/5.) Clark County's Tax List of 1793 shows Thomas to have owned five horses and six cattle. The odds are that he had brought these with them from Kerr's Creek. In the census of 1870, Mary Dale born 1786c, and Isabella Dale born 1788c, (the second and third of Thomas and Jane's ten children) survived in Montgomery County, Kentucky, as spinsters. Both were listed as being born in Virginia. When the ninth of these siblings, Nancy [Dale] Leach died in 1880 at 76 years of age, the family reported that her parents had been born in Virginia. Nancy and her husband, John Leach, had lived much of their adult life in Silver Creek Township, Cowley County, Kansas.

9. Jane Dale residue gives more precise dates than any other of Alexander and Isabella's issue. She was born 10 Nov 1766. Her death was 12 July 1839 in Putnam County, Indiana. A marriage bond was posted for her and Arthur Connely in Augusta County, Virginia 23 Nov 1885. John Dale was listed as her father which was either an error by the county clerk or else as was previously observed, John was the baptismal name of Alexander. Jane and Arthur were married 06 December of that year by the Rev. John Brown of the New Providence Presbyterian Church. Arthur was born 24 Oct 1764 in the Rockbridge area and died 09 Aug 1815 near Mr. Sterling, Montgomery County, Kentucky. Various Montgomery County records incline one to feel that Arthur Connely and Thomas Dale were closely associated throughout their lives.

10. Samuel Dale had probably just come of the poll tax age, 16, in 1787 when this was paid for him by his eldest brother, John (Robert). Samuel married in Rockbridge on 28 February 1793 to Isabella LAWSON. Males, even then, were prone to marry between the ages of 18 and 22. It is likely, then, that Samuel was born ca. 1771. A Samuel Dale is found on the Rockbridge census records through 1830.

(Note by RRC: On page 316 in Vol. VIII of his journals, Dr. Dale posted an editorial addenda to this article, saying “further research and re-reading of old transcriptions cause the need for these corrections”; in paragraph 15 above, 2 sisters should be 7 sisters “which leaves the Christian names for five of these siblings unknown”; in paragraph 18 above, John Robert Dale should be John William Dale; in paragraph 20 above, William Dale should be Robert Dale and this Robert was probably Peter Robert Dale.

In paragraph 28 there is a typo in the marriage bond date; it is given as 23 Nov 1885; 1885 should be 1785.)

Abstract of the Shelby Co., KY, will of John Connelly who died in 1798

Shelby Co., KY, Will Book A, 1795 - 1804

CONNELLY, JOHN. July 8, 1798. Oct. I798. Wife: Sarah. Sons: William, Thompson, Jesse, James, Stephen. Daus: Mary, Sarah, Elizabeth, Nancy. Ex: wife, Anderson Allen. Wit: Benjamin Kersie, James Brooks.

(Note by RRC: July 8, 1798, is date written, Oct. 1798 is date probated.

Other researchers often (but not always) give John's birth date & place as 22 Aug. 1757, Augusta Co., VA. I doubt that John was a son of Thomas Connely, ID =1, but if he was born in Augusta Co., VA, the geographic coincidence suggests to me that he might be fairly closely related to Thomas (Thomas & his wife Margaret wrote their wills in 1794; neither mention a son named John but a John Connely witnessed both of their wills; I have always assumed that John was their nephew, ID = 28, the s/o Arthur Connely, ID =2, brother to Thomas.). I know that the surname of some of the descendants of the above John who died in 1798 was spelled Connely in some records and some of his descendants lived in the same places as descendants of Thomas, e.g., Putnam Co., IN, and Edgar Co., IL.)

In Remembrance of our Irish Setter

Runaround Sue was born on 9 Jan 1993 in Leesburg, VA Her parents were Scarlly's Road Runner (sire) and Meadowlark's Intrigue (dam). She was adopted into our Connelly family when she was 2 years old, we called her Susie.

We were told by Nena & Norbert Dee, the folks who bred her, that Susie was a poor traveler and would probably throwup on the trip home to Columbia. Our daughter, Lorri, cradled Susie in her arms in the backseat of the car without incident. I began taking her on short car trips around town and eventually she became a great traveler and joined us on all out RV trips. What a marvelous companion she was.

Born with great hunting instincts but now in an urban environment she turned her attention to the many butterflies she found in our yard and adjacent open space. She would follow a butterfly in flight until it landed on a flower, then she would stop and point at it for awhile before inching closer & closer, finally making a futile lunge and flushing her prey. Usually the butterfly flew off untouched.

Susie became ill on 24 Nov 2006, spent one night in the hospital, came home to recuperate, but never got better. She was put to sleep on 30 Nov 2006, about 5 weeks before her 14th birthday. I had a hard time reaching the decision to end her life; our vet for the past 2 decades, Dr. John Cunningham, gave me a copy of an article written by the American playwright Eugene O'Neill which helped me make the decision; I'll include it here. There is another vet's story at the end.

The Last Will and Testament of Silverdene Emblem O'Neil

I, Silverdene Emblem O'Neil (familiarly known to my family, friends and acquaintances as "Blemie"), because of the burden of my years and infirmaties so heavy upon me, and I realize the end of my life is near, do hearby bury my last will and testament in the mind of my Master. He will not know it is there until after I am dead. Then, remembering me in his loneliness, he will suddenly know of this testament and, I ask him then to inscribe this as a memorial to me.

I have little in the way of material things to leave. Dogs are wiser than men. They do not set great store upon things. They do not waste their days hoarding property. They do not ruin their sleep worrying about how to keep the objects they have, and how to obtain the objects they have not. There is nothing of value I have to bequeath, except my love and faith. These I leave to all those who loved me, to my Master and Mistress, who I know will mourn me most, to Freeman who has been so good to me, to Cyn, Roy, Willie and Naomi, and ... but if I should list all those who have loved me, it would force my Master to write a book. Perhaps it is vain for me to boast so near to death, which returns all beasts and vanities to dust, but I have always been an extremely lovable dog.

I ask my Master and Mistress to remember me always, but not to grieve for me too long. In my life I have tried to be a comfort to them in time of sorrow, and a reason for added joy in their happiness. It is painful for me to think that even in death I should cause them pain. Let them remember that while no other dog has ever had a happier life (and I owe this to their love and care for me), now that I have grown blind and deaf and lame, and even my sense of smell fails me so that a rabbit could be right under my nose and I might not know, my pride has sunk to a sick, bewildered humiliation. I feel life is taunting me with having over-lingered my welcome. It is time I said good by, before I become too sick and a burden on myself and on those who love me. It will be a sorrow to leave them but not a sorrow to die. Dogs do not fear death as men do. We accept it as a part of life, not as something alien and terrible, which destroys life. What may come after death, who knows? I would like to believe with those my fellow Dalmations who are devoted to Mohammedans, that there is a Paradise where one is always young and full-bladdered; where all day one dillies and dallies; where each blissful hour is a mealtime; where in long evenings there are a million fireplaces with logs forever burning, and one curls oneself up and blinks into the flames and nods and dreams, remembering the old, brave days on Earth, and the love of one's Master and Mistress.

I am afraid this is too much for even such a dog as I am to expect. But peace, at least, is certain. Peace and long rest for a weary, old heart, head and limbs, eternal sleep in the Earth I have loved so well. Perhaps, after all, this is best.

One last request I earnestly make. I have heard my Mistress say, "When Blemie dies we must never have another dog. I love him so much that I could never love another dog." Now I would ask her for love of me, to have another. What I would like to feel is that, having once had me in the family, now she cannot live without a dog!! I have never had a narrow, jealous spirit. I have always held that most dogs are good (and one cat, the black one I have permitted to share the living room rug during the evenings, whose affections I have tolerated in a kindly spirit and in rare sentimental moods have reciprocated a trifle). Some dogs, of course, are better than others. Dalmations, naturally, as everyone knows, are best. So I suggest a Dalmation as my successor. He can hardly be as well bred, or as well mannered, or as distinguished and handsome as I was in my prime. My Master and Mistress must not ask the impossible. But he will do his best, I'm sure, and even his inevitable defects will help by comparison to keep my memory green. To him I bequeath my collar and leash, and my overcoat and raincoat, made to order in 1929 at Hermes, Paris. He can never wear them with the distinction I did, walking around Place' Verdome, or later along Park Avenue, all eyes fixed on me in admiration; but again I am sure he will do his utmost not to appear a mere gauche provincial dog. Here on the ranch, he may prove himself quite unworthy of comparison, in some respects. He will, I presume, come closer to jack-rabbits than I have been able to do in recent years. And for all his faults, I hereby wish him the happiness I know will be his in my old home.

One last word of farewell, Dear Master and Mistress. Whenever you visit my grave, say to yourselves with regret but also with happiness in your hearts, at the rememberance of my long happy life with you, "Here lies one who loved us and whom we loved." No matter how deep my sleep I shall hear you, and not all the power of death can keep my spirit from wagging a greatful tail!!

A Dog's Purpose, from a 4-year-old
(Authored by a vet, unknown to me, sent to me by my cousin Mike Connelly.)

Being a veterinarian, I had been called to examine a ten-year-old Irish Wolfhound named Belker. The dog's owners, Ron, his wife, Lisa, and their little boy, Shane, were all very attached to Belker, and they were hoping for a miracle.

I examined Belker and found he was dying of cancer. I told the family we couldn't do anything for Belker, and offered to perform the euthanasia procedure for the old dog in their home.

As we made arrangements, Ron and Lisa told me they thought it would be good for four-year-old Shane to observe the procedure. They felt as though Shane might learn something from the experience.

The next day, I felt the familiar catch in my throat as Belker's family surrounded him. Shane seemed so calm, petting the old dog for the last time, that I wondered if he understood what was going on. Within a few minutes, Belker slipped peacefully away. The little boy seemed to accept Belker's transition without any difficulty or confusion.

We sat together for a while after Belker's death, wondering aloud about the sad fact that animal lives are shorter than human lives. Shane, who had been listening quietly, piped up, "I know why."

Startled, we all turned to him. What came out of his mouth next stunned me. I'd never heard a more comforting explanation.

He said, “People are born so that they can learn how to live a good life -- like loving everybody all the time and being nice, right?" The four-year-old continued, “Well, dogs already know how to do that, so they don't have to stay as long."

Live simply. Love generously. Care deeply. Speak kindly. Leave the rest to God.

More wonders

If a dog was the teacher you would learn stuff like:

When loved ones come home, always run to greet them.

Never pass up the opportunity to go for a joyride.

Allow the experience of fresh air and the wind in your face to be pure ecstasy.

Take naps.

Stretch before rising.

Run, romp, and play daily.

Thrive on attention and let people touch you.

Avoid biting when a simple growl will do.

On warm days, stop to lie on your back on the grass.

On hot days, drink lots of water and lie under a shady tree.

When you're happy, dance around and wag your entire body.

Delight in the simple joy of a long walk.

Eat with gusto and enthusiasm. Stop when you have had enough.

Be loyal. Never pretend to be something you're not.

If what you want lies buried, dig until you find it.

When someone is having a bad day, be silent, sit close by and nuzzle them gently.
